Universal to Build

Universal plans to erect a $35,000 addition to its present exchange in the Film Building, Cincinnati. It will be a two-story brick and concrete structure.

FWC, Universal Dispute Moveover

No agreement regarding second run availability has been violated, a Universal official said this week, in the controversy with Fox West Coast regarding the Deanna Durbin picture, "Spring Parade." Charles P. Skouras, vice-president of FWC, said the film was not to be booked in any of the Fox West Coast houses.

"If it is all right for Fox West Coast to move over films from the Chinese and the State theatres, in Hollywood, to the United Artists and the Beverly Hills, then we consider it to be all right for Universal to play a move over date from the RKO Hillstreet and the Pantages, to the Hawaii theatre in that city. The prices of admission were not lowered," the Universal official said.

Boon Seen by Universal

It was also said that the arrangement suited Universal as the company believes that it can dispose of its pictures to coast independents at aggregate rentals greater than that which they would have received from the Skouras interests.

The picture is said to have been moved over by Universal to the Hawaii, one of the newer houses in Hollywood, after it was suddenly ordered to be withdrawn from the RKO Hillstreet and the Pantages theatres, at the request of RKO officials in New York, being replaced by "Too Many Girls," to give that picture the benefit of Thanksgiving.

Milroy Anderson, manager of the RKO Hillstreet, which books in unison with the Pantages, gave as a reason for withdrawing "Spring Parade" that "it wasn't holding up gross."

Charles Feldman, Universal exchange manager, said that the Hawaii booking was made "because we felt the picture should have had a longer first run and that it still had a great deal of box office stamina in it."

"Spring Parade" was on a bill with RKO's "Men Against the Sky," and had grossed an aggregate of $24,000 on its first week, with $12,300 against $7,000 average at the Pantages, and $11,700, against $6,500 average at the RKO Hillstreet, according to company officials.

Mr. Feldman said that no decision to sell the picture away from Fox West Coast has as yet been made.

Plan New Tax Code

The legislative council of Kansas is preparing a code for submission to the Kansas Legislature in January which provides for modernizing the levying and collection of taxes. The proposed levy would not affect present taxes on sales, income, gasoline, cigarettes or beer.

Acquires Sixth House

First theatre outside of Des Moines has been acquired by the Garbett Theatre Enterprises, Inc., in Marion, Ia., bringing to six number of theatres in the chain. Acquired was the Garden, formerly owned by A. J. Diebold, of Cedar Rapids. The sum of $20,000 will be spent to modernize the theatre and equipment.

Designate Salesman

Promotion of George Thawson, former assistant booker at the Denver exchange of Twentieth Century-Fox, to salesman, to succeed William Caldwell, resigned, has been announced. Howard Metzger succeeds Mr. Thawson.

N. Y. CENSOR BILL, $311,800 FOR 1940; CUTS ORDERED IN 111 FILMS

Licenses Issued After Revision for Six of Nine Rejected Pictures; Foreign Films Submitted Increase Over 1938-39

by DICK CONNERS
in Albany

The New York State Censor Board in the past year ordered 926 eliminations of scenes or dialogue in 111 motion pictures, it was disclosed, Wednesday, in the report of the Motion Picture Division of the State Education Department for 1939-40, as made public in Albany by Commissioner of Education Ernest Cole. In the previous year, 1,334 eliminations were ordered in 140 films.

There were nine pictures rejected entirely last year, and 24 the year before; of the nine 1939-40 rejections, six were finally approved after revision. Of the 24 rejections in 1938-39, six also were finally approved. In virtually all cases the pictures were so-called sex, hygiene or related subjects, most of them imports.

Part of the marked drop in eliminations in 1939-40 may be attributed to the fact that 1,762 films, both features and shorts, were reviewed last year, compared to the 1,920 reviewed the year before. Newsreels are not subject to the censoring laws.

Cost to Industry Increased

New York State's censorship bill to the motion picture industry for the year was $311,800. Since 1921 the industry has paid in $3,079,849.07. In 1938-39, when 158 more films were reviewed than in 1939-40, the gross reviewing income was $298,023. The increase in 1939-40 receipts, despite a drop in pictures submitted, is attributable to the fact that last year there were hundreds of reissuances, for a fee, of licenses for old films, the permits for which had expired. These films need not be resubmitted for examination.

New York is considered one of the key situations among the six active state boards in the U. S.—other boards operate in Kansas, Maryland, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Virginia. There are, in addition, scores of town and city official censor groups.

A surprising feature of the report was the 488 foreign-made films submitted for screening against 485 a year ago.

Since the state handles its revenues on a fiscal year basis ending June 30, the period in question covered by the report was from July 1, 1939 to June 30, 1940. The tax imposes three mills per original foot of film inspected. No charge is made for additional prints.

The statutory reasons for scene or dialogue eliminations were: indecent, 245; inhuman, 31; tending to incite to crime, 60; immoral or tending to corrupt morals, 501; sacrilegious, 89.

16mm. Films Stressed

Irwin Esmond, chief censor, stressed the increased use of 16 mm., including the forthcoming "slot machine pictures," pointing out in accordance with a legal opinion by the State Attorney General that 16 mm. films must be reviewed and licensed before exhibition "at any place of amusement for pay or in connection with any business in the State of New York."

The Motion Picture Division, Mr. Esmond said, is also charged with inspecting theatres or any place where motion picture films are exhibited, stored, kept or used, for the purpose of ascertaining whether such films have been licensed and that the license leader is displayed on the screen in accordance with the statute and that eliminations have been made pursuant to directions of the Division.

Work of the division, Mr. Esmond said, is more inclusive than the report would indicate, since producers' representatives in New York often confer with the Motion Picture Division prior to or at the time of license application, with constructive suggestions being made for the revision of pictures to relieve them of objections. Frequently, the Motion Picture Division director pointed out, those suggestions lead to the revision of pictures before the actual application.

Change Penn Censor Law?

Pennsylvania's censors may be forced to make public all eliminations they order from films. This would nullify their efforts, and is designed to embarrass them. Several newly elected members of the legislature have promised to sponsor such an amendment to the state censor law. They are motivated by the censors' recent banning of Paramount's "World in Flames" and RKO's "The Ramparts We Watch," both subsequently passed after removal of less than 100 feet for the latter, and no footage from the former. The bans raised much criticism against the censors.

The Philadelphia Motion Picture Forum, affiliated with the National Board of Review, last week unanimously criticized the state censors, via resolution.

Dr. Daniel Poling, pastor, told a luncheon meeting of the group that "Generally, pictures are better, and steadily better; but, there is still much corrective work to be done. Here again, eternal vigilance is the price not only of liberty, but of decency."

INDUSTRY CONTROL FOR DEFENSE, AIM OF BILL

Government Direction of All Industries Indicated in Bill Entered by Taft in Senate

by FRANCIS L. BURT in Washington

Government control of the motion picture is implied and control of all other industries indicated during the period of the national defense emergency, in a measure sought by Senator Robert A. Taft (Rep., Ohio), in a bill he introduced in Congress Friday, November 22nd, providing for the creation of a War Resources Administration to coordinate all industrial and procurement phases of the defense program.

The proposed board, to be composed of representatives of the departments and agencies engaged in the defense program and headed by an administrator to be appointed by the President, would supersede the present National Defense Advisory Commission.

Sees Need for Separate Board

That Commission, Senator Taft said, "is purely advisory and it is not perfectly clear whom the members are supposed to advise" and "while much good work and much progress have been possible under the present organization, the experience of past and present wars has proven the need for a separate war resources group under the leadership of one man empowered to cut across red tape and give his undivided attention to the one vast problem of industrial teamwork for defense."

No specific mention is made of any industry in the bill, but the administration would be empowered, among other things, both to formulate the basic policies for the mobilization of the economic and industrial resources of the country to meet the requirements of a major war and to make plans for the reduction of the activities of non-essential industries in time of war, or when war is imminent, and for their partial or total conversion to more useful war purposes.

The bill is designed to put into effect the industrial mobilization plan of 1939, developed by the joint Army-Navy planning board after years of study, and under which a definite place in the defense program is assigned to the motion picture and every other industry.

Films Hold Vital Position

The position of motion pictures in national defense already is being established rapidly, under Army and Navy sponsorship or supervision, direct, also, generally, in plans of the existing National Defense Advisory Commission, which the new War Board would replace.

The motion picture industry is now turning out, either directly, or in conjunction with Governmental forces, short subjects on subjects of defense, Army training, Americanism and patriotism and matters related thereto. Governmental participation for the most part to date has been through its U. S. Signal Corps, making training films with Hollywood technicians and writers who have been given Army commissions for the purpose. Also, motion picture cartoon map making is planned, using regular film animators.

Work will start immediately on production of a complete new program of Army training films, following approval of scripts Tuesday at a Hollywood meeting of the Industry's Defense Division production committee at which Y. Frank Freeman presided.

A new project is films for Navy training, and the MGM shorts department was given the work at its request. Production of films for the National Defense Advisory Committee was discussed.

"Drafting" of motion pictures is also underway for the entertainment of the new Army which the U. S. actually started to mobilize on Monday, with the arrival in camps of the first of this country's first peace-time draftees.

Move Toward Radio War-Time Control

Federal Government control of media of public expression in national emergency moved a step closer on Monday, the day the first peacetime draftees left their homes for army camps, when the Defense Communications Board, in Washington, sent invitations to scores of companies and organizations in all branches of communications, to name representatives to serve on the ten communication industry committees which are to serve in advisory capacities during the development of programs for war-time control of that field.

Included in the ten groups are two broadcasting committees, one for domestic and the other for international broadcasting, which will be concerned with studies of the physical aspects of broadcasting and the formulation of recommendations of such precautions, supplementary facilities and reallocations as may be desirable under foreseeable military conditions. The domestic committee is also to consider other broadcasting systems, including relay, FM, television, facsimile and experimental, and the work of both committees in all their respective fields is to include recommendations "for the speedy and efficacious use in time of military emergency of all necessary broadcasting facilities and communications services associated therewith."

The domestic broadcasting committee is expected to be one of the largest of the groups, with at least 17 members. So far, the only designations made to this committee are those of Lowell Mellett to represent the Office of Government Reports and Major Frank C. Meade as representative of the War Department ,and invitations to name representatives were sent by the board to the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, Columbia Broadcasting System, Federal Communications Commission, Federal Radio Education Committee, FM Broadcasters, Inc.; Finch Telecommunications, Inc.; Mutual Broadcasting Company, National Association of Broadcasters, National Broadcasting Company, National Independent Broadcasters, National Television Systems Committee, Postal Telegraph Company, State Department, U. S. Independent Telephone Association and Western Union Telegraph Company.

Because of the fewer organizations interested in that branch, the international broadcasting committee will be smaller, 11 members being contemplated in the board's present set-up. Already named to this group are Gerald C. Gross for the Federal Communications Commission, Nelson Rockefeller, Coordinator of Commercial and Cultural Relations Between the American Republics; Rear Admiral Stanford C. Hooper of the Navy Department, and Lowell Mellett of the Office of Government Reports. Invitations to name representatives were sent to the Columbia Broadcasting System, The Crosley Company, General Electric Company, National Broadcasting Company, State Department, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, and World Wide Broadcasting Corporation.

"Note of Dignity"

Kinematograph Weekly, of London, in its column by "The Stroller," issue of November 7, says:

"Martin Quigley has just completed 25 years in the service of the film industry, as editor-in-chief and publisher of the Motion Picture Herald. The American trade has rallied round him handsomely and made possible the publication of a huge issue of his paper, by tendering him their appreciation in the form of many laudatory advertisement pages.

"These pages strike a note of dignity which is frequently absent from those which are devoted to publicising pictures, and testify to the worth of a newspaper editor who has kept his ideals to the forefront in a business which tempts to place profit before principles.

"Among the many messages which the issue contains, I confess that I rank that of the C. E. A. president, Coun. H. P. E. Mears, among the best. It is not fulsome, but sets out M. Q.'s achievements in straightforward language, with emphasis on the gratitude of British exhibitors for the standards upheld in the picture world and the just consideration and presentation to the American public of British problems."

Theatre News Suspends

Theatre News, entertainment weekly, published at New Haven, for the past five years, with Jack Schaefer of the Journal-Courier as editor, has been discontinued. It is planned to print theatrical and radio news in a general semi-weekly soon to be published. The Jackson-owned newspapers in New Haven publish no local radio news or programs.

The Locust Street Theatre, operated by the Shuberts, is being prepared for films. This is the second legitimate theatre to be converted into a motion picture house. Recently William Goldman took over operation of the 2,000-seat Erlanger in the same city. A third theatre, the Shubert, is being considered by Mr. Goldman for conversion into a movie theatre.

THEATRE RECEIPTS ON INCREASE; WARNER NET REACHES $2,747,000

Paramount Plans to Refund Preferred Issue; U. S. and Ross Report Improving Attendance; Admission Tax at New High

Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., for the 53 weeks ended August 31st made a net profit of over $1,000,000 more than in the preceding year despite the fact that, on account of the foreign situation, the gross income was down about $1,700,000.

The net profit for the year which ended August 31, 1940, was $2,747,000, and for the same fiscal period of 1939 the total net was $1,740,000. In 1939 the earnings were eqquivalent to 36 cents per share of common stock and in the 1940 fiscal year to 68 cents.

The gross income in the 1940 period was $100,337,092 and costs and expenses were $61,225,499, some $700,000 more than in 1939. However, the funded debt was reduced by almost $5,000,000 and annual interest rates were cut $700,000 during the year.

Working assets were reported at $25,935,974 and current liabilities at $15,610,963. Total costs of sales and expense for the year were $88,680,544. Also in addition to the operating profit the company has a net credit to earned surplus in the amount of $85,811 and an increase of $75,135 in capital surplus which totaled $57,316,562.

On account of the war conditions the company decreased the ratio of foreign income to total income from 30 percent to 20 percent which resulted in additional amortization charges for the year of $727,724.

Paramount Refunding

Paramount is considering a plan to save about $550,000 annually in dividends on its first preferred stock by retiring the issue, according to Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee.

If the proposal is adopted Paramount would call in the $13,600,000 first preferred stock and pay it off at par plus dividends due at that time by using cash on hand and additional money obtained at less than the preferred rate. Paramount and subsidiaries have about $12,000,000 in cash in and non-consolidated subsidiaries have about $9,000,000 of cash in which Paramount has an equity of about 50 percent.

Funded debts of Paramount have been reduced from nearly $25,000,000 in 1935 to $10,500,000 and subsidiary funded debt from $20,058,000 to $13,249,000. First preferred stock amount to $24,998,000 in 1935.

Ross Reports Business Up

Ross Federal Service national theatre checking organization with headquarters in New York, announced this week that reports from its field offices "give strong indications that an improved general business condition throughout the nation is already being reflected in better motion picture attendance."

Among the reports cited were those from Milwaukee, which shows a rising index of employment and an indication that the customary seasonal slump at the boxoffice will not be felt this year with its usual strength; that from St. Louis, which shows an employment increase of 30% over last year and good theatre business; that from Charlotte, which states that government textile orders in the South are creating jobs and spending money; a report from Des Moines that public interest in pictures is currently greater than for some time past.

Motion Picture Daily this week reported that business over the Thanksgiving holiday period took a big spurt. Cities reporting business gains were Los Angeles, New York, Chicago, Dallas, Washington, Boston, Buffalo, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, Kansas City, Seattle, Atlanta, Baltimore, Albany and Providence.

Admission Tax Sets New High

A combination of improved business and a lower exemption brought Federal admission tax collections for October to a new high of $6,628,430, it was reported last week by the Internal Revenue Bureau.

The October collections were nearly $800,000 above the September revenue of $5,851,655 and very nearly four times the $1,727,931 received in October, 1939, the bureau announced.

During the first four months of operation under the reduced exemption collections were nearly three times what they were a year ago, totaling $18,537,345 against $6,627,905, and for the first ten months of the calendar year receipts ran to $29,705,117 against $15,783,133 for the corresponding period in 1939.

Topping $1,000,000 for the first time, receipts from the Third New York (Broadway) District reached $1,103,234 in October, compared with $936,486 in September and $277,256 in October, 1939, the report showed. Collections from theatre admissions, including season tickets, were $1,047,464 compared with $881,250 in September and $232,534 in October a year ago, it was stated.

Republic Business Up

Republic Pictures Corporation shows a 25 percent increase in gross business for 1940-1941 season, as compared with 1939-1940 season, according to J. R. Grainger, president. Should this increase continue, earnings are likely to exceed those of Consolidated Film Industries Corporation, which company owns approximately 48 percent of Republic Pictures Corporation, it was said.

Repayment of some part of loans, amounting to $4,000,000, made by Consolidated to Republic, should give some assurance of probable arrearage payment on Consolidated Film Preferred stock, it was reported.

SEC Reports No Changes

For the first time in a considerable period the Securities and Exchange Commission's semi-monthly summary of stock transactions of officers and directors listed no changes in holdings on the part of motion picture company executives.

Slight changes in stock holdings by two Columbia Broadcasting System officials, Leon Levy and Herbert V. Akerberg, were reported by the SEC.

UNCLE SAM'S ARMY COMPLAINING ON FILM CLEARANCE, ADMISSIONS

General Haskell, Commanding New York's 27th Division, Now Training in Alabama, Scores Clearance and Admissions

The United States Government, through the motion picture trust suit consent decree settlement, duly prescribed a manner and method by which theatre owners can seek relief from unfair, unreasonable or otherwise objectionable clearance. But apparently Uncle Sam's Army is not in the same position, the Generals of the new mobilization having already started to complain about film facilities.

At Fort McClellan, Alabama, Major Gen. William N. Haskell, commander of the New York 27th Division, disclosed that he was making an effort to bring current pictures to the camp at a ten-cent admission scale. At Camp Shelby, Miss., Major Gen. R. S. Beightler, commander of the Ohio 37th Division is complaining because motion picture theatres in nearby Hattiesburg were not permitted to operate on Sundays.

Distributors have no general policy for clearance covering theatres at Army camps. The individual exchange making the booking is expected to decide what clearance is "reasonable" with respect to local conditions. Usually clearance is worked out for the Army theatres just as it would be for regular houses.

Believes Prices Too High

General Haskell said he had written to the War Department at Washington pointing out that his "boys, brought up on Broadway," were not satisfied with films exhibited some 30 days after Anniston, six miles away, and some 60 days after New York City. He also said that he believed the price of 20 cents admission to the three post theatres, or 14 cents by coupon book was too high. He felt the fee should be 10 cents. Also he is considering free pictures, to be paid for out of profits of the post exchange. The situation was discussed with Major Gen. Lesley J. McNair, chief of staff of general hedaquarters.

First Lieutenant Hans Dendixen, in charge of the post theatres, reported that in the first four weeks of operation there were 21,316 admissions and a gross income of $3,488.

General Haskell said the fort, with 12,000 in his national guard division, and 3,000 of the regular army had a bigger motion picture audience than the town of Anniston with a population of 25,477. Shortly there will be a total of 20,000 stationed at the camp. An effort will be made to buy pictures directly instead of through the motion picture service maintained by the Adjutant General's office.

It was reported that the Army's film service is run by civilian employees directed by the adjutant general. Profits are returned to posts which have theatres for welfare work. Films at small posts, where no profit is made, are supported by the larger posts after the overhead and film costs are paid.

Concern over the ban against Sunday shows in the vicinity of Camp Shelby, Miss., was expressed this week by Major General R. S. Beightler, Sr., commanding general of the 37th (Ohio) Division, U. S. Army. General Beightler called a meeting of a special committee in charge of collecting funds to entertain the soldiers. About $25,000 already has been obtained.

6,000 HOUSEWIVES SELECT FILM TITLE

Six thousand housewives in 64 key cities in the United States have chosen the title "So Ends Our Night", in preference to the former title, "Flotsam", for the David L. Loew-Albert Lewin production starring Fredric March and Margaret Sullavan. The picture will be released by United Artists.

Synopses of the story were mailed to the housewives, together with suggested titles. Keynote of the replies favoring the selected title was that the women wanted romance and, since the Remarque novel upon which the picture is based spins a tale of love that could not be conquered by modern chaos, the chosen title best summed up the theme.

"But until such time as we may better expect to depend upon our recreational facilities," the Major General said, "we have to depend upon motion picture shows in Hattiesburg. The soldiers are granted leaves mostly on Saturdays and Sundays. The theatres are very crowded on Saturdays and since shows have been banned on Sundays the boys can only walk the streets. They should be off the streets and with young men and women of their own ages. I guess we will just have to provide our own entertainment on the week-ends and we are going to make an effort to organize a movement for recreational money among citizens of Hattiesburg."

Theatres in Hattiesburg endeavored to operate on Sunday after Camp Shelby became one of the most important concentration centers of the Deep South and did run on two Sabbaths in October at that time. Charges were filed in county court and four theatre managers were arrested and arraigned. One of these managers was recently fined $35. Quo warranto proceedings are now up in the circuit court. Motion pictures are shown on Sunday in an increasing number of towns and cities in Mississippi.

No Central Office

Unlike the Navy the Army has no one central office which handles all its film buying and booking. The United States Army Motion Picture Service has regional headquarters in Washington, New York, Atlanta, Dallas, St. Louis and Seattle where local directors buy and book films for army theatres within the six districts. The Army film service is run by civilians under the direction of the Army Adjutant General's office.

All personnel in the Army theatres, including the manager, are officers or enlisted men who received extra pay for the additional work. At present there are over a hundred theatres on army posts and more are planned. A film rental of from $10 to $25 is paid on each booking. "Reasonable" clearance is observed when the forts are near towns having theatres. However, the Film Service attempts to book pictures as soon as they can be made available.

Induction of the vast conscript training army is raising problems never before encountered by military officials in the shape of broadcasts from military camps.

War Department officials are trying hard to forget military traditions that the Army must keep aloof from civilian life, in an effort to soften the blow of compulsory training, which they are hopeful will be made a permanent thing, and are anxious to build up public interest in the Army. But they admit that broadcasts from military camps of the intimate life of the soldiers, as well as the athletic contests and other entertainments which are to be staged, is something new in their experience.

However, while there may be some little difficulties at first, it is expected that the problems of broadcasting will be worked out quickly and no unnecessary handicaps will be placed in the way of broadcasters seeking to air programs from the camps.

Spyros Skouras, National Theatres, has been named executive manager of the Greek War Relief Association, Inc., and spoke in Kansas City on Tuesday in connection with the drive for $10,000,000. A luncheon was held for the relief fund at the Hotel Muehlebach and on Tuesday evening Mr. Skouras was to speak over station KCMO in that city.

The headquarters of the national Greek relief association are in the Hecksher Building in New York City. Harold S. Vanderbilt is honorary chairman. George P. Skouras, Charles Skouras, Van Nomikos, Chicago theatre man, and others helped organize the group.

Blank Donates Ambulance

A. H. Blank, head of Tri-States Theatre Corporation, and Mrs. Blank have contributed $1,150 to the Red Cross for the purchase of an ambulance for service in England. Mr. Blank in making the donation to Walter St. John, chairman of the Des Moines war relief chapter, said the gift was made "in profound admiration of British courage."

Publicists Set War Rules

On Friday the Screen Publicists Guild executive council announced that a resolution clarifying the rights of members who may be conscripted or volunteer. While in the armed forces no member will have to pay dues or assessments to keep his standing, the Guild will consider that a leave of absence from the worker's former position has been granted and upon termination of the leave the member "shall resume his former position or an equal position at the current contract scale."

"Affiliated" Reserve Policy Set

Major Nathan Levinson, vice-chairman of the research council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, has been advised by the War Department that the Army has established a policy with reference to the calling of "affiliated" reserve officers to active duty, which indicates that all officers appointed directly from civil life to reserve units organized under the "affiliated plan" will not be called to extended active duty without their consent.

The Signal Corps Photographic Laboratory, GHQ, now being organized under the sponsorship of the Research Council, is being formed under the "affiliated plan" mentioned above.

The newsreel issues of November 22d, Friday of last week, carried a special two-minute subject on alien registration made by Warner Brothers in cooperation with the Department of Justice. Charles Boyer and Merle Oberon appear in the short and explain the purpose of registration and urge all aliens over 14 years of age to register before the time limit expires next month.

FILMS, RADIO, STORES COMPETING FOR DOMINANT TELEVISION POSITION

Paramount Affiliates To Operate Four Stations under New Permits; Store Groups in New York, Los Angeles Licensed

Motion picture, radio and department store interests seeking to become the dominant factor in television found themselves this week on about an equal basis, so far as the number of stations permits is concerned, following the action of the Federal Communications Commission in granting 10 additional television licenses.

Paramount up to the present has taken much more interest in television than the other major film companies. However Howard Hughes has appropriated $2,000,000 for experiments in adapting motion picture methods to television at his Hughes Tool Company stations to be constructed in Los Angeles and San Francisco.

The companies affiliated with Paramount have the greatest number of television station permits. The Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Paramount television affiliate, has a station nearing completion in New York City and has received a license for Washington. The Balaban and Katz station in Chicago atop the State Lake Theatre Building is under construction. In Los Angeles Paramount's Television Productions has received permission to set up a main station and two relay transmitters.

RCA-NBC To Have Four

The chief radio company combination in the television field has been RCA-NBC, with a station in New York, arrangements being made for a transmitter in Washington and a permit received also for Philadelphia. RCA also has an experimental station at Camden. On the west coast the Don Lee Broadcasting System, an affiliate of Mutual, has been active in television for many years. CBS has been experimenting with color television and has been granted permission to build a station in Chicago and in Los Angeles. It has one in New York City.

Other radio interests in television include the Philco Television and Radio Corporation which has a station operating in Philadelphia, and Zenith in Chicago. Farnsworth is doing experimental work at Fort Wayne, Ind. As is the General Electric Company in Albany. The Crosley Corporation has a permit for Cincinnati and the radio station, WCAU, for Philadelphia.

The department store companies were the most recent to obtain a number of television station licenses. Although the applications had been on file for some time the FCC delayed action until a member of such applications could be granted at one time.

The Bamberger Broadcasting Service, owner of WOR, was the first department store group to receive a television license. The recent licenses included permits for four other department store television stations. In New York the Metropolitan Television Corporation which has leased the top floor of the Hotel Pierre on Fifth Avenue for its main studio and transmitter is sponsored by Bloomingdale Bros. and Abraham & Straus department stores. In Los Angeles the May Department Stores and Leroy's Jewelers have received permits.

General Electric demonstrated two color television in Schenectady last weekend to members of the National Television Systems Committee which is endeavoring to agree on television standards to recommend to the FCC. George H. Payne, of the FCC, was present at the tests which were held during the ceremonies celebrating the opening of the General Electric FM radio station.

Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson, General Electric television engineer, explained the two color television method to the visitors. In the system a two-color, 24-inch revolving disk is set up in front of the inconoscope at the transmitting end and in front of the cathode ray tube at the receiver. It was reported that both disks were revolved at a uniform rate of 1,800 revolutions per minute. No other changes were made in the usual black and white television system, it was said.

CBS has been experimenting with three color television using disks in a similar manner but also a complicated system of scanning so that the three colors can be presented without objectionable flicker.

FM Television Tests Held

This week NBC has been transmitting a number of special FM sound tests over the W2XBS television station for the benefit of members of the National Television Systems Committee. FM sound was tested at long periods and then short five-minute tests were made, alternating FM with the regular AM transmission. It was said that the demonstrations were held to assist the committee in determining whether wide-band FM sound interfered with the television picture and to see if there was an improvement in picture quality due to the elimination of static. No announcement of the results of the tests will be made until the television industry committee makes its report to the FCC.

Balaban & Katz have asked the FCC to approve the antenna system and transmitter location selected for their new television station in Chicago which is being constructed under the direction of William C. Eddy.

The executive board of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage and Screen Employees & Moving Picture Machine Operators meeting in New Orleans last week were reported to have discussed the television situation and decided that the question needed further study.

The Travelers Broadcasting Service Corporation of Avon, Connecticut has withdrawn its application for a television station, according to an announcement of the FCC. It had requested permission for a station on the number 3 television channel with 1,000 watts power.

At the Institute of Radio Engineers' convention to be held in New York City January 9th-11th at the Hotel Pennsylvania television will be one of the subjects receiving chief consideration, it was reported.

W3XE, Philco's experimental television station in Philadelphia, has concluded an arrangement with the management of the Arena, Philadelphia sports center, for the televising of all ice hockey games to be played there this winter. In addition, Philco will televise the "Ice Follies of 1941" coming to the Arena in January and a roller skating derby scheduled for February. Negotiations have also begun for permission to televise the boxing and wrestling bouts conducted by outside promoters at the Arena. Philco has just concluded the televising of the University of Pennsylvania football games from Franklin Field. Although there are still only approximately 300 television receiving sets in the city, with most of them experimental sets at the homes of Philco engineers, Philco is providing more than 12 hours of television programs weekly from the studios apart from the outside pickups.

URGES LETTERS TO PRODUCERS

Moviegoers should send letters directly to producers, either praising pictures that they like or condemning films of which they disapprove, Mrs. J. Marion Reece said recently in addressing the Ivy Club of Bloomsburg, Pa. Mrs. Reece is chairman of motion pictures for the Pennsylvania Federation of Women's Clubs.

The speaker said "praise" letters for good pictures and "protest" letters against poor pictures had their effect upon producers and added that it was the duty of everyone to communicate their attitude. Only in this way, she continued, would better pictures be made.

ITINERANT FILM SHOWS RECEIVE NEW BACKING

Townsend Old Age Group Purchases DeVry Projectors; Pittsburgh Company Advertises

The itinerant film show movement has been given impetus on two sides. The film division of the national Townsend old age pension organization, which claims over 2,000,000 members in 12,500 clubs, has closed an initial deal with the DeVry company in Chicago for the purchase of 10 projectors. A company in Pittsburgh has been advertising in the press for "Ambitious Men—manage small movie circuits; six per cent commissions; $80-$175 monthly possible. Every day's payday; excellent future; car necessary."

In New York State, John J. Bennett, Jr., attorney general, recently ruled that all 16 mm. films and coin film machines were subject to the same censorship and licensing regulations as 35 mm. films when shown in any place of amusement at an admission charge or other compensation or in connection with any business establishment in the state.

Townsendites Seek Advertisers

The Townsend plan, according to Glen S. Wilson, in charge of the group's film activities, calls for the solicitation by local Townsend Club area leaders of the various merchants in his community to sponsor the showing of the films, with an advertising trailer (for which the merchants pay), which is used to defray the cost of renting the local school auditorium or large hall.

They have been using a number of industrial short subjects provided by International Harvester, General Motors, the Grace Lines and several of the larger steel companies. The show is free to Townsend Club members, but there are no restrictions for other than Townsend members.

Mr. Wilson said the purchase of at least 100 more projectors was contemplated. Each local Townsend leader has approximately 20 communities under his command. In addition to the industrial subjects, a few educational subjects have been purchased, Mr. Wilson said.

Patriotic subjects are also being shown as well as the subjects prepared under the Townsend plan in the Film Arts Studio in Milwaukee, which are used primarily as a means of getting the Townsend plan ideas over to the audience.

Dr. Francis E. Townsend and Senator Sheridan Downey of California, who is sponsoring Townsend legislation in the U. S. Senate, are also featured in a few short subjects, being interviewed and explaining the functions of the Townsend Plan.

The Pittsburgh advertisement carried the address, 519 State Theatre Building, Pittsburgh, Pa., the office of the Keystone State Amusement Circuits, Russell C. Roshon, general manager.

Included in the material sent to interested persons is a pamphlet on how to organize a movie circuit, catalogue of pictures available and application for service which must be filled out to include recent photograph, personal data on prospective candidate, references and data on possible show locations. It is not required that the applicant be a motion picture operator.

The film is non-inflammable stock.

According to the pamphlet, the pictures are available for regular shows in non-theatre towns, schools, churches, meeting halls and benefit shows. Also, the company supplies the 16 mm. projector and sound equipment, which weighs about 75 pounds, the feature films and shorts subjects, advertising heralds, trailers and tickets. In return they receive 40 per cent of the daily gross receipts.

Although each circuit operator is required to have at least six locations a week, there is another plan whereby those who cannot get spots for a weekly run can be serviced under a flat rental rate for four days, depending on the type of equipment used and the class of films scheduled. Service may be had as low as $17.50 per week for four days, which includes an Ampro, Model X equipment and film programs of the "B" and "C" classes, as listed in their catalogue with one "A" or "AA" picture per month. On the flat rental rate, operators are required to pay the first week's rental in advance and all future programs are shipped C. O. D.

The circuit operator must bear all transportation charges on sound equipment and films. The advertising herald, trailers and tickets are furnished only under the percentage plan with such accessories being provided by the operator under the flat rental basis.

Included in the features offered are 16 mm. films from Monogram, Grand National, RKO, Alliance, Progressive, Chesterfield, Castle Films, Imperial, Melody, Mascot, Spectrum. Personalities represented include Mickey Rooney, Tom Tyler, Johnny Mack Brown, Joe E. Brown, Ken Maynard, Ann Rutherford, Pinky Tomlin, Bobby Breen, Harry Carey, Ralph Morgan, James Dunn, Edward Everett Horton, Jeanette MacDonald, Boris Karloff and Jackie Cooper.

Under a special plan the company offers sound equipment and program for $15 per week to all new circuit managers.

Seek Minnesota Law

A bill which would prohibit the showing of 16 mm. pictures in taverns and clubs, as well as the banning of coin-in-the-slot film devices, will be sought in the Minnesota legislature by Allied Theatres of Northwest. Present plan calls for the introduction of such a measure when the lawmakers reconvene and is said to be the first organized campaign against such competition. Allied members claim 16 mm. pictures are hurting patronage in regular theatres.

New Projection Outfit

The Movie Mite Corporation in Kansas City has announced a new projection outfit, weighing 24 pounds and made of plastics to sell within a $150 price range. Forrest Calvin and William G. Wilson of the Calvin Company, makers of 16 mm. industrial and business film, head the Movie Mite Company and developed the equipment, which is to be used for projection of 16 mm. film. They said this week that they are ready to produce 2,000 of the outfits next year.

Monogram's New Series

Plans for a new series of four pictures, featuring the "East Side Boys," headed by Leo Gorcey, have been approved by W. Ray Johnson, Monogram president. Sam Katzman will be the producer.

Heads Kiwanis Club

Newly-elected president of the Kiwanis Club, Meriden, Conn., is Joseph G. Samartano, manager of the Palace Theatre.

Variety Clubs Reelect Officers, Make Plans

Four Variety Clubs throughout the country reported their activities during the past week. Two elected new officers; one held its annual charity ball; and the fourth was making plans for its annual affair.

In Omaha, Ted Mendenhall, Paramount exchange manager, was elected the chief barker for the Omaha Variety Club for 1941, succeeding Morris Cohn.

Other officers elected were Walter Green, first assistant; Sam Epstein, second assistant; M. L. Stern, treasurer, and Edward Shafton was reelected secretary.

Paul Short of National Screen Service in Dallas, Tex., was elected chief barker of the local Variety Club, succeeding Robert J. O'Donnell, who retired after five years.

Directors elected were: R. E. Griffith, Lynn Stocker, B. C. Gibson, Ted De Boer, James O. Cherry, William O'Donnell, Bert King, W. G. Underwood, Don Douglas and Jack Lutzer.

In Kansas City more than 2,500 people of the industry and public attended the annual Charity Ball at the Pla-Mor Hotel under the sponsorship of the local Variety Club.

In Philadelphia, the Variety Club of that city were making arrangements for their sixth annual Banquet to be held December 12th with Ben Bernie as master of ceremonies.

"ANTIDOTE ENTERTAINMENT" IS NEW HOLLYWOOD SLOGAN FOR WAR DAYS

70% of 137 Features, Comprising 27% of 1940-41 Programs, Fall in Comedy, Light Drama, Musical or Western Classes

Hollywood, currently and in the immediate future, sees itself as chief American purveyor of "antidote entertainment," the phrase implying the production community's desire to make its wares palatable to a population wearied of war news and war hysteria.

Indicative of the trend is the fact that of the 137 pictures released during the latter half of the current month or now before the cameras, editing or completed and awaiting release, 26, or 19 per cent, are comedies. Additionally, another 14 are comedy-dramas, in which the former elements is as much relied on for box office results as the more serious components. Musicals, westerns and light 'mellers' make up another 59 features.

For Quarter of Season

The 137 films analyzed constitute a quarter of the full season's quota of pictures, which generally runs between 500 and 550 films released by all companies, including those marketed on a state's rights basis. Used in the survey is the product of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount, Warners, RKO Radio, Columbia, Universal, United Artists, Monogram and Republic.

Next to the comedy classification, the greatest numbers are accounted for by the ever present melodramas and westerns, of which there are respectively 24 and 23 among the 10 primary producing and distributing companies, chiefly in the lower budgeted brackets. Dramas number 22 of the total.

In numerical order, other classifications consist of musical comedies, of which there are 12, detective-mysteries and historical subjects, each six, and fantasies and service pictures, two apiece.

Included as drama and comedy-drama, respectively, are two anti-Nazi films, "Flotsam" and "The Great Dictator." Not used in the survey are "Escape," released November 1st, "The Mortal Storm," or "Four Sons," both released last June. The two fantasies are the road-shown Disney "Fantasia" and Korda "Thief of Bagdad," the two service pictures MGM's "Flight Command" and Paramount's "I Wanted Wings."

While musical comedies number only 12 in the analysis, they bulk much larger, of course, in terms of the whole season's product, with MGM and Twentieth Century-Fox each accounting for at least eight such light subjects.

To collect a quota of 5,000 blankets for families made homeless in Great Britain's air raids, Oklahoma theatres operated by Griffith Amusement Company of Oklahoma City will conduct "blanket matinees".

Although the original deadline had been set for Sunday, November 17th, shortage of 1,500 blankets to fill the quota has resulted in an extension of the campaign. Old or new blankets will be the sole admission price for the matinees.

Barney Balaban Drive

The Tri-States Theatre Corporation, with headquarters in Des Moines, has launched a Thanksgiving-to-Christmas drive in honor of Barney Balaban's fifth anniversary as president of Paramount Pictures. Districts have been divided under supervision of Everett Cummings of Omaha; A. G. Stolte of Des Moines and Joe Kinsky of Davenport.

Selznick to Coast

David O. Selznick left New York Sunday night for the coast, stopping off at Chicago until Thursday, after an extended stay in the east. Prior to his departure he said he had no definite production plans but expected to decide on his next picture within two or three weeks following his arrival on the coast.

U. A. Sets New Product Plans; Universal Drive

Plotting of the future production course of United Artists, which admittedly may be shifted because of both foreign and domestic conditions, was under way this week in Hollywood by Murray Silverstone, company head, and the producers who contribute to its schedule.

At the annual stockholders meeting which concluded last Saturday, following reelection of officers, as previously reported, Mr. Silverstone was authorized to "discuss with our producers the possible effect of the government consent decree, to which we are not a party, and the effect of unsettled conditions abroad on our production plans and map out a program to meet the situations production-wise."

Representing the stockholders were George Bagnall, for Alexander Korda; Charles Schwartz, for Charles Chaplin; Lloyd Wright, for Mary Pickford, and James Mulvey, for Samuel Goldwyn. Ed Raftery, secretary of the corporation, also attended.

Asked concerning reports that the Fairbanks, Goldwyn and other interests in the company were about to change hands, Mr. Silverstone was emphatic in his denial.

"In fact," he said, "their interests were not even offered for sale." (Should an owner-member desire to sell his portion of the company, he must first make the offer to his partners.) He disclosed his appointment by the representatives of the owner-members as a "committee of one" to discuss future policy of the company with the producer-contributors to the program.

Announcement of the company's planned releases will come after the conferences with the contributing producers, Mr. Silverstone said.

"We can depend upon the foreign market for little or nothing. Our revenues must come almost wholly from the United States, due to disturbed foreign conditions," he said.

Monroe Greenthal, newly appointed advertising and publicity director for United Artists, left New York by plane for Hollywood to confer with Mr. Silverstone and other U. A. executives and producers.

Universal Sales Drive

William A. Scully, general sales manager of Universal, will be honored with a sales campaign from December 8th to May 10th, 1941. Matthew Fox and Milton Feld are acting captains of the western and eastern divisions, respectively.

Details of the drive were discussed last week-end at a district managers' meeting at the Hotel Astor, New York, at which Mr. Scully presided. Also present were: C. Cheever Cowdin, Nate J. Blumberg, F. A. McCarthy, William J. Heineman, Joseph H. Seidelman, Jules Lapidus, Dave Miller, Harry D. Graham, E. T. Gomersall, J. E. Garrison, and A. J. O'Keefe.

Also, Tom Mead, Dave Levy, B. B. Kreisler, F. T. Murray, J. J. Jordan, Louis Pollock, A. J. Sharick, Hank Linet and Morris Alin. Following the meeting, Mr. Scully left with Mr. Gomersall for Detroit. He will return within a week and, upon his return, will formulate plans for a new-season product conference in Hollywood.

Also leaving New York at the termination of the meeting were Eastern division manager McCarthy and Western division manager Heineman.

A two-day meeting of district managers and home office executives was scheduled for this week-end, November 30-December 1, by MGM, at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago.

FROM READERS

ON TAXATION OF "STUDENT TICKETS"

DEAR MR. QUIGLEY:

The writer notes with considerable interest the space given on page 20 of your November 16th issue to the problem of cut rate, or so-called students' tickets, and their relation to the new Defense Tax Laws.

I, for one, am grateful to know that your publication is taking sufficient interest in this problem to report activities of those who are making a sincere effort to bring about a better interpretation of the law, and hasten to advise that in my humble opinion you, and your publication, could do much good for the small exhibitor by taking up this fight and helping us bring about a ruling which would eliminate the necessity of collecting tax from children, who although over 12 are still in school, as well as from the CCC boys, who only have some three dollars a month to spend for such things as shows, cigarettes, etc.

As has been pointed out before, we know that the Government, when it properly understands the student tickets and special prices to CCC boys, will not be interested in seeing these two groups taxed. We also know that when this original law was passed back in 1915 or 1916, there was no such thing as student tickets or CCC boys.

As I have said before, we have never had a complaint in this theatre from adults when paying the defense tax; as a matter of fact, they are all mighty proud to have an opportunity to help. With the children and CCC boys it is a different story and in the opinion of the writer, they are entitled to the complaints which they are making. If they were only making complaints it wouldn't be so bad, but the fact remains that since we have had to collect four cents tax from these two groups of young people who previously were admitted for twenty cents, it has cut our atendance with these groups which normally were the supporting factor of the theatre, to such a point that for the past nine weeks we have been unable to hit the black.

I am confident, Mr. Quigley, that a survey will show that a great many theatres are affected to some extent with the same problem.

Showman

Cameras were rolling, this week, on the first of the Ernst Lubitsch pictures made in conjunction with Sol Lesser; the latter being head of Ernst Lubitsch Productions as of his own Principal Artists Productions, which made "Our Town" and will start shortly after the first of the year on "Strange Victory."

Called "That Uncertain Feeling," the Lubitsch picture will have a cast including Merle Oberon, Melvyn Douglas and Burgess Meredith, will be released under the Lesser deal with United Artists calling for the production of a maximum of three films a year for five years. Made a year and a half ago, the UA deal was the latest step in the Lesser film career, which covers a span of better than 35 years in production, distribution and exhibition.

The latter started him in the industry, for his father had run the Union Nickelodeon in San Francisco, so named because of the pro-union feeling in the locality at the time. In 1907 he entered distribution through the operation of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, which came to handle such product as "The Spoilers," "The Birth of a Nation," "Cabiria."

In 1918, Mr. Lesser inagurated one of the first, if not the first, of personal appearance tours, when he had George Beban appear on the stage during a sequence in "The Sign of the Rose." The picture would be dimmed out, the curtain raised, and Beban would finish the scene in person.

This was followed by use of the Mack Sennett Bathing Beauties in conjunction with showings of Sennett's "Yankee Doodle in Berlin," in 1919, in which year Annette Kellerman troupes were also made the subject of personal appearances.

The following year, with Mike and Abe Gore and Adolph Ramish, Lesser founded the West Coast Theatres, having joined First National with a franchise for the operation of the Criterion Theatre in Los Angeles. During the next five years, the circuit was built up to embrace 175 theatres, while Lesser, at the same time, entered production with such films as Jackie Coogan's "Peck's Bad Boy," "Oliver Twist," "Circus Days"; Baby Peggy Montgomery's "Captain January," and a group of Edgar Rice Burroughs and Harold Bell Wright stories.

In 1926, Lesser retired, started out on a two-year world cruise. But apparently what he saw couldn't compare to the sets he'd built, for less than a year later he was back, and on the day of his return had bought an interest in a downtown Los Angeles theatre. That interest has now grown into the Principal Theatres Circuit of 27 houses in California.

But again production cast its spell and in 1931 he re-entered the field, making a series of short subjects. Then followed six westerns with George O'Brien, in which the villain of the piece was "kidded," and a remake of "Peck's Bad Boy," this time with Jackie Cooper. All of these were released through Fox.

Making the first Bobby Breen picture on a gamble, without a distribution deal, Lesser ended with RKO taking the picture and six more, of which "Rainbow on the River" was the most successful.

Today, working with a staff which includes son Julian, whose training stems from Harvard Business School and Eastman Film, Lesser sees opportunity in the future, recalling that his own career, while made in part with the majors, was always, in his own words, "independent in operation."

Crawford's Next

"A Woman's Face," story of a woman's struggle to find beauty of mind and appearance, has been set as Joan Crawford's next MGM starring vehicle, with Melvyn Douglas, currently in "Third Finger, Left Hand," and Conrad Veidt, now appearing in "Escape," set for leading featured roles.

The picture is to be directed by George Cukor, who has just finished "The Philadelphia Story," and last directed Miss Crawford in "Susan and God." The producer will be Victor Saville, who made "Bittersweet," "Goodbye Mr. Chips" and "The Citadel."

Fire of unknown origin destroyed a scene dock and storage structure on Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's back lot in the Culver City studio early Saturday, November 23, before being brought under control. The loss is said to be inconsiderable, since the warehouse contained only seldom used scenery and the scene dock was regarded as obsolete. The property was insured. Neither current nor future production activity will be affected by the fire. One studio fireman and another employee were injured fighting the blaze.

WILLIAM DIETERLE will make "The Devil and Daniel Webster" as his first RKO production.

JAMES CAGNEY is next to appear in "The Bride Came C.O.D." for Warners.

CHARLES ROBERTS and EDWARD ELISCU are doing the screen play of "Sis Hopkins" at Republic.

ROBERT BUCKNER and ROBERT HUNT have been assigned to the screen play of "Captain Ulysses Smith" for Warners.

GEORGE SEATON has been signed to an MGM writing contract.

BARRY TRIVERS and ROBERT KENT are working on the screen play of "Bad Men of Missouri" at Warners.

OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND and GEORGE BRENT are set for the top roles in Warners' "Miss Wheelwright Discovers America."

JERRY CADY is writing the screen play of "Repent at Leisure" for RKO Radio.

RICHARD WALLACE will direct "A Girl's Best Friend Is Wall Street," Charles Rogers' production for Columbia.

RALPH BLOCK has been assigned to the screen play of "One Hour of Glory" by Warners.

Wayne Morris has been signed to a new term contract by Warner Brothers.

Smiley Burnette has returned to Hollywood, after making personal appearances at 73 one-night stands in 77 days.

Irma Wilson, who has appeared in several night club revues in New York, has reported to MGM for a part in "The Ziegfield Girl."

DISTRIBUTORS SET TWO MORE FILMS FOR ADVANCED ADMISSION PLAYING

"Arizona", "Philadelphia Story" To Be Sold on Special Basis; Holdovers for "Bitter Sweet" and "North West Mounted"

More features from the majors are playing or are to play pre-release engagements at advanced admissions, continuing the practice to realize more income from the domestic market, and to sell a picture to the utmost. The pictures are Columbia's "Arizona" and MGM's "Philadelphia Story."

The first picture, reported breaking records on first playdates since its opening in Tucson, Arizona, several weeks ago, is at advanced admissions in such dates, the company announced late last week. Opening in five theatres of Tucson, the picture stayed in the Rialto and State theatres of that city, breaking house figures. Opening on Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, at the Loew's Midland, Kansas City, the picture is said to have grossed three times more than the opening day of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," another of the company's hits. Another pre-release engagement was at the Orpheum, Phoenix, and more have been, and are being, set for Memphis, Providence and Philadelphia.

Increased Prices on "Story"

The office of William F. Rodgers, MGM general sales manager, in New York, this week confirmed reports that the company would ask increased admissions for its "Philadelphia Story" and give it the same type of test engagements received by "Boom Town." These runs would determine by their success at advanced prices whether such prices would be asked for the picture's first runs. It was expected the test engagements would begin on December 5th, and that the cities in which they would be held would be Rochester, Reading, Louisville, Providence, and Cincinnati. The picture's general release is January 10th.

Meanwhile one more exhibitor raised his voice against increased admissions. The new voice is that of Mort Singer, Chicago circuit operator. He said late last week, in that city, prior to departing for the Coast, that popular prices would draw more people.

The British War Relief Society will receive the proceeds of the second-run second world premiere of MGM's "Gone With the Wind" in the Loew's Grand Thetare, Atlanta, December 12th. Tickets will be $5 each.

Second Premiere for "Wind"

The ballyhoo attendant to the general release premiere of the picture will resemble that at the first run opening on that date last year, in the same city. Social and political luminaries of the city, and figures of the motion picture world will be at the theatre. Vivien Leigh, as Scarlett O'Hara, and Hattie McDaniel, as Mammy, are to reenact a scene from the picture, on the theatre stage, prior to the screening. A movie set will be specially built, and, it is expected, a motion picture director from Hollywood, will "direct."

Sales plans for the general release of the film are to be discussed by MGM field sales manager, early in December, probably in Chicago, it was said. The consent decree, recently signed, is seen as bearing on sales of the picture. The selling approach, too, will probably be different, as the company now appeals to a different type audience.

MGM will hold, for its "Flight Command," a "hemispheric opening," with simultaneous premieres in leading cities of four Western Hemisphere countries, on the night of December 17th, it disclosed this week. It will be the first such premiere. Cities in which will be the openings are Washington, Havana, Mexico City, and Toronto. The date was chosen because it is Pan-American Aviation Day, authorized by the President and established by a joint Congressional resolution. Loew's Capitol will house the Washington opening. The National Aeronautical Association will sponsor the premiere there. Twenty-one Latin-American countries, the U. S., and the Dominion of Canada, altogether, are observing the special day, which also marks the anniversary of the first flight of a heavier than air machine.

"Dictator" Deal Delayed

United Artists this week was reported holding out for higher prices for its Buenos Aires release of Charles Chaplin's "The Great Dictator." It is said to have rejected an offer by the Cine Plaza theatre, in that city, of approximately $33,300, as a guarantee, for an engagement during the Christmas holidays. This figure was obtained for the last Chaplin picture; and the understanding now is that UA wants more money.

Meanwhile, on Tuesday, the picture entered its seventh week at the Capitol Theatre, New York City, on an unreserved seat policy, the company rescinding its previous decision to "pull" the picture after six weeks. The present week is the final, at the theatre; but the picture remains at the Astor, same street, on a reserved seat basis.

Paramount's "North West Mounted Police," at the same time, is hanging up boxoffice records at the Paramount Theatre, New York City, this week being its fifth there, and it being the first time in the house's history that a picture has stayed that long.

In the month since its world premiere at Regina, Saskatchewan, the picture has been booked into more than 360 pre-release engagements, all at advanced admissions. General release has been set back to December 27th.

MGM's "Bitter Sweet," Noel Coward musical success, will be held over a second week, beginning Thursday, at the Radio City Music Hall, New York City, the theatre management announced early this week, after an estimated 90,000 persons had crowded the house in the four days ending Sunday night and beginning Thursday, November 21st. It was thought that, by this Thursday, some 135,000 persons will have seen the picture.

The film had been in 20 key cities, up to this week's beginning, and, according to MGM, on Friday, November 22d, had done as much as 397 per cent over normal business in some. Towns in which it did over 300 per cent normal business included Baltimore, Cleveland, Dayton, Louisville, Richmond, New York, Wilmington, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Atlanta, and Canton.

Twentieth Century-Fox's "Tin Pan Alley" contributed to a Thanksgiving Day business record at New York City's Roxy Theatre. On that day, 23,900 persons saw the film.

RKO's "You'll Find Out" in Thanksgiving Day openings in 20 situations topped the receipts of any of the company's films to play the respective houses since its "Gunga Din," two years ago. At the Palace, Albany, the gross on that day was the best in four years.

Warner Brothers, "The Letter" is making more money in the first 12 key city situations reporting, than the company's money-maker last year, "The Old Maid," in which Bette Davis also starred. The company's New York home offices indicated the picture would probably be one of its best money-gainers. The picture has been doing capacity business at the Strand, also in that situation gaining more than "The Old Maid"; and its second week there is assured.

A preview of the film, before its Strand opening, was held Wednesday, November 20th, at the Beacon Theatre, Manhattan, for the benefit of the Visiting Nurse Service of the Henry Street Settlement. About 2,700 persons attended. The Skouras chain donated the theatre.

Warners will take newspapermen, stars, and studio and home office officials from East and West coasts next mid-month, for the premiere of its "Santa Fe Trail" in Santa Fe, New Mexico. Travel will probably be by train. The opening will have a three day celebration, from December 13th to 15th, in Santa Fe. It is expected the New York train will pick up, en route, the governors of Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Missouri, and Colorado, and that the West Coast train will give a lift to Arizona's governor.

The Capitol is set to play United Artists "Son of Monte Cristo," in mid-December. This will be the first UA picture at the theatre for several years, with the exception of "The Great Dictator," engagement of which is special.

SHOWMANSHIP IN A DEPARTMENT STORE

A novel promotional stunt has been effectively introduced by a St. Louis department store. J. Walter Goldstein and Hans Kolmar of the Stix, Baer & Fuller, Inc., advertising staff, financed Pete French, amateur explorer and naturalist, in a recent expedition into the Dutch Guinea jungles, providing him with 16mm. color motion picture equipment.

Mr. French returned with 5,000 feet which was put together for a picture entitled "Breaking Jungle Trails". The store placed Mr. French under contract and he shows the 25-minute film to various club luncheons, dinners and meetings—with a closing institutional plug. Arrangements are underway for another project soon. The current project cost the store $5,000.

Buys Voco Interest

Jack Votion has purchased the interest of his partner, Sam Coslow, in Voco Productions, Inc., and with it the contract of Lum and Abner. Mr. Votion will carry on with the company, which has a commitment with RKO to make a second Lum and Abner film by next Spring.

Musical for Jane Withers

Twentieth Century-Fox will star Jane Withers, in her first all-musical, her next vehicle. It will be titled "Coast to Coast," and will be written by Ethel Hill, produced by Milton Sperling.

"Excellent...the essence of box-office material. Exciting entertainment for any audience!"

The Philadelphia Story

(MGM)

Screened Stage Success

In stepping across the country from the play boards of the New York City Schubert Theatre to the sound sets of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, this Phillip Barry comedy of upper crust manners and marriages has emerged with its smooth and smart format still slick and sophisticated and with the double advantage of having as two points in the stellar triangle, Cary Grant and James Stewart. As the third member of lead trio, Katharine Hepburn comes back to the screen after a protracted exile bringing with her well rehearsed familiarity with the part which she originated and perfected during the long run of the play.

Outstanding in the assisting ensemble are Ruth Hussey, smooth and competent as a photographer for a snoop magazine, Roland Young, whose manifestation of a morning after the night before reaction is a high spot, and Virginia Weidler, who can make through voice and expression the simple salutation of "How do you do" one of the highlights of the comic proceedings.

The story is slight but undertoned with a slim stratum of seriousness. Concerned with a family of socialites who reside in the monied Main Line belt out of Philadelphia, a district given best seller publicity by "Kitty Foyle," the tale gets its tag line from an assignment given newshawk "Connor" and his camera assistant, "Liz Imbrie" to crash the precincts of the "Lord" domain on the occasion of daughter "Tracy's" second marriage. The pair, whose relationship to each other is vaguely tabulated on the screen, whereas in the stage version the connection was much more vividly defined as extra-marital, is sponsored by "Tracy's" first husband, "Haven." He is returning to save the social register reputation of his former in-laws from the threats of the publisher, "Kidd," to give page spread notice to the illicit love of "Papa Lord" for a Russian dancer unless his paper's representatives are admitted to the "Lord-Kittredge" nuptials.

The family reacts strongly to the trio's visitation, especially "Tracy" and little sister, "Dinah," who put on a grand show of well bred behavior to impress the company. The domestic scene becomes more hilarious and complicated by the drafting of "Uncle Willie" to play the absent father's role and by recruiting the real parent for the avuncular assignment, when the male head of the household suddenly appears. In the course of these position mix-ups, the real reason for the breakup of "Tracy's" first marriage is revealed as a personality deficiency on the part of the girl. Thanks to some alcoholic ministrations and the drinking companionship of "O'Connor," "Tracy" begins to realize her frigid failings and starts to defrost. When her fiance catches the pair returning from an early morning swim (engaged in au naturel when described in the stage play), the worst is suspected, although it was really all in good, clean fun. At the moment of the marriage, "Tracy" dismisses "Kittredge" and substitutes "Haven" for a repeat nuptial and on this circular note the "Story" ends.

Dr. Kildare's Crisis

(MGM)

Clinical Comedy

Emphasizing the realism of the hospital where crotchety "Dr. Gillespie" and young "Dr. Kildare" hold forth, the film delves rather deeply into the clinical side for its plot. The young brother of "Nurse Lamont" is suspected of epilepsy by "Dr. Kildare," "Nurse Lamont" refuses to continue with her plans to marry the physician because of the possibility that she, too, is afflicted, but "Dr. Gillespie" solves the problem by proving that it is an old head injury causing the youth's aberrations.

Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore and Laraine Day again portray their familiar roles, with Robert Young listed on the main title as "Guest Star," playing the role of the nurse's brother. Other cast regulars seen are Nat Pendleton, Walter Kingsford, Alma Kruger, Nell Craig, Frank Orth, Marie Blake and Horace MacMahon.

Harold S. Bucquet directed from a screenplay by Harry Rusking and Willis Goldbeck, the latter writing the original story with Max Brand, who created the characters.

Comedy is supplied throughout the piece to leaven the discussions of the hereditary nature of epilepsy, the possible issue of the marriage of the physician and the nurse, the dangers confronting them if she develops the disease.

Charter Pilot

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy Melodrama

Executive producer Sol M. Wurtzel, director Eugene Forde and the writers of "Charter Pilot" packed all the comedy and thrills in this 20th Century-Fox film that the running time and the budget afforded. It is a story of the fight of two airlines to obtain the gold conveying contract from a Honduras mine. Woven into that is the comedy love story of a noted flier and a woman radio writer-producer who dramatizes his adventures.

Lloyd Nolan enacts the role of the aviator, with Lynn Bari as the radio figure. Arleen Whelan, George Montgomery, Hobart Cavanaugh, Henry Victor, Etta McDaniel, Andrew Tombes, Charles Wilson and Chick Chandler.

Stanley Rauh and Lester Ziffren adapted the story by J. Robert Bren and Norman Houston, and built genuine excitement into the script. The climax takes place during the fight between two aviators while riding in a plane over dangerous mountains.

Always a Bride

(First National)

Comedy of Young Love

Some spectators of this mild moment of young love may be sidetracked from the consideration of the story's main thesis by some extraneous musings over the outcome of the recent national election. In order to keep his bride by his side, a situation endangered by the threats of his in-laws to remove the girl to their own home unless the husband finds a job, the boy in the case embarks upon a successful political race for a mayoralty post by conducting a campaign that outlines the reasons for not voting for him. The arguments include an appeal for honest government to oust the crooked, intrenched boss rule and for lowering of tax assessments. The tactics are successful; the lad wins a close race and his home and wife are safe.

The boy-girl combination is handled by the youthful and good looking team of Rosemary Lane and George Reeves. John Eldredge, as a rich and stuffy suitor, Virginia Brissac and Francis Pierlot, as the bride's bickering parents and Oscar O'Shea as the bill paying uncle of the groom provide some comic support as back-

Here Comes the Navy

(Warner Brothers)

Cagney vs. O'Brien Reissue

The times today being what they are, Warners has brought out from film vaults an early James Cagney vs. Pat O'Brien screen bout orginally released in 1934. What was originally intended as a comedy brawl between the star contestants as staged against a naval and aviation ring, now becomes material for patriotic preparedness promotion. The reproduction stands up remarkably well with the print and the "says you—says me" repartee still is good, fresh entertainment. About the only date marks are the fashions of the female players and the erstwhile slimness of Mr. O'Brien. Frank McHugh, as a sailor-son bent on buying his mother a new pair of false teeth, is capital fun as sea dog pal.

The first appearance of the production received critical appraisal in the HERALD for July 7, 1934. The comedy pairs Cagney as "Chesty," who joins the navy for the non-patriotic purpose of revenge against Mr. O'Brien as "Biff," a chief petty officer. The lads had begun to feud when "Biff" not only steals "Chesty's" girl from him at a local dance but flattens the gentleman as well. The conflict becomes more bitter when "Chesty" begins to romance "Biff's" sister, "Dorothy." Although cited for bravery while the fleet was engaged in naval maneuvers, "Chesty" gets a transfer to the crew of a dirigible. When the airship tries to land, "Biff," as one of the ground squad is carried off the ground and is rescued by "Chesty." The lads are reconciled, "Chesty" is married and promoted.

Action shots of naval training and fleet participation are predominant and timely.

Ellery Queen, Master Detective

(Columbia)

Detective Mystery

Producer Larry Darmour here provides showmen a filmization of the subject matter which radio and book audiences have shown liking for in a measure suggesting prosperity for the series. To Ralph Bellamy has been given the job of materializing the personality of the detective, Ellery Queen, and Margaret Lindsay that of portraying the girl associate. Exploitation designed to tap the ranks of radio and book fans is indicated.

Scene of the story chosen for start of the series is a health resort operated by a physical culturist found dead by violence following diagnosis by medical men pronouncing him victim of an incurable malady. Suicide would be plausible save that no weapon is found. Many are suspected of the murder, but the girl whose finger prints are found is known to the audience to be innocent. The detective arrives at solution of the problem by the processes of deduction which he has utilized on the air and in print.

Production by R. C. Flothow and direction by Kurt Neuman set the series off on a plane which previewers interpreted as promising success for the series.

Law and Order

(Universal)

Western Melodrama

Combining action and romance, with the action dominant, Universal brings to the screen another in the Johnny Mack Brown series of Western melodramas with Fuzzy Knight continuing in the capacity of assistant to the justice seeking cowboy and Nell O'Day lending the romantic interest to the picture.

The screen play, adapted from a novel by W. R. Burnett, presents the star of the picture as a crusading marshal who finds his reputation for restoring law and order to outlaw-ridden towns has preceded him to the once peaceful town of Rhyolite. At first he declines to operate in the capacity of a law enforcing officer but later realizes that to save the lives and property of the local citizenry he must aid. With the help of Miss O'Day and Fuzzy Knight and backed by the few remaining law-abiding citizens of the town the outlaws are driven from the territory. In this, as in many of the other modern Western productions, musical renditions are prominent with Fuzzy Knight singing "Those Happy Days," the Notables Quartet harmonizing "Ride 'em Cowboy" and Miss O'Day giving her appealing rendition of "Oklahoma's Oke With Me."

Take Me Back to Oklahoma

(Monogram)

Western Melodrama

Bob Wills and his Playboys, cowboy band with semi-weekly radio coverage of the nation via NBC, is featured both onstage as a musical aggregation and in the action as actors in this Tex Ritter vehicle, augmenting exploitability of the attraction. They perform eight numbers, Ritter participating in some of them.

Seventeenth film in the Ritter series and produced, it is announced, on a larger budget than any of its predecessors, the picture has more strength of story than most of them without loss in the riding, shooting and fighting departments. Nub of the narrative is a plot to gain control of a stagecoach line owned by a young woman, the outlaws shooting the drivers and wrecking the coaches until outwitted by the hero in a stagecoach race which has as stake the state franchise. This episode packs punch and thrill.

The Man of the Hour

(Trio Films)

Maurice Chevalier in French

Maurice Chevalier, now in his home land, has not been given here a starring vehicle as well dressed and technically tailored as were manufactured for his American appearances. However, despite the production failings of inferior lighting and sound recording, he retains his charm and his stock in trade tricks of ebullient energy, wide grins and vocalization mannerisms.

The story, being French, is spicy in spots and quite critical of hero worshipping human nature. Julien Duvivier, previously caustic in "Carnet de Bal" and "End of Day", extracts some wry implications from the script which he co-authored with Charles Spaak, composer of the more polished, Grand Illusion.

When "Mona Talia," the rage of the Parisian theatres is near death because of a stage accident, her life is saved by a blood transfusion from "Alfred Boulard," a hospital electrical worker. The actress adopts her blood donor as her dramatic protegee and with her encouragement he becomes the idol of Paris. However, when "Boulard" is lulled to sleep by his mother and thus fails to climb to the boudoir of his imaginative patroness, the acress turns against him and he loses his popularity with the public. In the meantime, his neighborhood love has had her pretty head turned by the blandishments of the husband of the stage siren. But, the pair is returned to their senses and former feeling for each other when M. Chevalier pauses in a music hall turn to talk sense to the young people on life, love and the theatre.

An afternoon audience of good proportions viewed the picture at the 55th Street Playhouse, a small New York City theatre that specializes in screening French films, and seemed to be appreciative of the comic implications of the picture.—J. F. C.

The Kiss of Fire

(Hakim Brothers)

Parisian Romance

With the importation of French productions rapidly dwindling Hakim Brothers have brought to this country "The Kiss of Fire" produced in Paris just prior to the outbreak of hostilities. Noticeable throughout the production is the Gallic touch for handling delicate situations upon which the picture has been built.

Directed by Auguste Genin and adapted to the screen by Auguste Bailley, a theme of flirtation and deceit has been woven through the picture. Viviane Romance in the starring role of "Lolita," a flirtatious siren whose irrational plan of romantic conquests disharmonizes and detours the normal course of life for the three men with whom she comes in contact, ofttimes lends comedy as well as romance to the picture. Michel Simon, remembered by the audiences of this country for his important portrayals in "The End of the Day," "Port of Shadows," and other French film successes, returns in this as the gullible and lonely suitor who believes the siren's love to be sincere but who is double-crossed by the girl and his best friend played by Tino Rossi, French singer of some renown in that country. A supporting role is handled by Dalio, whose romantic affairs with the girl keep him in constant fear of his life.

The story is very much for adult consumption.

Reviewed at the Little Carnegie theatre in New York where an afternoon audience comprised of mostly women enjoyed the antics and affairs of the cast.—G. S.

Director of production, A. Gargour. Running time, 83 minutes. Release date, November 19, 1940. Adult audience classification.

Among Human Wolves

(Film Alliance)

Espionage Melodrama

Imported from England "Among Human Wolves" is based on a novel "Lone Wolves" by Charles Robert Dumas and concerns the work of the British Intelligence department in counteracting the espionage activities carried on by the German spy system in England and France prior to the current international situation.

Directed by John Baxter the story deals with an espionage agent and his pretty assistant assigned by the British government to uncover and expose the operations of the enemy in England. The girl falls in love with the young German scientist but nevertheless accomplishes her aim and gets possession of his plans at the cost of their love.

Heading the cast are Basil Radford and Silvia St. Claire as the espionage agents, Peter Gawthorne and Thorley Walters as "General Von Reimer" and "Max," respectively, as the enemy agents who suffer the loss of their plans and formulas through the romantic blindness of the younger man. The story itself contains enough material to supply interest to the audience but in its transposition to the screen much of the adventure and excitement has been subdued and the romantic angle emphasized. Though the picture is supposed to be of a recent vintage the photography and production would class it in a more dated era.

In the Bank

(King of Comedy)

Chaplin Reissue

Sprinkled freely with lusty laughs and hokum, albeit with the early Charlie Chaplin pantomimic magic, "In the Bank," the second in a series of reissues, released by the King of Comedy Corporation, of New York, still carries power in spite of its age. The film, itself, may be dated but the comedy is not. Sound effects, recently dubbed in, add to its hilarity. The film was optically "stretched" so that it runs at regulation sound speed.—Running time, 14 minutes.

Re-make "Father and Son"

John Litel, Frieda Inescourt and Billy Dawson have been cast by Warners, on the West Coast, in a re-make of "Father and Son."

Morgan a Director

Republic has promoted William Morgan, former film editor of "Hit Parade," and other leading films to director. His first assignment is "Bowery Boy."

Will Book Stage Plays

Whenever available, stage players will replace first run pictures at the Columbia, Alliance, Ohio, according to Ray Wallace, manager. The plays would be booked one or two days a week.

RKO's Boston Theatre has restored a policy of tabloid musical shows, with one feature and news reels.

45 STORIES, BOOKS, STAGE PLAYS BOUGHT IN OCTOBER BY PRODUCERS

Paramount Acquires Hemingway's "For Whom the Bells Toll"; MGM To Remake "Bad Man", with Wallace Beery

Hollywood producers during the month of October acquired for future production 45 properties. Of these 29 were originally stories, five were produced and unproduced stage plays, and the remainder were books, one newspaper comic strip to be used as a basis of a serialized melodrama purchased by Republic, one musical composition, the title of which will be used for another in the series using popular songs as themes for pictures for production at Universal, and one film originally based on the play "Bad Man" by Porter Emerson produced as a motion picture by Paramount some years ago and acquired during the past month by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as a vehicle for Wallace Beery.

Hemingway Book Bought

Highlight of the October purchases was the acquisition of Ernest Hemingway's new novel, "For Whom the Bells Toll," concerning the recent civil war in Spain. Acquired by Paramount for an estimated $150,000. Gary Cooper, who rose to stardom in "Farewell to Arms" by the same author and produced by Paramount in 1932, will have the starring role in the picturization of the new novel. The price paid for the book startled Hollywood producers since there is an unwritten law, with only a few exceptions, of exceeding a figure of $50,000 for a novel.

According to the contract Paramount paid Mr. Hemingway $100,000 for the property, agreeing to an additional 10 cents a copy for each volume sold up to 500,000. On the day the agreement was signed 100,000 copies had been sold, making the down payment $110,000, the amount set by the author when the book was first offered for film purchase.

October Story Purchases

Story purchases for October with all available credits follow:

ADOPTED DAUGHTER, Earl Baldwin's original story acquired by Warners.

ALIBI AT MIDNIGHT, an original story by George Carleton Brown purchased by Republic for early production.

ANGEL ON EARTH, an original story by Hope Ross acquired by Republic.

AT NIGHT THEY PART, Ulrich Steindorff's original acquired by Warners.

BAD MAN, a play by Porter Emerson made into a motion picture some years ago by Paramount. The screen rights have been purchased by MGM to again produce the picture with Wallace Beery in the starring role.

BOMB SHELTER, Ben Markson's original story about the current international situation acquired by Warners.

BOWERY BOY, an original story by Sam Fuller acquired by Republic as a vehicle for Dennis O'Keefe and Jimmy Lydon. William Morgan will direct.

BRIDGE OF SAN LUIS REY, a novel by Thornton Wilder acquired from MGM, who owned the screen rights, by Herman Weisman for production in either Mexico or Hollywood.

BUCHAREST BALLERINA MURDERS, THE, a novel by F. Van Wyck Mason inspired by the ballet corp in the Radio City Music Hall. The screen rights to the book have been purchased by Fox.

MORE TROUBLE BREWING OVER NEW PLAY PACT

Warners Reported Entering New Objections to the Terms of the Peace Settlement

The peace settlement between the stage and the motion picture industry, which returned Hollywood financing to Broadway plays, was hardly one week old, last week, when new trouble began brewing. Warner Brothers, which, before the split of stage and films, two years ago, was the outstanding play supporter of Hollywood, is reportedly entering brand new objections to the new film-backing pact.

The document, first complete copies of which began circulating this week, embraced as participants the Dramatists Guild and the League of New York Theatres, besides the film producers, and, basically, prescribes the manner and method by which a film company can back a Broadway play before its opening. The film companies, however, are not signatories to the pact.

Play Support Withdrawn

Warners now has withdrawn its financial support from the play Hot Nocturne, it is understood, but at the company's home office, in New York, officials would not discuss the matter. Elsewhere it was reported that the provisions of the new pact to which the company is opposed, relate to the maximum amount that might be paid for film rights to a play, also to the pact's formula for a film producer withdrawing as the backer of the play.

Under the terms of the accord, a ceiling of $200,000 has been set on the amount that a film company is expected to pay for film rights, above which further payments would be made from profits.

The minimum basic agreement "for the licensing of motion picture rights to financial backers of plays," as released for publication this week, is sub-divided into nine sections as follows:

Article I: Scope of the Agreement
Article II: The Production of the Play
Article III: The Author's Obligation and Privileges
Article IV: Backer's Obligations and Privileges
Article V: Closing the Play
Article VI: Payment for Picture Rights
Article VII: Special Concessions
Article VIII: Arbitration
Article IX: Amendments

The agreement is unique in that it is first time that an arrangement has been made by which motion picture companies are enabled to purchase film rights before Broadway openings.

The motion picture companies are not supposed to signing the agreement at this time. They only sign an individual agreement when and if they are ready to back a play and want to enter into such an accord with the Dramatists' Guild and the League of New York Theatres, a managers' organization, it was explained. Highlights of the various sections follow:

If two managers decline to produce the film company's sponsored play, the latter may then employ their own producer.

The backer agrees to pay all expenses incurred in the out-of-town tryouts.

The profits of the manager from the production shall be placed in a special reserve fund, which shall be maintained at not less than $10,000 and shall be used for the production and operation of the play on the road, etc.

The manager has the right to decide within the first 15 weeks of the plays's run in New York, whether to send the play out on a road tour.

Defines Film Rights

Where the play is wholly financed by the backer, the manager shall receive no less than 15 per cent of the money paid by the backer for the film rights.

In the event the backer decides to withdraw his financial support of a play before abiding by the stipulated terms of the agreement, then no motion picture rights shall accrue to the film company and sums advanced by the backer shall be retained.

The contract licensing motion picture rights to the backer provides that the motion picture to be made from the play may not be released before the end of the theatrical season, ending May 31st of each year.

It may be arranged in the individual agreement, however, that if the film-backed play runs 21 months in New York, the backer may either release the film within three months or receive all sums paid to date by the backer, for the motion picture rights.

Formula for closing a play provides that the manager may suspend production in New York City at the end of the first, second, third or fourth week, provided the percentages of operating expenses fall below the following: First Week, 50 per cent; Second Week, 75 per cent; Third and Fourth Weeks, 100 per cent. Thereafter, the manager may not close a play unless the gross receipts, shall, for three calendar weeks, fall below operating expenses.

Sliding Scale

The manager may close the road tour or tours, at the discretion of the Permanent Board, to be set up under the agreement, when it is shown that the enterprise is unprofitable.

The author must be given at least one week's notice of the intention to close a play, however, even after four weeks run have elapsed.

Payments of upwards of $15,000 within the first three weeks of the run by the backer are provided.

The agreement further provides for a sliding scale of weekly payments for the movie rights during the run of the play, based upon the gross receipts.

Motion picture rights will not accrue to the backer unless the play actually opens in New York or plays 12 consecutive weeks on the road.

The backer may waive his motion picture rights to the play by so notifying the author and manager within two weeks of opening.

If the play first opens outside of Manhattan and runs three consecutive weeks and it continues beyond the third week, the backer may still relinquish his motion picture rights by notifying the author and manager.

An Arbitration Board

A ceiling of $200,000 is placed upon the amount the backer may be expected to pay for film rights; further payments to be made at the rate of 50 per cent of the weekly profits of the play.

The Guild is empowered to appoint a Concessions Committee, consisting of three members of the Guild and three alternates, to consider requests for the waiving or modification of certain provisions of the agreement whenever warranted by circumstances.

A Permanent Board of Arbitrators, known as the Permanent Board is set up to settle disputes which arise under the accord. It shall consist of one member of the Guild, one member of the League, and a third representing the motion picture companies.

The signatories are obligated to settle all disputes, not covered by the agreement, through arbitration under rules of the American Arbitration Association. The Guild would appoint two arbitrators, the managers, one arbitrator, and the backer, one arbitrator. The arbitrators shall have the power to fix damages against any party to the individual agreement.

The agreement may be amended at any time by the signatories. Although not stipulated, the agreement is for one year.

STUDIOS REOPEN NEGOTIATIONS ON WAGES, HOURS WITH 10,000 WORKERS

Monday Set for First Meeting on Union Demands; Reclassification of Workers under Wages Hours-Act Concerned

Hollywood's studio craft unions on Monday will reopen negotiations on a basic agreement with the producers, reached last fall when Willie Bioff was their leader, and since, they claim, observed only in outline and not in the clauses which provided that producers subsequently negotiate individual adjustments with locals.

The Monday conferences will also have the effect of making the basic contract and subsequent negotiations with locals conform to the standards of the U. S. Wages and Hours Act, especially as to the re-classifications of workers which the act's administration arrived at in Washington some months ago.

Casey Meets Representatives

The negotiations are the result of a meeting Tuesday, in Hollywood, between Pat Casey, producers' labor contact, and representatives of eight of the ten International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees studio unions, led by Harold V. Smith, Alliance officer. Mr. Smith formally demanded that matters held in abeyance since the 1939 negotiations be now discussed. The two unions not represented at the meeting were the Photographers Local 659, and the Laboratory Technicians' union.

The formal presentation of demands followed a letter previously delivered to Mr. Casey, and in the same vein. This letter had said, in part, that it was "the beginning of steps to determine the reason for delays in starting negotiations, and the lack of cooperation in adjusting complaints." It added that many of the matters which the unions wished to discuss affected the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Mr. Casey last Tuesday replied he wanted the unions to state their demands specifically and formally, and that he would then set a meeting date.

The agreements reached last year in basis between the unions, representing 10,000 studio employees, and the producers, were effective for five years, conditional, however, the unions last week pointed out, upon the producers negotiating further contracts with locals.

Expected to be discussed Monday are reclassification of workers, exemptions and non-exemptions from the Wage-Hours Act, overtime for key men making over the wage scale, overtime and other adjustments for individual locals.

Overtime Pay Due Workers

Mr. Smith said that about 3,000 of the 10,000 workers had overtime pay due them for work during the past two years. He added that some men had claims ranging from $700 to $1,000. Part of his statement read: "We reserve the right to resume negotiations due to any unforeseen contingencies."

E. M. Cocking, regional Wages and Hours Administration officer stationed at Los Angeles, continued work on a report on classifications of workers in studios, after visiting several and observing workers in their tasks. He is expected to hold hearings on the reclassifications in the film industry of that area, shortly. Producers and workers will be allowed to protest rulings, he advised.

Meanwhile, in New York, final signature was still awaited on the closed shop pact between the American Guild of Variety Artists, "vaudeville" performers' union, and the large circuits, governing the New York houses with stage shows, and intended as a pattern for a closed shop contract applying to the rest of the country, was still awaited this week. Details were settled months ago. Rumors have had theatre officials balking weekly at signing because of the illness of some of their number, the uncertain union standing of some AGVA members, and the financial condition of AGVA. The latter recently was put in control of a special committee of the Four A's, which superseded the AGVA board.

The New York unit of the Screen Publicists Guild, attempting to secure from the National Labor Relations Board a certification as the bargaining agency for the home offices of the major film companies in that city, on Tuesday night voted approval on the terms of the closed shop contracts it expects to obtain. Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

Camera Units Feuding

In Hollywood, the IATSE, and the American Society of Cinematographers are again feuding, after the Alliance officials declared on Monday that their members must resign from the ASC. On the same day, Herbert Aller, business representative of the Studio Photographers Local 659, the Alliance unit, arrived in that city from New Orleans, where the American Federation of Labor has been convening. He announced he talked there with George Browne, president of the IATSE, and that the organization would not grant a separate charter to the ASC, but would instead enforce the jurisdiction it claims over all camera work.

The ill feeling between the two organizations stems back to 1933. The camera men struck at the time and the ASC obtained a bargaining contract.

Photographers Obtain Agreements

The ASC pact still has several years to run. In the meantime, Local 659 photographers have obtained agreements covering all camera work except that of first cameramen. Work of these is still the ASC's field.

The Screen Office Employees Guild was designated by the National Labor Relations Board, in Washington, last week, as the sole collective bargaining agency for the office and clerical workers of the Columbia, RKO, Universal, Republic, Loew's, Walter Wanger, and Hal Roach studios. Nine hundred and nine of 950 votes, in recent studio elections, were for the guild. However, employees of the Twentieth Century Fox studio chose the Twentieth Century Fox Studio Employees Guild.

Anthony Baslicado has been named president of the projectionists' local, 273, of the New Haven territory. Other new officers are Matthew Kennedy, business agent, reelected for the sixth year; Nick Villano, vice-president; Ernest De Grosse, secretary; Edward Boppert, treasurer; Myron Wheaton and John Griffiths, Jr., will serve on the executive board. Contracts for the territory, which expired earlier this Fall, have not yet been renewed.

Licensing Moves Delayed

The Pittsburgh City Council has tabled, indefinitely, an ordinance to license all 16 mm operators. The action follows a mass protest from civic, educational, scientific, and recreational organizations. Lawrence Katz, IATSE agent, introduced the measure.

President and business manager, respectively, for the new season, of the Chicago Film Exchange Employees Union, are Sam Lamasky, of Columbia, George Busch, of RKO.

The jurisdictional arguments between the unions of actors and musicians seem endless.

On Friday, the American Guild of Musical Artists was to appeal in the New York Supreme Court's Appellate Division, against New York Supreme Court Justice Aron Steuer's order of last Tuesday, vacating a stay against the American Federation of Musicians. New York Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora granted that stay August 29th. It foiled the intention of James Caesar Petrillo, so-called "czar" of the American Federation of Musicians, to use pressure upon the employers of instrumentalist guild members (such as Jascha Heifetz, Efrem Zimbalist, and the like) and came after he had warned such musicians in late August, to join his federation "or else."

On Wednesday, November 20th, lawyers for both sides in effect temporarily reversed Justice Steuer's vacation of Justice Pecora's stay. They signed a "status quo" stipulation, pending the decision of the Appellate Division, on the guild appeal. Conditions remain for the while as they have been since August 29th. The stipulation was made only a few hours after Mr. Petrillo, after being apprised of the ruling favorable to his cause, declared he would immediately notify all manufacturers of records, producers of radio programs, managers of concert halls, motion picture producers, and stage impresarios that if they employed instrumentalist members of the guild not possessing a federation card, AFM musicians would strike.

Henry Friedman, New York lawyer, signed for the federation; Henry Jaffe, for the guild. Concurring in the stipulation was Samuel Seabury, also counsel for Mr. Petrillo and the federation.

The guild board met last Wednesday morning, with no action disclosed. However, it was reported that, in anticipation of the day, a few weeks hence, when the conflict may break out, the guild may resume its efforts to have a concert or a series of such, to raise fighting funds. Noted instrumentalists would appear in such concerts, to be held, it was said, in a large New York theatre.

AFM Jurisdiction Over Musicians

Last Wednesday, in the hiatus between Mr. Petrillo's dictum that war would begin immediately, and the peace stipulation by the lawyers, the guild was so expectant that a concert by Mr. Heifetz with the Detroit Symphony in that city Thursday evening, November 21st, would be interrupted by a musicians' walkout, that it had an attorney ready to accompany the artist.

Mr. Petrillo contends that the AFM American Federation of Labor charter gives it jurisdiction over all musicians. Mr. Lawrence Tibbett, president of the AGMA, has noted that it, too, is an AFL union and that it was formed in 1937, without objection from the AFM.

FIND LOOPHOLE IN PASS BAN

A ban on passes, placed in effect by several downtown San Francisco screen theatres for special pictures, has aroused the ire of city officials. In retaliation, they have unearthed a 1909 statute, long in disuse, which states that any responsible city official has the right to enter, at any time, any building used for theatrical purposes. So far, the city moguls haven't invoked the law.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Sistrom at Work

At long last physical production has started on the new RKO-Radio film "The Saint's Vacation," which producer William Sistrom is making at Denham Studios.

Leslie Fenton has arrived here from Hollywood and is now at work directing the picture.

Adapted from the Leslie Charteris' story, "The Saint's Vacation," sixth in a successful series of "Saint" pictures, has as its leading players Hugh Sinclair and Sally Gray. Meanwhile, Sistrom says that he is going ahead with plans for the remainder of his line-up and "A Gift to His Majesty," on which it is claimed preparations are well ahead of schedule.

These two pictures, as with future RKO-Radio British subjects, are to be made for the world market and not for purely Quota purposes.

At Teddington, thanks to the activities of the studio "spotters," no time has been lost upon the Warner Brothers First National opus "An Empire Was Built." Thorold Dickinson is directing this, first of three top budget pictures to be made at Teddington, and which is written around the life of Disraeli.

John Gielgud, one of Britain's romantic actors, has the leading role as Disraeli, whilst Diana Wynyard plays the part of his wife. Queen Victoria's latest screen appearance is this time in the hands—and features—of British actress Fay Compton.

One of the sets at Teddington built for the film represents the House of Commons and 250 extras help to give the sequence realism.

Gielgud's role as Disraeli covers the major part of his career, the actor starting as a young man and ending as the aged Earl of Beaconsfield.

Shaw and Davidson On Empire Business

Virtual tribute is paid to the documentary field by the recent departure for distant fields of two pioneer producer directors.

Alexander Shaw has left for India, where he will take up a post as honorary adviser on film matters to the Indian Government.

Now, J. D. Davidson, documentary film director, has gone to Canada to assist the Government there in the production of propaganda films. Davidson was one of the original members of the film section of the Empire Marketing Board and later joined the G.P.O. Film Unit.

Both men have been associated here with The Strand Film Company.

Corfield Forms Own Company

John Corfield, founder of British National Pictures, has resigned from the managing directorship of that company and has formed a new unit known as John Corfield Productions Limited. It will enter into a contract with British National to produce a series of films, distribution of which will be through Anglo-American.

Meanwhile British National is reorganizing into a series of producer units, of which the new company is one and the recently formed John Baxter Unit another.

Work has again begun at Welwyn Studios, with Associated British, under producer Walter Mycroft. The film now on the floor there is "Spring Meeting," in which Sarah Churchill, Nova Pilbean and Basil Sidney have the more important roles.

Among companies currently in production, in spite of the sustained aerial warfare on London, are British Films Limited, who are making a comedy and a series of shorts.

The comedy is "Fine Feathers," in which Andrew Buchanan, who wrote it, is directing, and leads are played by Jeanne de Casalis and Aubrey Mallalieu. The film will be released by British Lion.

Also active in Piccadilly Productions, producer and director of which is G. Pattinson Knight. A series of shorts is being made for General Film Distributors' release.

Hay Resumes Cap and Gown

With Will Hay, Britain's "schoolmaster comedian," once again wearing his "mortar board" and gown, Ealing Studios, where Hay is playing the leading role in "Murder at St. Michael's," with Marcel Varnel directing, has, so to speak, been transformed into a juvenile academy. Crowds of schoolboy actors crowd the set all day long and are in charge of a foster mother, Valerie Glynne.

The "spotter" system is operating at Ealing Studios under the paternal eye of Ernest Marlow. Marlow declares that the only casualties brought about by the air war have been rice puddings left in the ovens while the kitchen staff was taking shelter.

First film to be made by Albert Cavalcanti for Ealing Studios, with which he has recently become associated, will be tentatively titled "Portrait of a British Foreman," story of which is being written by author J. B. Priestley.

Another subject on the Ealing roster will be "Leave Train," by the author of "Convoy."

Sirens Speed Work At Shepherds Bush

Sirens have speeded up production at Shepherds Bush Studios of Gaumont-British-Gainsborough, where two films are currently on the floor. "Kipps," the Twentieth Century Productions Ltd. film for release by 20th Century-Fox, and "The Ghost Train," to be handled here by General Film Distributors.

Playing the lead in "The Ghost Train," which has, of course, been made as a film twice previously, silent and talkie, is radio-vaudeville comedian Arthur (Big Hearted) Askey, with his team mate Richard (Stinker) Murdoch, also teamed for the screen.

A special part has been written for "Stinker," that of a chance acquaintance on the train who assists Askey in solving the murder.

The screen version is by Val Guest and Marriott Edgar. Walter Forde directs. Others in the cast include Herbert Lomas, Kathleen Harrison, Morland Graham, Peter Murray Hill and Linden Travers.

An extract from the log book of Joe Glaister, chief "spotter" and, to quote the production's publicity department, "head man on the studio sky-line," gives some indication of the operations of the system in film production:

"10:30. Air Raid Warning.

"Enemy aircraft spotted approaching from the S.E. 20 strong. Flying very high and in a direct line with the studio. Internal warning given. Duration 20 minutes. Duration of public warning two hours."

Elsewhere in the studio the Twentieth Century production of H. G. Wells' "Kipps" approaches its later stages, with Michael Redgrave in the title role and Diana Wynyard as the feminine lead.

Here only ten hours have been lost on account of air raids and the film with six weeks of shooting already in the can has registered 140 scenes and 25,000 feet of exposed negative.

Build Complete Shopping Street

A complete shopping street allegedly in Folkestone, etat 1906, has been built to occupy the whole of No. 4 stage. Among the props used was a horse bus, built in 1880, which once plied from Camberwell Green, London, and on which still appear the original fare panel and advertisers' bills, including the Pears' Soap "Bubbles" poster.

Exteriors have been shot on "Kipps" in Wiltshire and elsewhere. With Folkestone itself now occupied with sterner matters, exteriors for this town have been taken at the Royal Crescent at Bath. The village of New Romney, also one of the hot spots of Britain's South East coast, will be represented by the Wiltshire Tudor village of Laycock.

The aerial attack on London did not prevent producer Paul Soskin from finishing work on "Quiet Wedding" virtually to schedule and well under budget. A process of weekly revision of script with the eyes of producer Soskin and director Anthony Asquith on the ensuing seven days helped to keep the shooting up to schedule.

Dillon Damen, one of the industry's better known publicists, previously in charge of the publicity activities of Warner Bros. and Columbia, has taken over the press and publicity affairs of Mr. Soskin.

Quintuplet Bills Plague Industry In Buenos Aires

by N. BRUSKI
in Buenos Aires

Before the end of November it is expected a number of measures will have been agreed upon, to be put into effect next season, forming the basis for an agreement to meet current problems in the local trade as a result of the international situation. A number of meetings have been held between the local representatives of American companies and a committee formed by exhibitors. The discussion centered on several changes to be drawn up and submitted to the Exhibitors Association and to all American distributors for approval. Methods to increase public interest in motion pictures as well as a limitation of features on one program—some cinemas show as many as five feature films in one show—are under careful study.

To Increase Seating Capacity

A 40 per cent increase in seating capacity in motion picture theatres located in the central district of the city of Buenos Aires, which at the end of 1939 totalled 34,000 seats, is envisioned for the beginning of 1941 as the result of an expected municipal bylaw relaxing restrictions on the number of seats permissible in each theatre, which is expected to provide another 6,000 seats and the building of eight new theatres with a seating capacity of 10,200, equalling a 40 per cent increase. The total is divided among the following theatres: Normandie, 1,500; Sarmiento, 1,300; Trocadero, 1,600; Mundial, 550; Cineac, 550; new theatre owned by Coll, Di Fiore and Gatti, yet unnamed, 2,500; another new theatre to be built by F. Reich, 1,600; another new theatre to be built by A. Roca, 600.

U. A. Convention Held

Walter Gould, foreign sales executive of United Artists, came to Buenos Aires for the United Artists South American convention held in this city from October 22 to 24, and presided over the sessions, assisted by Guy P. Morgan, managing director of the company in Argentina, and Samuel Seidelman, supervisor of the company's central department.

During the convention study was devoted to current problems, to conditions in the various Latin American countries with a view to higher receipts from each region, and to the study of preferences of the various publics and how American films could satisfy these tastes.

The convention brought delegates from all South America, including Victor J. Schochet, managing director in Peru; Enrique Baez, managing director in Brazil; Racine Guimaraes, Sao Paulo (Brazil), manager; W. Marino, Porto Alegree (Brazil), manager; Bernardo Glucksmann, Uruguayan representative; Jorge Suarez, managing director in Chile.

Pampa Film Reorganizes

The local producing company, Pampa Film, until now in rather a bad financial strait, announced recently a capital reorganization, on the basis of a merger with Ariston Film Internacional, on the following bases:

J. Hubermann, director and owner of Ariston Film Internacional, is to provide 300,000 Argentine pesos for the financing of two films. For each picture filmed $150,000 will be replaced. At the head of the production will remain, as until now, Oleagrio F. Ferrando, director and owner of Pampa Film, who is to place at the disposal of Ariston his studios, located in the northern suburb of Martinez. The exclusive distribution and marketing of the films produced will be in the sole charge of Ariston Film Internacional, headed by J. Hubermann, and the two branches of the new enterprise—production and distribution—will remain as far as possible independent, with no other contact than the controlling of the capital involved.

Executives of Ariston Film Internacional will include, in addition to Mr. Hubermann, J. Gamsie as director general and Juan Carlos Mendez as sales manager.

SUNDAY SHOWS ON BROADWAY, AIMED TO TAP MOVIE AUDIENCES

12 of 19 Shows Open under New Equity Ruling; Film Theatres Find Crowd Stimulus Benefits the Box Offices

Sunday performances of legitimate shows returned to New York's Broadway, last Sunday, with little fanfare, and after many attempts, and, on Monday morning, stage managers and producers appraised the policy, concluding generally, that more publicity and advertising be used to apprise the public of the new policy. This marks Broadway film theatres' first Sunday stage competition in years.

Also, while some of the stage declared they were attracting what otherwise is a motion picture-going public in the Broadway area, and while all in the legitimate theatre field have generally conceded this is the type audience which the new policy is intended to attract, the owners and managers of Broadway's film theatres reported overwhelmingly good business at their theatres, rather than the opposite, and seemed generally in accord with the idea of Sunday evening legitimate attractions, believing that whatever brings people to any part of Broadway will benefit all of Broadway.

Allowed by Equity Ruling

Actors Equity recently agreed to allow its members to perform in Sunday shows, at the normal rate of pay, thus reversing an actors' stand of more than 20 years, against Sunday boards. When, after much pressure from labor unions seeking to enlarge the working week, and from theatre managers seeking to gain a part of the public which throngs Broadway on Sunday evening, the New York State "blue laws" were modified to 1935, to permit Sunday performances of legitimate productions, Equity at the time maintained its opposition—an opposition created by its desire to assure actors a certain amount of leisure per week. In the Fall of 1935, Equity, acceding somewhat to the prevailing sentiment, voted to allow participation of its members in shows on Sunday, but stated they would have to receive two-eighths of a week's salary for each such performance. This ruling was also adopted by the stagehands' union. The effect was to discourage all but a few shows on the disputed evening.

However, theatre managers continued pressure, and Equity, mollified this year by the written promises of the stagehands' and musicians' unions to agree to normal pay on Sunday if Equity agreed, in the face of "continued bad conditions in the theatre," in the words of this month's issue of the Equity magazine, and with the possibility of a seven day actors' working week forbidden, in any event, by state law, to a trial season of Sunday shows without extra pay to June 1, 1941. The agreement was made after a referendum of members counted on November 1st.

Of the 784 ballots cast by senior members, only 116 were opposed to the idea, Equity disclosed. Junior members voted, and, though their votes were not effective in the above total, Equity declares the trend of opinion paralleled that among senior members.

Twelve of 19 shows in New York played on Sunday evening. Two of them are classified as hits: "Hellzapoppin" and "The Man Who Came to Dinner."

James F. Reilly, executive secretary of the League of New York Theatres, toured the shows open Sunday evening, and said Monday morning he was "agreeably surprised." He added that reports of receipts indicated the shows far from the failure many had predicted they would be be on that evening.

Generally, the shows which ran that evening were closed Monday or Tuesday evening, conforming to the state law fordidding seven days' work for an actor without 24 consecutive hours' rest.

It was said the shows did their best business with the cheaper seats. However, prices were not reduced, in spite of the demand that they should be, from persons who point out that the motion picture-going crowd is not accustomed to paying a $3.30 or $4.40 top.

Tickets selling for $1.10 and 55 cents were readily bought. Orchestra seats at $3.30 and similar prices, were not filled. The ticket brokers, who sell seats at 50- and 75-cent premiums, were open, but did little business.

Business Better Than Average

Comparing notes, theatre managers agreed Sunday evening's business was better than the average Monday evening's, and that many of the persons who appeared at the boxoffice were newcomers.

Among the shows open Sunday evening were, in addition to the two hits mentioned, "Beverly Hills," at the Fulton; "George Washington Slept Here," at the Lyceum; "Johnny Belinda," at the Belasco; "Separate Rooms," at the Plymouth; "Blind Alley," at the Windsor; "It Happened on Ice," at the Center; "Tobacco Road," at the Forrest; "Charley's Aunt," at the Cort; and "Kind Lady," at the Playhouse. The latter two gave charity performances. "It Happened on Ice" is not under Equity's jurisdiction.

Equity magazine this month editorialized: "The greatest chance for success of the new policy lies in a real effort to popularize cheaper seats."

"The crowds for which they (the theatre managers) have been competing, and of which they have so often and wishfully spoken," it said, "are essentially motion picture patrons. . . . They have been accustomed to paying about a dollar, and not more than a dollar and a half, for their seats. Equity does not think a great many of them are able, or willing, to pay more."

The magazine remarked that the motion pictures, for the amount mentioned, have given their customers a great deal and, "more than that, these people have been made to feel welcome. If the patrons do not get this from the legitimate theatres, Equity declared, "they are going to miss it, perhaps resent it.

No Opposition from Exhibitors

Operators of Broadway's large first run film houses viewed the new policy of Sunday shows in New York's legitimate theatres favorably, a consensus on Monday established. Big problem of the large film theatres on Sunday night has been to attract people from the suburbs and neighborhoods—Sunday night usually being a good neighborhood movie theatre night. Noting better than usual business Sunday, evidently attributable to the Thanksgiving Day weekend, and more money flowing this year because of government policies, the film theatres of the Broadway sector also feel that whatever will attract people to their sector, even if it be a theoretical competitor, will benefit all in that sector.

Irving Lesser, manager of the Roxy Theatre, which played Twentieth Century-Fox's "Tin Pan Alley," put it this way:

"Anything that brings people to Broadway is going to help us. It'll promote more interest in the area, these legitimate shows. After all, the legitimate theatre is part of Broadway. He added that his theatre on Sunday, night and day, did very well.

Irving Windisch, handling public relations for the Warner Brothers' Strand Theatre, concurred with this view, also noting that his house had had one of its biggest Sundays and that this was estimated after comparing boxoffice records of other Bette Davis pictures on Sunday evenings at the theatre, with the gross established by the present feature, "The Letter."

At the Rialto Theatre, is was said that business on Sunday was better than one week ago. Monogram's "The Ape," with Boris Karloff, played at the theatre.

He added that patrons of the Rialto would, probably not be prospects for the legitimate theatre, noting that the latter would draw from the ranks of people attending the larger theatres and paying from $1.50 to $2 for admissions.

At the Music Hall, Fred Lynch, director of publicity and advertising, said the Sunday legitimate theatre shows had no effect on attendance Sunday night. "We did a very large business, beginning Thursday, with the opening of 'Bitter Sweet,'" he said. "In other words, we did the usual large Thanksgiving Day weekend business. It certainly was above average."

Mr. Lynch also said the Center Theatre, playing a stage attraction, "It Happend On Ice," not under Equity control, did better than average business that evening.

Ben Serkowitch, publicity and advertising manager of the Capitol Theatre, which, on Tuesday began the seventh week of Charles Chaplin's "The Great Dictator," looked at the record sheet Monday morning, anxious, also, to ascertain what effect the legitimate theatre competition would have. He found no effect. He added: "We did, in fact, a whale of a business. The theatre was virtually filled. And I noted, too, that practically all of the other houses did capacity business also."

Mr. Serkowitch thinks the legitimate theatre activity will help film houses.

EQUITY RULING FOR NEW YORK ONLY

Equity's attitude toward Sunday shows, and its recent waiver of extra pay demands for such, applies only to New York City. In other cities in which Sunday performances were customary or legal up to May of 1924, Equity members are allowed to play at the normal rate of pay. Also, according to the same ruling, in cities where such performances were not customary or legal up to that time members are not required to play without Equity consent, nor do changes in law or custom of such cities since that time affect Equity's stand. Among large cities, Sunday performances are legal in Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, St. Louis, Minnesota, and Detroit; illegal in Philadelphia, Boston, and Atlanta.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Columbia

BLONDIE HAS SERVANT TROUBLE: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—Exceptionally good. Best "Blondie" for some time. Good comedy.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANDY HARDY MEETS DEBUTANTE: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—A good Hardy Family picture which did not do any extra business. Running time, 87 minutes. Played November 4-6.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

HENRY GOES ARIZONA: Frank Morgan, Virginia Weidler—This feature seemed weak entertainment for the adults but the children enjoyed it. With the good cast in this feature it should have been better entertainment. Played on same program with Paramount's "Opened by Mistake." Running time, 60 minutes. Played November 7-9.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

HULLABALOO: Frank Morgan, Billie Burke—Not a big picture but lots of entertaining music and comedy. Business was fair. Running time, 65 minutes. Played November 17-18.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MORTAL STORM, THE: James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan, Irene Rich, Robert Young, Bonita Granville—We did quite well with this picture, although it was quite old and is of a type that is poorly patronized here. Excellent acting and the popularity of the book make up for the disadvantage of its theme. Anti-Nazi films are agreed with but not enjoyed here as generally my patrons claim they come for entertainment purely. However, this is the exception that proves the rule. It was enjoyed and well attended. Running time, 100 minutes. Played November 7-8.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

NEW MOON: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Mary Boland—This picture was fairly good but has not done the business expected of it. Eddy and MacDonald sing very good and, of course, without them the picture would be valueless. Running time, 100 minutes. Played November 10-11.—Pearce Parkhurst, Larcom Theatre, Beverly Mass., General patronage.

PRIDE AND PREJUDICE: Laurence Olivier, Greer Garson, Maureen O'Sullivan, Mary Boland, Edna May Oliver—I wondered what this would do as it is a class picture and very much inclined on the talkative side. They seemed to like it and a fairly good crowd turned out for it. I haven't heard anything against it and quite a lot in favor of it so my earlier thoughts were incorrect. I didn't expect to be proud of the results so I must have been prejudiced. Whether the college or the picture, itself, was responsible, we actually had an overage of thirteen cents to pay above our guarantee. Not bad!!! Not bad!!! Running time, 118 minutes. Played November 15-16. —W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

STRIKE UP THE BAND: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Larry Nunn, June Preisser, Ann Shoemaker, Paul Whiteman and His Orchestra—Better in all ways than "Babes in Arms." It has what it takes for any audience. Miss Garland is maturing and is a better actress than in her former pictures. She is getting the art of timing in her songs. And here is to one swell little star, Larry Nunn, who as the unrequited lover of Judy, had the audience with him all the way. Mickey still has the fault of mugging to some extent. The cast back to the acting of the kerosene circuit days went well with the crowd. They seemed to enjoy that part the most of all the picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Monogram

ON THE SPOT: Frankie Darro, Mary Kornman, Mantan Moreland—This picture did not cost a million and as pictures are classified, it would not be classed in the A groups but it seemed to please our patrons, both old and young, to a T. The comedy of the colored player, Mantan Moreland, helped a lot. We advertised the star as Frank Darro, rather than Frankie. He is growing up and it should not be hard to start billing himself as Frank instead of Frankie. This was doubled with 'Carolina Moon" to a good average business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

TRAILING DOUBLE TROUBLE: Ray Corrigan, John King, Max Terhune—These boys are the best drawing card for our Pal Nite that I can book. An up coming group for greater western trios before long. Running time, 59 minutes. Played November 12.—Harry Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BISCUIT EATER, THE: Billy Lee, Cordell Hickman—The critics raved about this picture but the box office slumped for us. The second days business was extra low so that the patrons of the first day could not have been any too pleased. The reason is obvious. Most patrons do not enjoy tragedies no matter how splendid the acting, especially when tragedy is not needed to tell the story. In this the sadness is doubled for good measure. Our patrons were pulling for the hero dog to win in the field trials and losing it was a great let down and then they had to shoot the dog dead. Now in what way would it hurt the picture to let the dog win the field trials and then to let him come home in triumph. Then the patrons could leave with a smile and tell others about how they enjoyed the picture.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

BISCUIT EATER, THE: Billy Lee, Cordell Hickman—Doubled with "Mexican Spitfire" which made a very good program. Good business. Played August 9-18.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash.—Small town and rural patronage.

DR. CYCLOPS: Albert Dekker, Janice Logan—Doubled with 'The Farmer's Daughter.' Average business. Played July 19-28.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

FARMER'S DAUGHTER, THE: Martha Raye, Charlie Ruggles—Doubled with "Dr. Cyclops." Average business. Running time, 61 minutes. Played July 19-28.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

KNIGHTS OF THE RANGE: Russell Hayden, Victor Jory, Jean Parker—A Zane Grey Western that pleases all western fans. Russell Hayden and Jean Parker plus cast do very well. Scenery and King's Men are very pleasing. Running time, 68 minutes. Played October 11-12.—John Grabenstein, Liberty Theatre, Eustis, Neb. Rural and small town patronage.

LAW OF THE PAMPAS: William Boyd, Russell Hayden—We had a cold wave and didn't do the business anticipated. Those who saw it liked it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LIGHT OF THE WESTERN STARS: Victor Jory, Noah Beery, Jr.—Not so hot. Could find no one who enjoyed this picture. Running time, 65 minutes. Played November 8-17.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

MOON OVER BURMA: Dorothy Lamour, Robert Preston, Preston Foster—Good picture and good business. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 13-14.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Thearte, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MOON OVER BURMA: Dorothy Lamour, Robert Preston, Preston Foster—This didn't seem to jell somewhere along the line. As a consequence, patrons knew this in advance and it did not draw any too well. Running time, 78 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

NORTH WEST MOUNTED POLICE: Gary Cooper, Paulette Goddard, Madeleine Carroll, Preston Foster, Robert Preston, Akim Tamiroff, George Bancroft, Lon Chaney, Jr., Walter Hampden—Paramount's biggest road show production, surpassing "Union Pacific" in spectacle, surpassing "The Plainsman" in pulse pounding action. Action thrills to stir your heart, color thrills to amaze your eyes and it's big, big, big in every sense of the word. But instead of the North West Mounted Police getting their man, Cooper, the Texas Ranger, got his man and Preston Foster of the Mounted got the girl, Paulette Goddard, and right here we want to say that Miss Goddard was superb and marvelous in the difficult role of a love sick Indian maiden and her acting was of the very highest order and other splendid actors in the picture, Preston Foster, Akim Tamiroff, George Bancroft and Lon Chaney, Jr., et al., each contributed in helping to make one of the outstanding pictures of the year. Running time, 126 minutes. Played November 14-20.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

OPENED BY MISTAKE: Charlie Ruggles, Janice Logan—Unusually good comedy mystery drama. Everyone likes Charlie Ruggles. Doubled with "Girl from God's Country." Running time, 66 minutes. Played October 30-November 10.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

OPENED BY MISTAKE: Charlie Ruggles, Janice Logan—A good mystery-comedy feature in the program class with more comedy than mystery and our patrons really enjoyed it. Played on the same program with MGM "Henry Goes Arizona" to average business. Running time, 68 minutes.—Played November 7-9.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

QUARTERBACK, THE: Wayne Morris, Virginia Dale—A good picture centering around a college football team. Had plenty of comedy to please. Played with "Young People." Business was good. Running time, 74 minutes. Played November 6-7.—Irvin Baker, Jr., Roaring Spring Theatre, Roaring Spring, Pa. Rural and small town patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RIVER: Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Basil Rathbone, Oscar Levant—Due to Mary Martin's fame we had a great turnout although Bing is a nice drawing card along with a great cast. Hats off to Paramount. Fair crowd. Running time, 94 minutes. Played November 13-14.—Harry Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

ROAD TO SINGAPORE: Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour, Bob Hope—We did exceptionally well on this picture. We tied up with a large tailoring company. Everybody liked it. Bob Hope we thought stole the show.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ROAD TO SINGAPORE: Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour, Bob Hope, Charles Coburn—Take two competent comedians (Crosby and Hope), add a shapely young lady who is easy on the eyes (Miss Lamour), plus an amusing story, and you will find that it results in fun and laughter, just the very things that normal beings look for and appreciate during these troubled times. Of course, the "pat-a-cake" wind-up of Crosby and Hope before they would go into action and raise bumps and blacken eyes on any person or persons who attempted in any way to interfere with them proved to be very amusing to the members of our audience. Another incident that appealed especially to the men here was the one that showed Hope stepping from the police van in the officer's uniform. During the drive to the ship the comedian, who was to be deported, changed clothes with the officer and upon their arrival at the dock, he, Hope, immediately stepped from the van and ordered that the culprit be taken aboard. He was. Mr. Theatre-owner, contact Paramount, book this feature, dust off the S.R.O. sign and, like those who will have seen the picture put on your best smile and sit back and relax. Running time, 83 minutes. Played November 9. —J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recrea-

THOSE WERE THE DAYS: William Holden, Judith Barrett, Bonita Granville, Ezra Stone—A most pleasing college picture that we did not do an average business. For no rhyme or reason they had Judith Barrett dressed in her undies in one of the scenes. Now for what reason was this scene injected? This was not a sex picture. Do they assume that a scene like that will increase the drawing power of the picture or word of mouth about that scene will help the draw? I hope the producers will not start a cycle of girls in undies as was the case before the Legion of Decency made the producers tone down. By this time producers must be aware that these scenes do not help the draw but it helps starting strong agitation for more censorship.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

THREE MEN FROM TEXAS: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Andy Clyde—Good picture; good business. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 15-16.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

UNTAMED: Ray Milland, Patricia Morison, Akim Tamiroff—Beautiful scenery in color. Seemed to please everyone. Good business. Running time, 83 minutes. Played September 6-15.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town patronage.

Producers

MARKED MEN: Warren Hull, Isabel Jewell—Plot fairly good and acting not too bad. Photography only fair and sound not so good. However, Producers are trying hard to deliver so give them the break they justly deserve. Running time, 65 minutes. Played November 14-16.—Pearce Parkhurst, Larcom Theatre, Beverly, Mass. General patronage.

Republic

CAROLINA MOON: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—This is about on a par with the usual Autry pictures with fair business for us on this. It strikes me that more care should be taken in titling pictures than just select a popular song to sing in a picture and the picture for that reason given the title of the song.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

EARL OF PUDDLESTONE: Higgins Family (James Lucile, Russell Gleason, Harry Davenport)—Republic deserves a "pat on the back" for this latest of their very fine "family series." Harry Davenport, I believe he plays the part of the old man, steals the picture away from the Gleasons. In fact in almost every picture he plays he seems to steal the show. However, the Gleasons, particularly Jimmie, do very fine and Republic has a picture of which it well can be proud. Running time, 66 minutes. Played November 14-16.—Pearce Parkhurst, Larcom Theatre, Belverly, Mass. General patronage.

GIRL FROM GOD'S COUNTRY: Chester Morris, Jane Wyatt, Charles Bickford—Excellent production; pretty northern scenery. Played October 30-November 10.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

GRANDPA GOES TO TOWN: James, Lucille and Russell Gleason, Harry Davenport—Unusually good Higgins Family picture. Was enjoyed by all. Doubled with "Everything Happens at Night." Good business. Played July 5-14.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

IN OLD MISSOURI: Weaver Brothers and Elviry—Best Weaver Brothers and Elviry picture to date. Well enjoyed by everyone. Good business. Running time, 67 minutes. Played October 9-20.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

MAIN STREET LAWYER: Anita Louise, Edward Ellis—Good picture. Running time, 72 minutes.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

RANCHO GRANDE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—Best Autry production that I have ever seen. June Storey played her part very well. Would like to see more like this one. Doubled with "Johnny Apollo." Very good business. Running time, 66 minutes. Played October 23-November 3.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

BULLET CODE: George O'Brien, Virginia Vale—Just another cowboy picture. I can't stand them anyway but on certain days the class of trade we draw seem to like them and that is what really counts. Running time, 58 minutes. Played November 10-11.—Pearce Parkhurst, Larcom Theatre, Beverly, Mass. General patronage.

DANCE, GIRL, DANCE: Lucille Ball, Maureen O'Hara, Louis Hayward, Ralph Bellamy—A picture that is different. Lucille Ball is excellent. Picture drew exceptionally well. Running time, 85 minutes. Played Novembmer 12.—Ritz Amuseemnts, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

I'M STILL ALIVE: Kent Taylor, Linda Hayes—Just a fair action drama played on our bargain night to less than average business. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 15.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

LADDIE: Tim Holt, Virginia Gilmore, Joan Carroll—These so-called family "gooey" type pictures never draw their film rental. Running time, 70 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

LUCKY PARTNERS: Ginger Rogers, Ronald Colman—Although this doesn't come up to expectations, it still managed to get plenty of laughs in this situation. It drew pretty well, too. The humor is mostly subtle so it depends a great deal on your audience. I used extra ballyhoo on this one but haven't the slightest idea whether it did any good or not. Running time, 101 minutes. Played November 14.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MEN AGAINST THE SKY: Richard Dix, Wendy Barrie, Edmund Lowe—We have always made money on an airplane picture and this did well enough for itself. Running time, 70 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

MEXICAN SPITFIRE: Leon Errol, Lupe Velez, Donald Woods—Excellent slapstick comedy. Kept them laughing all the time. Doubled with "The Biscuit Eater" which made a very good program. Good business. Running time, 67 minutes. Played August 9-18.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

POP ALWAYS PAYS: Leon Errol, Dennis O'Keefe, Adele Pearce—Pleased everyone that saw it, although business was not up to normal. Think if Leon Errol were featured in another it would draw well on strength of this one. Running time, 67 minutes. Played November 14-15.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

RAMPARTS WE WATCH: Documentary—Had an early date for this territory and did very well with this March of Time type of film. It is certainly different and interesting to all. However, the final scenes are nowhere nearly as terrifying as we were led to expect. From that angle, they are very disappointing. However, in general the picture was well received here. We ran it with "Elsa Maxwell's Public Deb No. 1." Ballyhoo it and you'll get results. Running time, 96 minutes. Played November 9.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BRIGHAM YOUNG-FRONTIERSMAN: Dean Jagger, Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Jane Darwell, Brian Donlevy, Mary Astor, Vincent Price, Jean Rogers—Fine picture; everyone was satisfied with this. Should do well anywhere. I made a small profit on this one in spite of the percentage. Played November 8-9.—Walter Eldred, Colfax Theatre, Colfax, Calif. Small town patronage.

BRIGHAM YOUNG-FRONTIERSMAN: Dean Jagger, Tyrone Power, Jane Darwell, Linda Darnell, Brian Donlevy, Mary Astor, Vincent Price, Jean Rogers—This was a natural in our spot for Dean Jagger is a local boy and, of course, any one that gets in the lights in Hollywood from a small town the picture is going to do business and for a biographical picture of the Mormons it is okay. However, I am frank in saying that most of the reaction of those that I contacted were not too complimentary to the local boy. I would say, as they did, that he was stagey and had not captured the technique of the screen any too well. He was up some years ago in cheap pictures, then back to the stage. If he stays in pictures, he may overcome this fault that the audience noticed.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CISCO KID AND THE LADY: Cesar Romero, Marjorie Weaver—Very good picture. "Cisco Kid" series are better produced than most westerns but they are too high priced and do not draw as well. Running time, 74 minutes. Played July 26-August 4.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

DAY-TIME WIFE: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Warren William, Binnie Barnes—Excellent production. Clever lines and good acting. Should be enjoyed by everyone. Running time, 72 minutes. Played June 28-July 7.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

ELSA MAXWELL'S PUBLIC DEB NO. 1: George Murphy, Brenda Joyce, Ralph Bellamy, Mischa Auer, Charlie Ruggles, Elsa Maxwell—Clever comedy that pokes good-natured fun at Communism drew many laughs from a good crowd that came to see "Ramparts We Watch." The younger crowd will go for the jitterbug sequence. It has no drawing power but they'll like it if they come. Very good comedy supporting cast. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 9.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

EVERYTHING HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Sonja Henie, Ray Milland, Robert Cummings—Very interesting and exciting drama. Doubled with "Grandpa goes to Town." Running time, 77 minutes. Played July 5-14.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

GIRL IN 313: Florence Rice, Kent Taylor—A very fine co-feature that will round off a program very nicely. Florence Rice does a nice piece of acting and Kent Taylor deserves mention for his fine work, too. Running time, 56 minutes. Played November 12-13.—Pearce Parkhurst, Larcom Theatre, Beverly, Mass. General patronage.

HIGH SCHOOL: Jane Withers, Joe Brown, Jr.—Very good picture. Everyone well pleased. Good business. Running time, 74 minutes. Played September 13-22.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane. Small town and rural patronage.

JOHNNY APOLLO: Tyrone Power, Edward Arnold, Lloyd Nolan, Dorothy Lamour—Excellent picture. Well produced, good acting. Enjoyed by everyone. Doubled with "Rancho Grande." Very good business. Running time, 93 minutes. Played October 23-November 3.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

LITTLE OLD NEW YORK: Richard Greene, Alice Faye, Fred MacMurray, Brenda Joyce—Enjoyed by all. Fairly good business. Running time, 100 minutes. Played September 20-29.—Frank J. Beck, Frank J. Beck's Theatre Circuit, Spokane, Wash. Small town and rural patronage.

RETURN OF FRANK JAMES: Henry Fonda, Jackie Cooper, Gene Tierney—Very good picture and should do well at the box office. Especially in the small towns. Running time, 95 minutes. Played October 27-28.—Walter Eldred, Colfax Theatre, Colfax, Calif. Small town patronage.

STAR DUST: Linda Darnell, John Payne, Roland Young, Charlotte Greenwood—A good picture enjoyed by all. Nothing exceptional but a very good "light" picture that should please all. Running time, 84 minutes. Played November 12-13.—Pearce Parkhurst, Larcom Theatre, Beverly, Mass. General patronage.

Universal

BLACK DIAMONDS: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine—Not as good as others in this series featuring these stars. Devine gets a few laughs but story is weak. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Novembmer 12-13.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

GREEN HELL: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Joan Bennett, John Howard, Alan Hale, George Bancroft, George Sanders, Vincent Price—Although a very horrible show (in places), our people seemed to like it. HIRED WIFE: Rosalind Russell, Brian Aherne, Virginia Bruce, Robert Benchley—An excellent picture that failed to draw. In fact, the whole cast is perfect.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

HIRED WIFE: Brian Aherne, Rosalind Russell, Virginia Bruce, Robert Benchley—Unusually good. Just the type and kind patrons now like. 100% satisfaction. KNUTE ROCKNE-ALL AMERICAN: Pat O'Brien, Gale Page, Ronald Reagan, Donald Crisp—As fine a picture as we've seen for many months. A clean story that holds your interest and Pat O'Brien is excellent. Business normal but did not draw as we had expected. Since football is not played here, many customers stayed away from this type of picture. Running time, 98 minutes. Played November 9-11.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

SEA HAWK: Errol Flynn, Brenda Marshall, Claude Rains, Flora Robson, Alan Hale, Una O'Connor—Very good picture. Well acted and plenty of action but somehow failed at the box office here. Small town patronage.

HIS BRIDAL FRIGHT: Charley Chase—Here is a snappy comedy featuring Charley Chase. It is too bad we won't be seeing more of him. MARCH OF TIME, NO. 11: U. S. Navy-1940—A very timely "Time" and one that our audience was mighty glad to see. Our Uncle Sam's fleet may be small today but it certainly looks mighty. CAVALCADE OF ACADEMY AWARDS: Special—An interesting short. Was enjoyed thoroughly by everyone. This no doubt was due to the fact there were quite a number of important stars in this short. Running time, 31 minutes.—Walter Eldred, Colfax Theatre, Colfax, Calif. Small town patronage.

ED SULLIVAN'S HOLLYWOOD: Broadway Brevities—Very poor story of contest winner who goes to Hollywood to win fame. Story drags and has been done many times. Running time, 20 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

Small college town and rural patronage.

SOUR PUSS: Looney Tunes—Average black and white cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SPILLS FOR THRILLS: Broadway Brevities—This is a very good short with a new angle. I don't know why they didn't make this one before. It features the stunt men and women that double for the stars and shows many of their best scenes from old and new films. It contains both comedy stunts and super-thrillers. Every time an old short brings up a scene of the old Keystone Cops, my crowd roars with laughter. Come on, please, reissue some of the best ones, eh? Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

WOODY HERMAN AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters Series—This man can't sing and has on this reel one of the poorest orchestras on the films, so my patrons said. Miscellaneous

CANADA CARRIES ON: Every Canadian theatre should play this as it is most timely.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Serials

Columbia

SHADOW, THE: Victor Jory, Veda Ann Borg—Just finished this serial and it was not so hot. Sensational and impossible.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

PHANTOM CREEPS, THE: Bela Lugosi, Robert Kent, Dorothy Arnold, Regis Toomey—As serials go, this is an above the average serial. It has good production values and mechanical gadgets plus the thrill of the villain making himself invisible but I have a complaint that is common to serials in general, also to parts of this in particular. At the end of Chapter One, a plane crashes in a manner to bring swift death to the occupants, but in Chapter Two Robert Kent gets up from the wrecked plane without a scratch which gets the razzberry from patrons. That kind of stuff is repeated over and over again in different serials. You might ask what would I suggest for a thrill at the end of a chapter. For one thing to go back to Part One and show the hero bailing out before the crash will not do if you do not show that at the end of Part One but insert it in Part Two. But why show a terrific crash at end of chapter? A plane out of control about to crash is suspense enough without the crash. It's O.K. to bring on the thrills without violating all laws of logic. Yours for more logical serials.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Set Cartoon Deal

Leon A. Flax, former general manager of Max Fleischer Art Studio, has signed with the Ted Eshbaugh Studios, Inc., for the production of animated cartoons.

William Goldman Leases Erlanger

For the first time, Philadelphia's downtown, first-run motion picture district, will be invaded by an independent when William Goldman assumes operation of the $2,500,000 Erlanger Theatre. Mr. Goldman signed a long term lease with the Pennsylvania Company, trustees under the first mortgage issue, through Heymann & Bro.

Dark this season, the theatre was to reopen with the Mask and Wig Club's 53rd annual production, "High as a Kite," for the Thanksgiving holiday. Mr. Goldman is former general manager for Stanley-Warner Theatres, Philadelphia area. In recent years, the Erlanger has been running pictures and shows. The policy will probably be continued.

Milwaukee Mixes Shows with Toys

Milwaukee department stores have already installed various kinds of entertainment in their toy departments, as a prelude to Christmas. Gimbel Bros. is featuring acts from Will H. Hill's circus, while the Boston Store has half a dozen acts, including Phil Kestin and Cliff Gaynor, night club entertainers.

Ed. Schuster & Co., owners of three local department stores, will again stage its annual Santa Claus parade. Meanwhile, a big float, to be used in the parade, stands near the entrance to one of the stores, where it attracts hundreds of children daily.

Heads Projectionists

Anthony Baslicado has been elected president of the Ansonia-Derby Local No. 273, Projectionists' Union, at the 28th annual election meeting at New Haven. Returned for the sixth successive year as business agent was Matthew Kennedy. Other officers include: Nicholas Villano, vice-president; Ernest De Grosse, secretary; Edward Boppert, treasurer. Myron Wheaton and John Griffiths, Jr., will serve on the executive board together with the officers.

Reject Theatre Plan

Abe Sablosky's attempt to obtain a permit for a theatre in the Stenton Avenue section, of Philadelphia, a new development, was delayed, this week, when the City Council reclassified the neighborhood as a residential zone. Residents spent $2,000 in legal fees to prevent construction of the theatre, and were defeated in Court. Assistant City Solicitor G. Coe Farrier had warned the City Council against rezoning the section, but councilmen acted in the face of the warning.

Restrain Sunday Ban

George Pugh, operator of the Park, Nicholasville, Ky., has been granted a temporary injunction restraining city officials from enforcing a newly enacted ordinance prohibiting Sunday motion picture shows. Mr. Pugh attacked the constitutionality of the statute in his suit.

New Chicago Circuit

Chicago has a new theatre circuit. It is the Alben Theatre Corporation, under direction of M. Bartelstein and M. Abram. It will operate theatres taken from the Gus Brechta circuit.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

THERE TO BE HAD

The realists among the membership will take the December suggestions in this issue for what they must be taken—the starting bell for the year's most spirited battle. The battle concerns the theatre's fair share of the holiday shopping monies. The determined manager intends to get his piece of it.

This December sees much more Christmas cash in circulation. Which means the manager must scrap that much harder to keep the ticket-sellers from their knitting. Obviously, it can be done, since it has been done previously. And it will be done currently.

In the final analysis, experience declares that the clear-eyed theatreman regards December opposition without undue alarm. Confident of his ability to "cop the duke," the lad who don't scare easily, gets in there to keep slugging from bell to bell.

OUTSIDE THE THEATRE

Coincident with the report of Loewman Joe Samartano's election to the presidency of the Meriden, Conn., Kiwanis Club, comes the latest copy of Wometco's "Contact," telling of similar doings among the Miami circuit's managers.

Listed among those holding executive posts in the local Kiwanis, Exchange Optimists, Lions and other civic-minded organizations, are Round Tablers Sonny Shepherd, Burton L. Clark, Ray Toemmes, S. Gordon Spradley, Jack Fink, Charles Ozburn, Edgar Pearce, Flynn Stubblefield and Mark Chartrand, among others.

The extra-curricular activities of these members cover a comprehensive field of community endeavor, sufficiently wide to bring them frequently into the news, to bring them into frequent contact with the city's foremost citizens. In such skilled hands, obviously, these factors must also have to do with the theatre state of health.

FAT PUBLICITY SOURCE

Transfer of the women's fashion center from Paris should open up an added source of fat publicity, according to Stan Andrews, of F P C's Capitol, in Guelph, Ontario. The Canadian member has made a signal success in selling star fashion mats to his conservative papers. His current contribution is a two-column art break plus fat picture and theatre credits.

Andrews has grabbed himself thousands of extra lines through this device; could get more if more of the mats were available. What Stan has to say about it might interest publicity-pointed members in similar situations:

"I firmly believe that an effort should be made to give us access to more of these fashion mats. In a great many instances, star fashions are available to us only in still form. If this material was presented in mat form, our field for free space would be broadened and at practically no cost at all. Since the fashion centres are now moved to New York and Hollywood, the public should be allowed to read about them through the potent medium of movie stars."

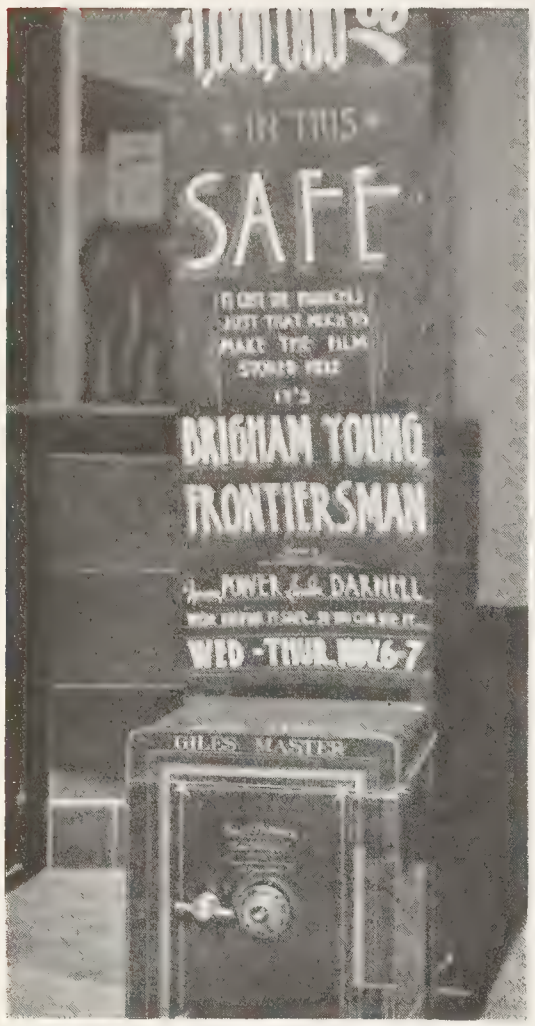
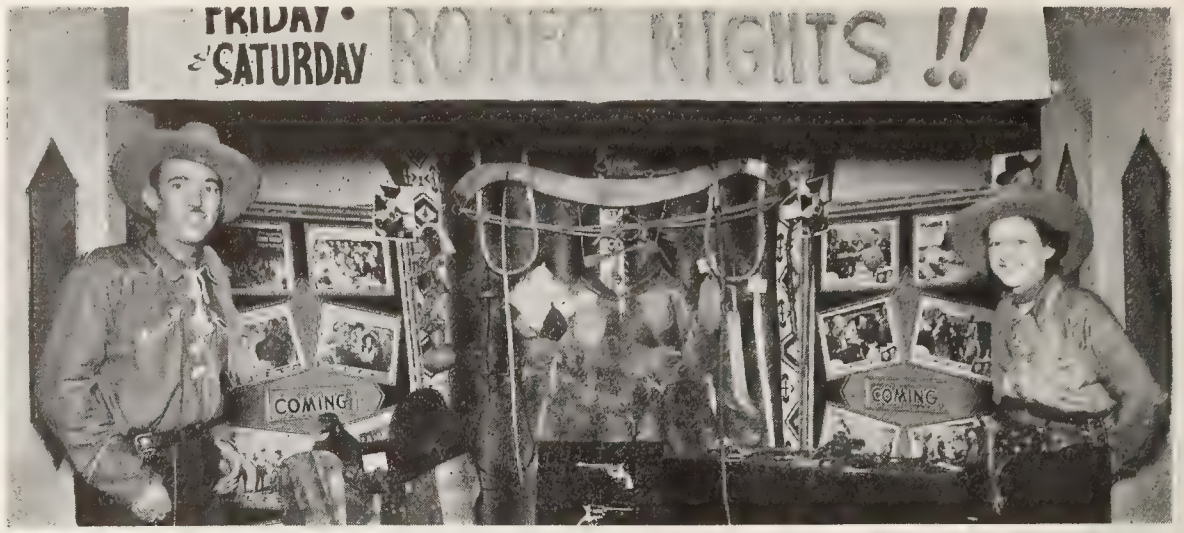
AN EARNED TRIBUTE

Long-time manager of Loew's Granada, in the Lakewood section of Cleveland, Johnny Newkirk's place in community regard is importantly to be measured by the campaign put on in honor of the theatre's thirteenth anniversary.



Many avenues of exploitation were explored in calling attention to the event. Topping all of these, from this end, were the letters of personal congratulation from the Mayors of Cleveland and Lakewood, the praiseful editorials and other publicity in the downtown and neighborhood press.



"I have been wanting for some time to drop you a note and thank you for your kind acceptance of Lex Theatre material for Motion Picture Herald and the Quigley Awards.

"Since I have been with the Indiana-Illinois circuit, I have learned the value of the Awards and the pleasure and interest one can obtain out of putting together a campaign folder. One of the big values is in finding the weak points of one campaign as you put it together on paper and eliminate those weaknesses in the future efforts."—From Bob Griffith, Manager, Lex Theatre, Chicago, Ill.

Businessmen Tied to Local Picture

Sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, with most of the cost defrayed by cooperation of leading merchants, a locally made picture, "Romance in Brookline" with resident young men and women in the cast, proved a profitable venture for Jack Markle, at the Coolidge Center, in Brookline, Mass.

Contacts were established with merchants through a mail campaign inviting them to participate in the production. In exchange for a designated sum, stores, factories, businessmen, etc., were allowed footage in the production. With costs thus taken care of, patrons were invited to try for screen tests, registration cards distributed for the purpose. The tests were held at the theatre, two weeks ahead, assurance given that all registering would be shown in the picture, if only for crowd shots, etc. Romance was injected through a prepared script with prominent locals taking the leads.

The actual filming included clubs, schools, churches, football games, and crowds attending. Faces around town were shot, on the streets, in factories, city hall, police and fire departments, etc. In all, Markle figured the picture, which ran 35 minutes, had a potential draw of some 20,000 people, which was reflected in the three-day capacity attendance, he reports.

Advance promotion had bannered truck with camera equipment three weeks ahead, personal talks before organizations by Markle, etc. Publicity was generous in the local press with further comment carried in the nearby Boston papers.

Double Truck Contest Aids Nutting on "Knute Rockne"

Effective was the double truck promoted for "Knute Rockne" by Floyd Nutting at the State, Mankato, Minn. Each ad carried a cut of one of the players from each of the teams playing that city Saturday ahead opening. Entrants were asked to identify each, giving the position he plays on the team, the school and name of advertiser in which his picture appears. Guest tickets were awarded the winners.

Through tieup with football teams at stadium, the bands formed large "K" and "R" during halves. Following this, four players carrying a giant lettered football walked around the gridiron advertising the picture.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Mounties Visit Newspapers

Visiting the offices of the local newspapers, Alice Gorman, of the United Detroit Theatres, publicity staff made frequent appearances at each with press material on "Northwest Mounted Police." Escorted by two six foot ushers dressed for the occasion with red coats and complete outfits of the Mounties the aggregation created a furore wherever they went. Boys were borrowed from the Michigan theatre, where the entire staff was dressed in keeping two weeks ahead.

Perfumed Notes, October Valentines, Fill the Air With Drama and Love

For the premiere of Warners' "The Letter" at the San Francisco Fox, some thousands of locals on the theatre's mailing lists were intrigued by the receipt of a personally-addressed highly perfumed, pink-colored "personal" letter in feminine handwriting. First page was a copy of the letter which forms the background of the picture, reading:

"Robert will be away for the night. I shall expect you at eleven. I am desperate and if you don't come, I won't be responsible for the consequences." Following this was a P. S. "turn the page, please."

Inside page copy carried the tip-off and theatre credits, starting, "built around this letter is a motion picture which becomes one of the most memorable entertainments ever seen," etc., etc.

The "personal" slant was also employed by "Doc" Twedt, in a valentine mailing idea for "Love You Again," at the Lido, Manly, Iowa. Here, the Round Tabler had a lot of inexpensive valentines printed up with the covers decorated in the usual heart form lettered "sweetest story ever told." Inside was printed a valentine love jingle, and immediately below, followed hand-written copy signed by William Powell, reading:

"The above words sure sound like 'I Love You Again.' A valentine in October isn't half so crazy as a guy who's been married to Myrna Loy for nine years and who doesn't know anything about it until he gets a good crack on the head," etc. The windup was the title again and the theatre date.

Amateur Band Contest Sells "Strike Up" Date

As a follow through on the national amateur band competition arranged by MGM on "Strike Up the Band," the date at the Emboyd, in Fort Wayne, Ind., was hooked to a newspaper promotion in which merchants' prizes and theatre tickets were awarded.

Three eliminations were held at the theatre, with localites acting as judges. The finals were staged toward the end of the engagement with the audience acting as judges by popular applause. Stations WOWO and WGL came through with three broadcasts featuring transcription and plugs for the contest and engagement. The comic did his stuff from the bandstand, then mingled with the crowds handing out "laff dope" capsules which contained publicity on the picture. This was hooked to a "Laugh Week" proclaimed by the acting mayor and covering the engagement.

Entrants photos are displayed in lobby, each numbered, together with name, address, age. Votes given to each patron determine the winners.

Parade is held with girls in bannered cars and entrants appear at the theatre on a given night the week before where winner is decided. Prizes and expenses are supplied by merchants fund, the usual credits given.

Where lobby or mezzanine space allows, a "merchants pre-Christmas exhibit" rates consideration. Stores pay nominal sum for display of representative holiday wares, the event to be sponsored by local business men's association, if possible. Money theatre collects is used for publicity and advertising, including newspaper space.

A "Christmas Fair Week," the period ahead of the holiday includes some activity at the theatre each night, all plugged under the "Week" heading, with individual merchants cooperating on different nights. Local talent and local orchestra shows, entertainment by organizations, giveaways, etc., are featured. Here, also, stores are allowed lobby or mezzanine space to show gift merchandise.

The "Treasure Chest" stunt, spotlighted at the World's Fair, is again being considered. Tiein with store or stores, allows for keys to be given patrons with purchases, keys to be used to unlock chest in lobby. Chest is set up so that gifts inside can be seen. For this purpose, outstanding pictures were booked for the anniversary week, the campaign including four special birthday events to cover publicity in the metropolitan press as well as the neighborhood papers.

Outstanding in the publicity was Griffiths' quick-thinking in tieing in with the Chicago visit of Wendell Willkie wherein the presidential candidate and Mrs. Willkie were presented with pieces of the theatre's birthday cake as they left their hotel. Uniformed usher and usherette carried the offering later acknowledged by Mrs. Willkie by letter to Griffith, the story hitting the downtown sheets. SON OF MONTE CRISTO (United Artists)

Melodrama

Produced by Edward Small. Directed by Rowland V. Lee. Screen play by George Bruce.

SYNOPSIS

The little grand ducal principality of Lichtenburg, squeezed between the Russia of the Czar and the Germany of Bismark, and at which Louis Napoleon frequently aimed his attention, was under the dominance of Gurko Lanen (George Sanders), son of a stonemaster, who had declared himself dictator of the country. The nominal ruler, Grand Duchess Zona (Joan Bennett), and her prime minister, Neuhoff (Montagu Love), bitterly resent the autocratic dictates of Gurko Lanen, but can do little because of the iron hold he maintains on the army and the populace.

Zona secretly departs for Paris to ask support from Napoleon, but spies tell of her plan. On the road to Paris she meets the Count of Monte Cristo (Louis Hayward), son of the fabulous Edmund Dantes of a prior generation. He offers to aid her.

Entering the city disguised as a banker with a large sum of money to invest, the Count befriends a group attempting to overthrow the Dictator.

Meanwhile, Lanen is forcing his attention on the Duchess telling her the only way to preserve unity in the nation is for her to marry him. At the opportune time, the Count produces definite proof that Lanen is a traitor to his country and in a duel between the two, the dictator is killed.

Jeff Custer (Gene Raymond), the partner, is relieved when, after his latest quarrel with Ann, David makes up after only three days and emerges from the bedroom. When David shows up at the office his first visitor is a man who has come to inform him that when he married Ann a mistake had been and the marriage has been performed in Nevada instead of Idaho as the license states.

The man also stops by to see Ann and tell her the news. Ann believes that David will suggest that they immediately be remarried. He doesn't say anything at all. Earlier, David had told Ann that if he had to do it over again, he would not marry her.

She thinks he means to live with her without benefit of wedlock and chases him out of the apartment. She resumes her maiden name. David goes to live at his club. Jeff Custer agrees to talk to Ann. The result is that Ann retains Jeff as her legal adviser. She begins to seriously consider marrying Jeff. David follows them to Lake Placid and creates a terrible scene. Bob is determined to protect society from the depredations of Dr. Satan; and, at the same time, wipe out the stigma attached to the name "Copperhead."

Dr. Satan makes various attempts to secure the remote control device by threatening the death of Scott's daughter, Lois. The "Copperhead" comes to her rescue when she appears doomed on a sinking yacht which carries to a watery grave the secret of the device.

Subsequently, Dr. Satan and his men salvage this control, the "Copperhead" risking spectacular death again and again to prevent the inhumane scientist from using it for the destruction of mankind.

MR. and MRS. LEO

(Reprinted from the nationally syndicated column JIMMIE FIDLER IN HOLLYWOOD)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 25.—I'm looking forward eagerly to "Comrade X," co-starring Clark Gable and Hedy Lamarr, remembering their appearance together in "Boom Town." Hedy had no lion's share of that picture, but her love scenes with Gable made the hair on the back of my neck bristle.

They should be the perfect foils for each other. Both have sex appeal, and Hedy, in full display of her charms, should be tops.

Gable needs beauty against his brawn. He is best when conquering a gorgeous creature. Gable and Loy, Gable and Colbert — intriguing combinations. Lamarr, having more beauty and appeal—if less acting ability—should bring out the maximum of Clark's masculine magnetism.

The ladies will be dreaming themselves into Lamarr's slippers in "Comrade X" and suffering (?) the embraces of Gable—and the men, fancying themselves in Clark's shoes, will be wooing Hedy!

"Papa, see what they're saying about 'COMRADE X'!"

FURORE on "FANTASIA"

MORE highbrow hell has been raised in less time by Mr. Walt Disney's "Fantasia" than any prior expression of the screen, excepting nothing from "The Birth of a Nation" down to today.

By now the first critical returns are in the file, with opinions, notions, essays and evasions from picture critics, music critics and even those so very esoteric persons, the dance critics. It begins to appear that maybe the dramatic critics will be letting it alone—presumably because they have been gingerly aloof of the cinema traditionally these many, many years.

The newspapers were not sure what to do about it in the first place. They sent their cinema critics because "Fantasia" involved the screen name Disney and was recorded on film. On second thought, there were to be considered the musical names of Mr. Leopold Stokowski and Mr. Deems Taylor, and, of course, sundry composers. Later, discovery of movement brought in the dance commentators. It still remains a possibility that the assignment desks will find that there's color, too, and be sending off Mr. Guy Pène duBois or Mr. Royal Cortissoz of the field of paint on canvas to have a fling at it.

To the motion picture industry and its showmen the main significance is that from the appearances of the initial run in New York the public is taking to "Fantasia" in a big way. That, to be sure, also bears on the fact that, whether they admit it or not, the "electricals" are not unmindful that this "Fantasia" project is a sort of pressure, for some future day maybe, toward re-equipment of the screen theatre. There's gold in that whisper. And there is more than a nod at that aspect in the more recent announcement from Warner Brothers and Major Nathan Levinson of "Vitasound".

It has become rather clear that "Fantasia" is actually most accurately to be described as a super "Silly Symphony". It is longer, bigger, better, more pretentious. It is by Disney out of Mickey Mouse, or vice versa, and that is not belittling. It is also "Three Little Pigs" done with dinosaurs, in the basic formula of bigger and better.

It is the commercial job of Mr. Disney, Mr. Hal Horne and Mr. Kay Kamen to go about the matter of getting back the two million dollars in the job, and it looks more and more as though they may. But that has nothing to do with the fact that, since the impact of "Fantasia", the ornamental noise end of the motion picture business will never be quite the same.

One important result just possibly may be that the motion picture makers will be more conscious of the rather generally able job that its employed musicians have been contributing for a long time.

SOMEWHAT more ephemeral, but interesting, is what "Fantasia" has done to the critics. The motion picture writers, we proudfully record, came off best. They appear to be most attuned to departures, adventures in expression. They all admitted they were puzzled, all said mostly that they liked it—whatever it was. Among movie pundits the attitude of caution brought now and then such phrases as Mr. Howard Barnes' line, in the New York Herald Tribune: "If it is not always perfect it is still a courageous and distinguished production."

The musical critics in the main felt that their art had been invaded, perhaps even raped. Said Mr. Virgil Thompson in the Herald Tribune: "What he does to dead composers is nobody's business." Then he made a crack about the "geology lesson".

In the New York Times Mr. Bosley Crowther, cinema, complained: "Menace, except when it is redeemed by a touch of humor, is usually dull in his films." In the main Mr. Crowther seems to have been entertained.

But on the subject of menace along came Mr. Burns Mantle, primarily critic of the drama, an abundantly experienced journalist, saying, " . . . a minor question of showmanship. It is not for children. . . . Very little children could easily be scared out of their tender skins . . . "

Mr. Disney officially denied that he scared babies, but just as he was saying it along came Miss Dorothy Thompson, who is that in print, and Mrs. Sinclair Lewis in private, shouting out loud that she had been scared plenty. She said that: "I left the theatre in a condition bordering on nervous breakdown." That would have been more informative if Miss Thompson had stated how she was feeling when she went in. Meanwhile, one must recall that every day she has to have a column and, somewhat like her contemporary, Mr. Westbrook Pegler, complete success is only to be had when there is a subject for extreme indignation. Miss Thompson got a column, not a breakdown, out of it.

Anyway, the Broadway theatre had four trunk 'phone lines to the box office when the show opened and in a week it had twelve. Says the New York Times, editorially, "Mr. Disney has made history."

"PUBLICITY"

JUST as drops of water make the ocean, so does the name and fame and repute of Hollywood grow, by words in print, pictures in print and, alas sometimes, too, by word-of-mouth.

With words and pictures, mostly in the tabloid journals, last week, Mr. Russell Birdwell "and Associates", publicity promoters, of Beverly Hills, have put imprimatur on a strip tease campaign in front of the Loew-Lewin building in Universal City, apparently in behalf of and by Miss Gerta Rozan, said to be a blonde Viennese actress. She was said to be protesting, a garment at a time, daily, about her part in "So Ends Our Night" being left on the cutting room floor. She won, maybe by arrangement, at the brassiere and panties stage.

The strip system came to flower a few years ago in New York under the administration of the Minskys, flowering in the career of Gipsy Rose Lee, later known as Miss Hovick. They have all gone down in history, quite a distance. In fact, neither fame nor ultimate profit seem to abide in the device. The timing of the current eruption in Hollywood makes it concurrent with a sharp increase in protests about the decay of decency discipline in those parts.

Arbiters' Salaries

DEPARTMENT of Justice anti-trust division officials in Washington, Wednesday, disclosed that arbiters on the 30-odd local jurisdictional boards handling cases under the Government-"Big Five" consent decree, will be paid per diem for their services, the amount not to exceed $50, and the American Arbitration Association has the authority to fix the exact fee. The Association now is studying the matter, with a view to setting the fees to be imposed in different cities throughout the country. It was reported that the Department of Justice might make recommendations to the Association.

The new administrative committee of the American Arbitration Association in charge of applying the new arbitration order to the motion picture industry met Wednesday in New York for the first time. A spokesman later declared that the committee would aim to make arbitration procedure as simplified and inexpensive for exhibitors as possible.

The committee drafted a tentative form for exhibitors for filing complaints and completed a cost form for listing changes involved in arbitration proceedings. Both forms were drawn with the idea that no attorney is required by an exhibitor desiring to start arbitration proceedings.

While the top daily pay for arbiters is set at $50, it was indicated that the rate would be fixed on what might be termed the "prevailing wage" basis in which consideration is given to the amounts which might be charged for similar services in the particular community. It is probable that the maximum will be imposed in only one or two of the largest cities.

Money from England

THE long negotiations between representatives of the American major motion picture companies and the British Government over a monetary agreement for the second year of the European War are about over.

The terms of the pact succeeding the one expiring October 31st, in effect are understood to be as follows: The eight major U. S. distributors can withdraw a maximum of $12,800,000 of their British film income from November 1, 1940, to October 31, 1941; 75 percent of the sum may be exported during the first six months; the remaining 25 percent in the second half of the year, if the $3,200,000 is actually earned; frozen funds may be used to pay up to one half of the cost of British films bought for export, also pay British salaries and costs of prints made in England. No money blocked in England can be used to purchase or invest in British theatres, it is understood.

David Rose, managing director in England for Paramount, said this week in New York, following his return from abroad, that Paramount was paying its mortgage debentures on theatre property in Britain with blocked funds. Other comments by Mr. Rose on the film situation in England are on page 50.

A delegation representing employees in the British film industry Thursday went before the Board of Trade in London to request Government action to aid the recovery of production by releasing studio space commandeered for war purposes and to grant leaves to technicians. American film groups had previously requested similar action. The employees council indicated that it would petition Ernest Bevin, High Minister of Labor, to act in the matter if the Board of Trade took no immediate steps.

The headquarters of the British sales force of Twentieth Century-Fox have been evacuated from Soho Square, London to Moreton Pinkney Manor, near Rugby in Warwickshire.

Newsreel Tempest

INDIGNANT denial, rolling in high waves swept across the newsreel map in New York this week with the arrival of the Standard, a Montreal, Que., daily containing a copyrighted interview with Louis De Rochemont, March-of-Time-Ramparts-We-Watch producer alleging that "the German Gestapo has an ironclad censorship in the United States over all newsreel material dealing with Germany."

Specifically Mr. De Rochemont was quoted as saying that the newsreels using German footage, supplied by UFA, had "to submit all commentary to Nitze (George Nitze, New York representative of UFA) giving him 48 hours to approve or disapprove. . . . We discovered that Nitze used the forty-eight hours to get an okay from Freiherr Ulrich von Gienanth . . . in the Germany embassy . . . Von Gienanth checked with Ernst Hepp. . . ."

From the editors of all newsreels came denial, from all the observation that as in France and England all outgoing film had to pass censorships, as also obtains in pictures concerning the U. S. Army and Navy, here, too.

It was stated and quoted from the standard UFA agreement that permits use of the German film sources that newsreel commentary should "be that of a neutral country."

In Montreal it was said that Mr. De-Rochemont was in Canada gathering material for a sequel to "The Ramparts We Watch."

To an inquiry through the HERALD'S Washington correspondent to the Department of Justice concerning the status of such a situation as alleged, if any, came the reply: "Not interested. If Germans want to dictate terms it is up to them. Newsreels don't have to use German pictures if they don't want to. No law involved."

Also, it may be added, the newsreels seem not to be using the film concerned anyway. —THE EDITOR.

Property Rights

AN old argument over the right of a theatre owner to remove certain property added to a theatre during the term of his lease, was settled, at least in one instance, this week, by the Appellate Division of the Court of the State of New York.

The decision reversing the lower courts was in the case of Avanti Realty Company, theatre landlord and plaintiff, against Codell Theatre Corporation, former operator of Avanti's Paras Court theatre, on Court Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., Max Cohen and Louis Goidell being partners in the theatre operation.

In the lower court, the claim of the plaintiff-landlord that marquee letters, certain equipment in the projection booth, seat covers and light bulbs, became a permanent part of the landlord's property, was upheld.

On appeal, however, Louis Nizer, film lawyer in New York, arguing for the defendant, contended that the property which formed the basis of the suit had been purchased and installed by the defendant and that it could easily be removed, therefore did not constitute a permanent improvement to the plaintiff's property.

Coast Charity

LEADERS of the industry's Community Chest drive division in Hollywood Tuesday reported collections of $465,708, an increase of about 49 percent over last year. Studio and labor group heads and others active in the campaign were honored by Chest officials at a luncheon in Biltmore Bowl where the report was made. Paul H. Yost, Chest drive chairman, congratulated Louis B. Mayer, industry campaign leader, and his aides.

Foreign 'Dictator' Deals

SEVENTY percent deals, including a large cash guarantee, extended runs and advanced admission prices, have been arranged for "The Great Dictator" in Argentina, Canal Zone, Java and Straits Settlement in the first foreign deal made on the film outside of England.

In the U. S., it is understood that the picture will be sold on a 50-50 basis in general release beginning late this Winter with no increased admission scale demanded; prices up to now are based on a 70 percent rental.

Meanwhile preparations were being made for the second "premiere" of "Gone With the Wind" in Atlanta prior to the general release of the picture after the first of the year. The new "Wind" terms were said to be 50-50 with minimum admissions of 40 cents in the afternoon and 50 cents in the evening when reserved seats will be recommended but not required.

REPRINTS AVAILABLE ON FINAL DECREE

The final, official, revised Consent Decree has been reprinted in pamphlet form, together with the Rules of Arbitration, the Map of Arbitraation Jurisdictional Districts and the Department of Justice's statement of policy and procedure under the consent settlement of its trust suit against the "Big Five" distributors. The pamphlet is available, without charge, to subscribers. Copies will be mailed without charge to those sending requests to Motion Picture Herald, Rockefeller Center, New York.

Fire on Decree

THE United States Government "has signed away all its rights to proceed against movie monopoly," comments an editorial in the Milwaukee Journal, attacking Attorney General Robert H. Jackson for promulgating the consent decree, which, two weeks ago, ended the Government's anti-trust suit.

The editorial declared: "Another consent decree on examination turns sour. That has been the history of these compromises between government and businesses which are accused by government of violating the law. . . . This consent decree instead of breaking up alleged monopoly, freezes it as it is and may even let it expand. The government agreed not to seek dissolution of the chains for three years. The companies agreed not to expand the chains—except for 'certain stated exceptions.'

"It is in the exceptions that the joker appears. The decree is not to 'prevent any defendant from acquiring theatres or interests therein to protect its investment or its competitive position or for ordinary purposes of business.'

". . . There is now nothing to prevent the chain companies from buying up all the theatres in the United States."

Movie Seasons

MOTION picture theatre attendance is greatest in the fall and winter, Outdoor Advertising, Inc., of New York, claims in a brochure entitled, "More Circulation," the purpose of which is to influence national advertisers to increase their budgets for poster display this winter.

It estimates that the fall months account for 28.4 per cent of the total attendance; the winter months, 28.3 per cent; summer, 21.2, and the spring, 22.1.

Pointed out, for its purposes, is the fact that people pass outdoor advertising both "coming and going to theatres."

For the Record

THE original partnership in the introduction of motion picture sound, of Warner Brothers and Electrical Research Products, long since dissolved, was formally and officially ended in all its legal ramifications, Wednesday, when H. M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers, announced that all existing contracts between the film company and ERPI had been discontinued as of that date, by mutual agreement. Several years ago Warners stopped using Western Electric recording equipment in its Burbank studio, replacing it with RCA Photophone.

The Warner Studio license agreements with ERPI had four more years to run. Only a "nominal, legal consideration" was tendered ERPI by Warners for the discontinuance of the contracts, Warner spokesmen said, Wednesday.

The contracts involved covered recording equipment only, since ERPI withdrew from the reproducing licensing field sometime ago.

A British Problem

ADDED to the voluminous war-and-defense matters for consideration by England's legislators is the proposal, in London, by Captain Plugge, in the House of Commons, that, in view of the complete cessation of television in that country, the Government should undertake the sale of the thousands of television receivers now inoperative. The Captain specifically referred to the United States, as the logical No. 1 customer.

In the ensuing discussion on the floor of Commons, members apparently overlooked the fact that England's telecast receivers do not incorporate U. S. A. patents—a matter later brought up by Harcourt Johnson, an observer from the British Government's Department of Overseas Trade.

Kennedy will Write

JOSEPH P. KENNEDY ended at least part of the suspense in the much speculated story of what he might be up to, this week by announcing he had resigned, just after the election, from his post as Ambassador to the Court of St. James's. He took off for a Palm Beach vacation and gave it out that he was presently to devote himself to the big job of "helping the President keep us out of war."

Washington has heard, presumably on excellent authority, that Mr. Kennedy intends to write some pieces for the magazines and that he may on occasion deliver some lectures.

The ambassador has been, as has been recorded, to Hollywood and San Simeon, and motion picture rumors continue. Those rumors have had no confirmation from Mr. Kennedy, quite the opposite in fact.

COAST, LOOKING INTO THAT DECREE, 'BLUE PRINTS' 40 FILMS ON ORDER

Major Productions Now Planned by Studios Are Budgeted at $40,000,000; Popular Novels, Plays, Stories To Be Filmed

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

Productions on order and in blue-print stage at this point is Hollywood's preparations for new screen material, categorize in a manner to reveal a state of mind paralleling in more ways than one that of the nation with respect to its tomorrows. Just as potentialities overseas have impelled America to the doubling of its fleet, so have implications of the consent decree inspired producers to the readying of more dreadnoughts of entertainment than in any previous year.

Just as nobody knows in advance the outcome of the wars being waged abroad, nor the consequences of that outcome, neither does anybody in Hollywood pretend to know in advance how many capital-ships are going to be required to head each fleet of five films sent into action on next year's sea, under the block-of-five consent decree selling provision; nor how much tonnage displacement per each will turn out to be par. That is why the scale of preparedness contemplates maximum.

Hollywood enjoys, however, an advantage not shared by the Navy department. A battleship may not be pared down to row boat dimensions after its keel is put down. A film dreadnought can be reduced in proportions at almost any point prior to launching. It will be in pattern with precedent if many of the craft hereinafter dealt with emerge as submarines, destroyers, even trawlers, or not at all. As of now, though, for the most part projects on paper and with no commitments made, they stack up as some $40,000,000 worth of fore-armament against whatever may come.

Nobody estimates at less than $1,000,000 and some double the figure, the cost to Paramount of delivering "For Whom the Bells Toll" to exhibitors. The manuscript price for the Ernest Hemingway novel already has been made known to the public by a publicity campaign reminiscent of that conducted in behalf of "Gone With the Wind" and taking on in other ways, such as the soliciting of suggestions for casting and the speculation as to whether Gary Cooper can be obtained for the lead, characteristics of that enterprise. This would appear, by all standards, certain to slip from the ways a capital ship of the Paramount fleet.

Nobody would estimate at less than a million, either, the cost of Cecil B. DeMille's next undertaking, in the Technicolor medium he has declared he will use in all cases henceforth, Thelma Strabell's "Reap the Wild Wind," a Saturday Evening Post story of the Florida Keys to which he will address his attentions at such time as his negotiations in the scripting and casting departments, always deliberate and painstaking, are completed. No personnel is ticketed for this as yet.

Two productions in blue print stage at weekend edged a step toward realization Tuesday when Samuel Goldwyn and Jack L. Warner agreed on terms of a talent trade assuring availability of Mr. Cooper for the title role in "Sgt. York," the Jesse Lasky film for Warners, and the services of Bette Davis for Samuel Goldwyn's "The Littles Foxes." Although Paramount declined to go on record immediately, it has been understood that Mr. Cooper's assent to this deal would be conditional upon Mr. Goldwyn's permitting him, subsequently, to accept the chief role in "For Whom the Bells Toll," a casting reported to have been petitioned for by Mr. Hemingway.

Definitely on the upper bracket agenda is Mr. Lasky's "Sgt. York," in his mind as idea and project for 22 years.

The Goldwyn production of the Broadway play "The Little Foxes" was the third side of the triple loan negotiations involving Miss Davis and Mr. Cooper who could be triplets and still be steadily employed. Another factor affecting the start of this picture is the Goldwyn-United Artists impasse, which may or may not terminate in time to make this film, a million dollar project by all reckoning, a 1940-41 item.

Musical for Metro

"Lady Be Good," the George Gershwin musical acquired by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is talked of as a vehicle for Eleanor Powell, Tony Martin and other MGM talent of musical-comedy persuasion, on a scale commensurate with the leadership of any block-of-five.

"The Battle of Britain," up to now no more than in idea stage but announced by Richard Rowland has his next production for United Artists release, is sure to budget a million or more, and if advance reports of Rowland's "Cheers for Miss Bishop" augur true it will offer a multi-starred cast befitting that film's successor.

On the Disney list of things to come are "Reluctant Dragon," derived from the Kenneth Grahame book, which will combine cartooning with Robert Benchley's clowning, and, as yet not even down to advance sketch estate, "Alice in Wonderland." "Bambi" is also a prospect from this quarter, and "Dumbo," pertaining to an elephant which flies by its ears, all the Disney enterprises running to and for the most part beyond the million dollar mark as to cost.

"Flame of New Orleans," which will be Rene Clair's first directorial undertaking in America and will star Marlene Dietrich, is one of the upper-bracket productions now in preparation at Universal City. Another of this studio's larger prospects for the near or distant future, as it may work out, is a production by Henry Koster, from a story as yet unselected and with talent to be chosen, whose direction of the Deanna Durbin pictures has been of a quality to bring about the studio's decision to set him up independently of that and other associations.

"Strange Victory," the Sol Lesser production for United Artists, has been given to George Bruce for scripting, casting to follow.

"I, James Lewis," a story of the sea purchased from Paramount, is to be the next Frank Lloyd production and plans are to stage it on the scale of his "Howards of Virginia" and other films of recent years.

"Down to the Sea in Ships," a Twentieth Century-Fox filming of a story which proved its box office characteristics under another trade mark several years ago, awaits casting and other assignments, although a crew is already afloat making background shots.

"Blood and Sand," a story that made fame for Rudolf Valentino and profits for exhibitors the world around, is another Twentieth Century-Fox venture in the million-dollar class, with Tyrone Power, Number Two in the Motion Picture Herald-Fame 1939 poll of Money Making Stars, in the Valentino role.

Two Plays for Warners

"George Washington Slept Here," from the current Broadway hit, and "The Man Who Came to Dinner," likewise a Kauffman-Hart stage success, have been acquired by Warner Brothers for picturization when and as deemed desirable, both belonging in this or any canvass of standouts in blue-print. "Danger Signal," by Phyllis Bottome, is in the Warner portfolio.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's acquisition in the musical sector alone indicates the state of preparedness prevalent in the realm of Leo the Lion. "Smilin' Through" and "I Married An Angel," an imperishable remake and a Broadway success, are carded as Jeanette MacDonald-Nelson Eddy vehicles. "Babes on Broadway," an original and as yet not reduced to paper, is down as a Mickey Rooney-Judy Garland follow-up to the same pair's "Babes in Arms" and "Strike Up the Band." Cost of the three is expected to exceed as many millions.

"The Life of William Allen White," with Spencer Tracy in the title part, is another MGM project for which costs will not be sheared, as is Margaret Kinnan Rawling's book, "The Yearling," a Technicolor number.

"And Now Goodbye," the James Hilton novel, is a Columbia production far enough along in planning to have Joan Fontaine and Brian Aherne settled upon as leads.

Edward Small has not yet cast his "Corsican Brothers," for which an expanded budget is contemplated.

"Kiss the Boys Goodbye," by Claire Booth; "There's Always Juliet," by John Van Druten, and "Sky Lark," Samuel Raphaelson's Saturday Evening Post serial, are among Paramount's more expensive productions on order. And far down the Paramount future looms another Cecil B. DeMille enterprise, thought of by himself as destined to be his biggest ever, "Queen of Queens."

Four at RKO

"True to Form," which David Butler will produce in Technicolor; "The Devil and Daniel Webster," the Stephen Vincent Benet work which William Dieterle will produce; "Sonny," the musical which Herbert Wilcox will produce as a vehicle for Anne Neagel, and an untitled, unselected story which Erich Pommer will produce as a vehicle for Charles Laughton and Elsa Lanchester, are among the top-budget films in prospect for RKO-Radio distribution.

December 1 of most years witnesses Hollywood producers saying much, in a general way, about the season ahead, little in the specific. This year the talk is specific, the general outlook discussed none whatever. It is, the reasoning seems to be, a time to stock the reservoir with materials of which to make whatever, and however much of it, the market may require.

GERMAN FILMS CAUSE TROUBLE

Because a film, obtained free from the German Railways Information office in Chicago, roused the ire of students of Polish descent at the Kosciuszko junior trade school in Milwaukee, Alderman Clemens F. Michalski has asked that all films to be shown in the city schools be passed by the city's motion picture commission.

INSURANCE, CREDIT AGENTS, LAWYERS ASKED TO SERVE AS FILM ARBITERS

Allied Pledges Support to Arbitration System; U. S. Names Wright to Head Unit Policing Trade Practices

The American Arbitration Association, administrator of the arbitration system under the new consent decree, has gone to insurance companies, credit rating groups, bar associations and educational institutions to obtain nominations for arbitrators to serve on the local boards or Tribunals to be located in 31 key cities. Previously it had been expected that the AAA would consult local Rotary Clubs, Better Business Groups and Chambers of Commerce in selecting members of the local arbitration panels.

Allied States Association, meanwhile, offered its cooperation to the association, although emphasizing that it did not approve all sections of the decree. This stand was in direct opposition to that taken by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America whose president, Edward Kuykendall, singled out the arbitration set-up for special attack in his statement on the consent decree. (See page 14, MOTION PICTURE HERALD, November 30th.)

Robert L. Wright, special assistant to the attorney general, has been appointed head of the new U. S. law bureau of the Department of Justice which will check on distribution under the consent decree. The group not only will supervise enforcement of the decree and effects of the arbitration system, but will make a constant study to stop the introduction of alleged undesirable methods. The headquarters of the unit will be in Washington, but, of necessity, much of the work will be done in the field. No large staff is planned.

The five majors motion picture companies which signed the decree were beginning to call conferences of sales and studio officials to discuss the new decree and consider selling policies and production procedure under its terms. See page 22.

In Hollywood, after looking over the decree the studios have drawn "blue prints" for 40 films on order, estimated to represent $40,000,000 of production. See opposite page.

Braden Touring Districts

J. Noble Braden, executive secretary of the AAA, who is now touring the country, selecting offices for local boards and getting information about prospective arbitrators, was authorized by the administrative committee to contact the following organizations in the various key cities to obtain lists of possible arbitrators who satisfy the requirements set forth in the consent decree: Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., Equitable Life Insurance Company, National Association of Credit Men, Bar Associations and Educational Institutions.

The AAA regularly draws its list of arbitrators from men recommended by Chambers of Commerce, Rotary Clubs and similar groups. However, on account of the requirements of the decree that no arbitrator may have any financial or other connection, previous or present, with the production, distribution or exhibition of motion pictures or any interest in any theatre or any other interest, special investigations are being made before selecting members of the local panels. In the regular arbitration proceedings in other industries it often happens that both parties agree on an arbiter in that same field.

For the motion picture arbitration system the AAA, according to one of its spokesmen, is seeking trained and experienced business men and experts in the professions to serve on the local Tribunals.

Allied Offers Cooperation

Abram F. M[illegible], Allied general counsel, and Lee Newbury, president of Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey have forwarded to the AAA offers of cooperation, according to Paul Felix Warburg, chairman of the administrative committee.

It was pointed out by Mr. Myers that Allied was ready "to assist in any way possible" in setting up the arbitration machinery in the industry but the offer of cooperation did not "imply approval of all the provisions of the decree." Mr. Myers included a list of regional allied leaders who could be called on for help. Mr. Newbury wired his organizaiton's "support and cooperation."

In commenting on the offers of cooperation Mr. Warburg said, "They came as extremely good news to the Administrative Committee which is now completing its plans for organizing the Tribunals. Such evidences of cooperation on the part of major exhibitor groups will go a long way toward expediting the organizational work of the arbitration system. We feel confident that the industry in general and the theatre owners in particular will find arbitration a quick, efficient and inexpensive medium for settling practically every kind of motion picture trade dispute."

C. V. Whitney, president of the AAA, has announced the following budget committee which will determine the percentage of their gross income each of the five theatre-owning companies will pay towards maintaining the arbitration system: P. M. Haight, secretary-treasurer of the International General Electric Company and a member of the administrative committee, representative for the Association; Joseph H. Hazen, vice-president of Warner Brothers, representative for the five motion picture companies and, ex-officio, former Judge Van Vechten Veeder, chairman of the arbitration appeal board. Lucius R. Eastman, chairman of the board of the AAA, was named alternate for Mr. Haight. The chairman of the group will be selected at the first meeting.

S. D. Leidesdorf, CPA and treasurer of the Merchants Association of New York, has been added to the administrative committee. He is a member of the board of directors of the AAA.

On Wednesday morning the first official meeting of the administrative committee was held at the headquarters of the AAA in New York City. Mr. Warburg's committee considered what procedure should be established at the local Tribunals and what records should be kept. Forms for filing complaints and other matters were also discussed.

Exhibitors Continue Opposition

At the annual convention of the North and South Carolina Theatre Owners Association in Charlotte Monday Edward Kuykendall, head of the MPTOA, attacked the decree and charged that the Government lawyers had been "outsmarted." He also claimed that the decree, instead of abolishing blockbooking, really legalized it. The convention adopted a resolution criticising the Government's acceptance of a decree which would "work an undue hardship upon theatres."

The MPTOA, however, according to Henry G. Gray, counsel, plans no immediate action against the decree because it did not have a legal right to appeal from the action of Judge Henry W. Goddard in approving the decree.

Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners of New York, this week recommended that exhibitors give the decree a trial to determine its effect rather than continue opposition. However he pointed out that he did not agree with many provisions in the document. If the decree does not work Mr. Brandt indicated that he might support some form of legislation to correct alleged evils in the industry.

A. C. Hayman, managing director of the Lafayette theatre in Buffalo and president of the MPTO of Western New York, has sent a statement to Judge Goddard attacking the decree and predicting chaos in its wake. He said the decree was one of "the most outstanding betrayal stories in the annals of the amusement business."

"Instead of punishing the producer-distributors for their alleged illegal acts," Mr. Hayman said, "the Government proposes to turn the entire industry over to them, a proposal which will sound the death knell of the independent exhibitor."

On the subject of blocks-of-five he remarked, "The exhibitor is given the alternative of paying the price demanded for the five, regardless of their merit, or of closing his theatre through inability to procure film product.

"This plan is hailed by the government representatives as a new deal in the picture business. As a former film distributor more than 30 years ago, I can definitely state there is nothing new in it. It is a rehash of a similar plan attempted more than a quarter of a century ago and speedily abandoned as being impractical, unfair and unworkable.

"The decree further proposes a system of arbitration of industry disputes. Arbitration boards are to be formed in 31 film centers of the United States, under the supervision of the American Arbitration Association, at an estimated cost of more than $500,000 a year, to be included in rental price of the pictures, and therefore to be paid by the exhibitor."

Mr. Hayman also attacked the provision of the arbitration system which requires outsiders to be the arbitrators. "The situation will be

CONSIDERS FILING ANTI-TRUST SUIT

Fred Wehrenberg, co-owner of a chain of 25 neighborhood theatres in St. Louis and head of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Greater St. Louis, has announced that he has made no progress with distributors in a dispute over clearance dates. It was reported that he might file a suit charging a conspiracy to change clearance between second and third run houses in the territory. Mr. Wehrenberg claimed that in some cases the distributors conspired to give his competitors, chiefly Fanchon & Marco, an advantage in clearance dates.

Admissions in his theatres may be lowered from 25 to 15 cents, Mr. Wehrenberg said, because business is poor. It was said that the independents' buying strike in the area has continued.

TO END OTHER SUITS

comparable to that of delegating to an unskilled laborer the decision as to how and whether a surgeon should operate on an ailing patient for an obscure disease when the surgeon himself is in a quandary," he charged.

The statement ended with a plea for exhibitor cooperation, "It has become obvious that condition never could have occurred had the independent exhibitors been properly organized."

George L. Denton, Knoxville circuit operator, commenting on the blocks-of-five selling plan said exhibitors probably would have to buy weak pictures under the new system in the same proportion as under the old selling system.

R. M. Savini, president of Astor Pictures, said there was a general feeling of optimism in the mid-West territory which he recently toured, due principally to the immediate results of the consent decree. Mr. Savini said the resultant confidence among independent exhibitors of a new opportunity for expansion was shown by the fact that many new theatres were being built and under discussion. He added that the tendency was towards smaller houses allowing greater turnover and lower admission prices.

Amended Complaint Attacked

On Thursday morning the "Little 3", led by Louis Frohlich, counsel for Columbia were scheduled to urge Judge Goddard to refuse to accept the amended complaint submitted by the Government.

Columbia the same day was to argue its motion to have the anti-trust suit against it dismissed. If the motion to dismiss were granted, the action against Columbia, United Artists and Universal would probably be ended. To support the petition to have the suit dismissed Columbia's motion pointed out that Thurman W. Arnold, assistant attorney general, and Paul Williams stated at the time the suit was filed that the three non-theatre owning companies had been named defendants only in a subsidiary sense and that they were, in effect, regarded only as accessories to the alleged monopoly in the industry.

The Columbia motion for dismissal then pointed out that the consent decree made no mention of the existence or discovery of any monopoly. Also mentioned was the statement made by James Hayes, assistant attorney general, during the November 14th hearing that the three non-theatre owning defendants controlled only 15 percent of the business and that assets of the three did not equal the assets of one of the five theatre owning companies which consented to the decree.

It was reported that Universal and United Artists were considering joining Columbia in the move to have the suit dismissed against those three companies.

Other Trust Actions Dropped

It was reported that the Government was considering whether the pending anti-trust actions in Nashville and Oklahoma City could be settled by consent decrees. The time for the filing of answers in the field suits has been extended. A 30 day extension to January 2nd has been granted in Oklahoma City and a 60 day delay to February 2nd in Nashville.

Dismissal of the Government's conspiracy case involving violations of the Balaban & Katz consent decree in Chicago was urged and in Oklahoma City seven defendants were dismissed on the application of the Government.

Edgar Eldredge of Ottawa, Illinois, master-in-chancery for Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward, on Monday filed a report in the 12-year old conspiracy case against the principal motion picture companies in Chicago and Barney Balaban and urged dismissal of the action, it was reported.

The defendants were: Balaban & Katz Corporation, Barney Balaban, its president, B. & K. Management Corporation, Paramount Pictures, Inc., Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, United Artists Corp., Universal Film Exchanges, Inc.; Vitagraph, Inc., RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., Loew's, Inc.

The charges were brought against the corporations and Mr. Balaban two years ago when the government charged the defendants with conspiracy to restrain trade. Specifically they were accused of continuing preferential treatment of certain exhibitors, coercion of independent theatre owners and forcing the theatres to take all the product offered by the producers, in violation of the 1932 consent decree.

The consent decree signed in 1932 will be amended to conform with the consent decree signed by Judge Goddard with one notable exception, that on the definition of an independent exhibitor.

The Master's report which must be approved by Judge Woodward, discussed the long series of hearings held during the two year period the case has been pending, and further pointed out that during the time the case has been in litigation the government has abandoned some of the charges.

The government has until Aprli 1st, to file objections to the findings of Master Eldredge.

The case was instituted by the government in 1928 in the form of an injunction suit and resulted in the consent decree entered into in 1932.

Seymour Simon and Robert Wright, of the attorney general's staff, represented the government and at the offices of the trust division of the attorney general here no comment could be obtained. Attorneys in this office disclaimed any knowledge of any action to be taken by the government.

Court Dismisses Suit

Seven important defendants in the anti-trust suit against the Griffith Amusement Company and most of the major motion picture distributors were dismissed in the United States Court in Oklahoma City on Wednesday of last week.

Charles E. Dieker, Federal district attorney, filed a stipulation agreeing to the dismissal of the suit against Twentieth Century-Fox Corporation of Texas; Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation; Loew's Inc.; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation of Texas; RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.; Vitagraph, Inc. and Paramount Pictures.

Remaining defendants in the suit include the Griffith company; Consolidated Theatres, Inc.; R. E. Griffith Theatres, Inc.; and Westex Theatres Inc.

January 6, 1941, has been set for the continuation of the hearing in the $1,472,000 damage action of the LaCrosse Theatres Co., La Crosse, Wis., against Paramount, United Artists, 20th Century-Fox, Welworth Theatres Co. and the Minnesota Amusement Co. in the U. S. district court in Madison, Wis. The hearing was started October 29th and adjourned November 7th following the sudden illness of Robert A. Hess, Milwaukee, counsel for the plaintiff.

Judge Ernest Simpson of the Superior Court in Middletown, Conn. has set Friday, December 13th as the last day for filing of attorneys' briefs on the law in the conspiracy cases of S. & S. Theatre Corp. and Middlesex Theatre, Inc. vs. Salvatore Adorno, their partner and general manager in 1932-34. The case consumed six weeks in trial, almost 75 witnesses were heard, and over 100 exhibits filed. Plaintiffs ask $269,000 damages and an injunction against the Adorno interests preventing them from operating a theatre in Middletown.

Sunday Shows Are Still Discussed

The continual discussion of the exhibition of Sunday motion pictures was brought up again this week by the various state and local municipalities. In Delaware the Blue Laws Commission held a two-hour meeting in regard to the Sabbath status but no statement was issued concerning the recommendations to be made to the legislature.

In Williamsport, Pa., learning that the Sunday film issue was defeated by only 75 votes, members of the motion picture operators' union began circulating a petition asking an official recount of the city's vote.

The Tamaqua, Pa., Ministerial Association decided not to institute an election contest to upset the result of the Sunday film vote of last month after calling a meeting of all church members to inquire into the recount and ascertain the direct change in the result. Original returns in the vote showed that Sunday films were defeated by 41 votes but a later check of the machines in one district revealed an error of 120 votes which gave Sunday films an affirmative advantage of 79.

Also in Pennsylvania, the alleged oversight of Allegheny County commissioners in failing to provide ballots for referendum on Sunday films in four precincts may effect another vote on the issue. In the first vote Sunday pictures were defeated by 213 votes.

Chief of Police A. B. Crews, of Fayetteville, N. C., ignoring a court ruling that the city's anti-Sunday films ordinance was invalid, caused the arrest of three local theatre managers who opened their theatres on Sunday.

In Westfield, N. J., although the Sunday film question was approved by a 641-vote majority, the Town Council had declined to adopt an ordinance providing for Sunday shows. Instead the Council will meet December 9th to act on a measure which would prohibit shows from 6 to 9 p.m. Sunday proposed at the request of church leaders.

FWC, "U" Breach Healed

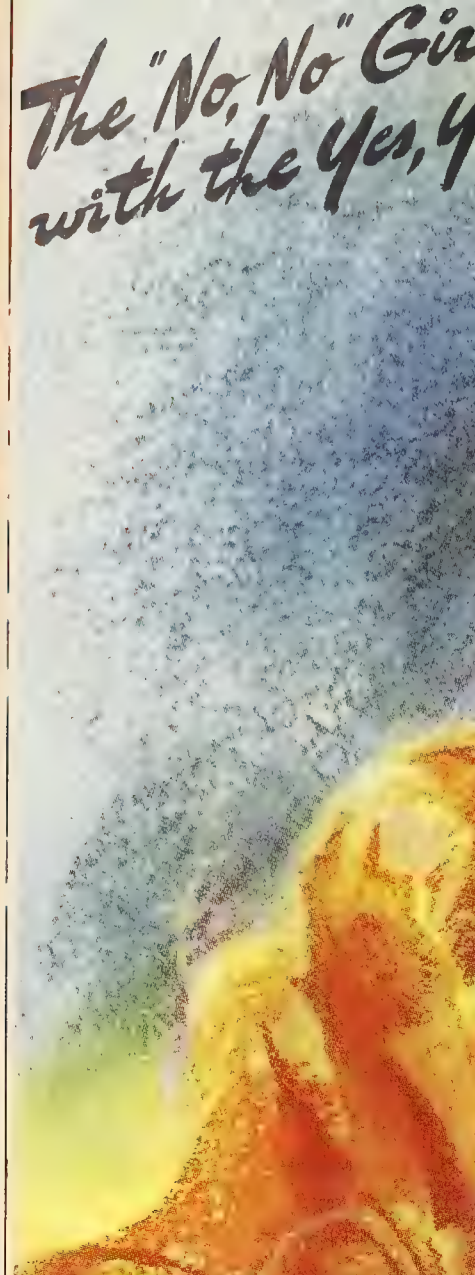
Fox West Coast and Universal have settled their difficulties over an extended first run of "Spring Parade," at the independent Hawaii Theatre, Hollywood, and FWC will book the film when available into subsequent runs. The latter had refused to book the film after it was moved over from the Pantages and RKO Hill Street.

Walker Accepts

Frank C. Walker, postmaster general, has given definite word that he will attend the sixth annual banquet of the Philadelphia Variety Club December 12th at the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, according to Ted Schlanger, chairman of the affair.

Acquire Flint Houses

Butterfield Circuit has acquired four theatres in Flint, from Lester Matt, independent exhibitor, giving the circuit eight out of 20 theatres in the city. Houses include the State, Strand, Roxy and Della.



Bartlestein Buys Circuit

The Brechta Theatre Circuit, Chicago, has been sold to Bartlestein Brothers circuit.

INDEPENDENT BUYING ONLY 67% COMPLETE FOR '41, REPORTS ALLIED

Second AID Report Made at Indiana Convention Lists Distributors' Variations from Announced National Policies

Independent exhibitors participating in Allied State's national product and sales policy survey have completed only two-thirds of their 1940-41 film buying. Of those reporting, the contracts of 52 per cent include a 20 per cent cancellation privilege and those of 11 per cent allow cancellations up to 10 per cent. The remainder did not stipulate the nature of cancellation allowances.

These disclosures will be made formally early next week, in the second product survey of Allied's Product Information Department, following their pre-release presentation, last week, by Sidney E. Samuelson, of Philadelphia, to members of the Allied-affiliated Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, assembled in annual convention, in Indianapolis, at the Hotel Antlers.

Mr. Samuelson, early in the convention, accused distributors of still withholding pictures, forcing shorts and features which exhibitors did not want, and other practices considered unfair by exhibitors—as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, November 30.

Warns on Admissions, Clearance

Later during the convention, Mr. Samuelson, speaking as chairman of Allied's Product Information Department, warned against "a trend" toward increasing admission prices and extending clearances.

"Remember that clearance has an unhappy knack of cutting both ways," he declared. "Clearance gains made by theatres in small admission brackets can result in pulling down business for the higher admission houses."

"Unless you watch this 'monkey business' of increased prices, you will wind up with contracts giving the distributor the right to raise admissions on several pictures each year and eventually actually setting the prices you are to charge at your box office," Mr. Samuelson warned the exhibitors, referring to the growing trend this season of distributors 'recommending to exhibitors that box office prices be raised for certain pictures selected by the distributor.

Mr. Samuelson then gave the Indiana exhibitors an advance insight into Allied's second Information Department product survey, reporting on the selling positions of the 10 distributors to date, on the basis of answers submitted to an Allied questionnaire by independent owners.

Buying by the independents reporting had been completed nationally on 67.8 per cent of films offered for 1940-41. In this connection, the sales positions of the 10 distributors among independents reporting was listed as follows.

Distributor	Per Cent Bought by Independent.
Warners	51.0
RKO	47.4
Paramount	46.4
Metro	45.9
Universal	45.4
Columbia	41.8
United Artists	37.8
Monogram	14.3

Mr. Samuelson, continuing with the Allied survey, reported an unusual divergence of distributor selling policies for Indiana this season, due, it was explained, to a virtual absence of large dominating circuits in the territory. This places territorial independent owners in a better position to negotiate contracts, whereas, in circuit-dominated sections, the independent is either cut off entirely from early product negotiations, or must abide by the policies set down.

In Indiana, reported Mr. Samuelson, the following variations were made for 1940-41 by distributors in their general sales policies.

Columbia, 95 per cent sold away from national policy.

Metro, 100 per cent adherence to national policy.

Paramount, 30 per cent away from policy, 70 per cent to it.

RKO, 65 per cent away from policy, 35 per cent to it.

20th-Fox, 40 per cent away from policy, 60 per cent to it.

United Artists, "No sales policy as far as I can discover."

Universal, 92 per cent away from policy, 8 per cent to it.

Warners, 29 per cent away from policy, 71 per cent to it.

1940-41 Rentals

The following indicates the status of prices paid by independents reporting nationally to Allied—whether the prices paid for 1940-41 product is the same, higher or less than last year (Differences between total percentages listed and 100 per cent totals are attributed to the failure of some independents to answer.)

Distributor	Per Cent Paying Same Rentals, or Less,	Per Cent Paying Higher Rentals
Columbia	69.5	9.8
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer	60.0	33.3
Monogram	60.7	7.2
Paramount	53.8	27.5
Republic	52.2	28.4
RKO	74.2	7.5
20th Century-Fox	68.1	14.2
United Artists	54.1	16.2
Universal	46.1	38.2
Vitagraph	56.0	26.0

"The practice of all distributors refusing to make available Class A product to theatres during the pre-Christmas period and the Lenten season is unfair and should be abolished," the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana declared in resolution adopted at the convention.

Another resolution said:

"We object to the action of certain distributors who insist on increased admission prices and extended playing time on individual pictures. This practice is an unwarranted interference with the operation of the theatres and injures good will be destroying consistency in operating policy to which the public has become accustomed.

"We object to the unfair practice of holding up availability to the exhibitor who refuses to increase his admission prices or extend playing time."

The Hoosier-State independents also pledged their support of the Allied Information Department and "individually resolved to cooperate with Allied in its program of gathering and disseminating information to independent exhibitors."

H. M. Richey, director of exhibitor relations for M-G-M, told the convention that producers' losses will be at least $5,000,000 because of loss of foreign markets and may run as high as $25,000,000. He advocated increased playing times and higher admissions as remedies.

Carolina Owners Meet

At this weeks' annual North-South Carolina Theater Owners convention, at Charlotte, Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president, denounced the consent decree. The distributors' lawyers "outsmarted" the government," he charged, adding that the decree legalizes block-booking instead of prohibiting it, will prove costly and hurtful to the entire industry, and that it is satisfactory to nobody in the industry.

Mr. Kuykendall opposes arbitration by outsiders who know nothing of the industry, and asserted the distributors "brought this all on themselves aided and abetted by some exhibitors."

A resolution was adopted expressing regret that the Government has adopted "a regulating decree that is looked upon with much disfavor by exhibitors generally and which will work an undue hardship upon theatres."

C. H. Arrington of Rocky Mount was elected president, succeeding H. R. Berry of Hartsville S. C. Berry was chosen vice-president; Roy Rowe of Burga was elected second vice-president, and Mrs. Pauline Griffith was renamed secretary-treasurer.

Addresses were made by William Conn, Webb theatre, Gastonia; Roy P. Rosser, Temple, Sanford, and Roy Rowe, Pender, Burga.

The following directors were elected: Frank Beddingfield, O. T. Kirby, George D. Carpenter, E. L. Hearne, H. F. Kincey, Albert Sottile, J. F. Miller, A. F. Sams, Jr., A. I. Mason, Ben Strozier, C. B. Floyd, Lyle M. Wilson, H. E. Buchanan and George W. Parr.

Plan Business Drive

In a drive to increase theatre attendance, Northwest Allied has organized an intensive campaign among its members to win the public back to the box office. Increased playing time for outstanding attractions will play a major part in the exhibitors' drive for increased revenue. Increased admission scales, even for special attractions, however, have been barred.

The campaign will be highlighted by extensive use by member theatres of valances, institutional trailers, bannerettes featuring special films and distribution of lapel badges. Special window cards and frames and newspaper and direct mail campaigns also are planned.

The general aim of the campaign is to provide greater emphasis and exploitation for the better pictures through publicity and extended playing time, which will be provided. The drive to increase theatre attendance and public interest in pictures will be the major objective of Northwest Allied during the new season.

Meanwhile Northwest Allied protested, this

AFL WANTS CURB ON TRUST ACTIONS

Last week at the American Federation of Labor's convention in New Orleans a vigorous attack was made on Thurman W. Arnold's policy of prosecuting labor unions as well as companies under the anti-trust laws. The New Deal was urged to curb the anti-trust drive against unions.

The report said, "We must demand from those occupying higher positions than the person in charge of the anti-trust division that they curb these unwarranted and destructive activities against organized labor."

Exhibitor Groups Discuss Practises

week, against the action of Minneapolis exchanges in extending clearance in 20- and 25-cent houses from two to three weeks. Film companies have, at Allied's request, suspended operation of the new move for 30 days, while the exhibitors' committee discusses clearance problems in the Twin City with them.

The organization has gone on record as opposed to advanced admission prices for special pictures. Members also want Columbia to include its "Arizona," on the 1930-1940 contract.

Committees Designated

Committees were named at the meeting of the newly-formed South Jersey unit of Allied Theaters of New Jersey, at the Broadwood hotel, Philadelphia, on Monday, as follows:

Entertainment—John Harwah, Mt. Ephraim; Mrs. Frances Fineman, Haddonfield; Mrs. Rose Picione, Landisville, and Murray Sternberg, Woodstown. Film committee—Ralph Wilkin, Pitman; H. A. Hill, Paulsboro; Clark Hildinger, Trenton. Legislative committee—Si Myers, Trenton; Jack Waxmann, Atlantic City; Mrs. Hildinger, Trenton.

E. Thornton Kelly, field representative of Allied submitted a report on national and State activities. Next meeting will be held January 6th.

The Northern New Jersey unit met Tuesday in New York.

The meeting was conducted by Maury Miller of Passaic, vice-president of the unit, in the absence of Lee Newberry, president, who is away on vacation.

Abram Myers' analysis of the consent decree was discussed by the 30 members who attended.

Set Annual Convention

The annual convention of the Kansas-Missouri Theatres' Association, will be held in Topeka, Kansas, December 17th, President Frank Cassil announced, this week, in Kansas City. Mr. Cassil indicated that the principal topic of discussion would be the consent decree. The convention had been postponed several times until outcome of the decree was made known. Legislation also will be discussed since the Missouri and Kansas Legislatures meet in January.

Boasts Biggest Group

The largest exhibitor association in Illinois and one of the largest state organizations of its kind in the country is the record set by the United Theatre Owners of Illinois in the five months it has been organized, Edward G. Zorn, president of the UTOI, claimed this week.

The enrollment of paid members in the organization at the end of five months was 256, he reported. This makes the UTOI almost a third larger than any other exhibitor organization in the state.

Plans are now being discussed for a meeting of motion picture exhibitors from all over the state to be held in Springfield, early next month. The geographical location of Springfield—in the center of the state—makes a popular place for the meeting.

Mr. Zorn, while announcing the growth of the organization, praised William F. Crouch, executive secretary, for his efforts in developing the UTOI. During the time the association has been formed, Crouch has toured the state getting members. At present, every district in the state, outside Chicago, is represented, making the UTOI definitely an all-state organization.

Latest additions to the organization are Ken Childs who operates theatres in Streator and Jacksonville; the Tri-States theatres in Moline and Rock Island; Arthur Struck, Arlee theatre, Mason City; Lake theatre, Antioch, and Fred Bron, Jr., Times theatre, Rossville.

George Brown Joins Directors' Guild Staff

The Screen Directors Guild in Hollywood, this week, named George Brown, former publicity director for Columbia and until recently a member of Warners' studio publicity department, to the executive staff as an advisor on public relations. Mr. Brown refused to say whether he would resign or apply for a leave of absence from Warners.

He was a newspaper reporter for a number of years after leaving college, then handled publicity for Reisenweber's, former New York night club. At 27 he was advertising manager for Universal, remaining there eight years. He free-lanced for a time, handling publicity for Helen Morgan, Texas Guinan and Harry Richman. After doing publicity for RKO, he became, in 1932, director of advertising and publicity for Columbia and stayed three years. In 1937 he was appointed publicity director of Columbia's studios in Hollywood. Later, he joined the Warner studio publicity staff.

Frank Braden Ahead Of "Fantasia"

Frank Braden, ex-theatre publicity agent and formerly associated for 12 years with the Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus, was to leave New York this week, for a tour of Washington, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago, in advance of Walt Disney's "Fantasia."

Under the direction of Richard Condon, publicity director, Mr. Braden will pave the way for local campaigns and exploitation stunts in key cities where the Disney film will be shown. Previously, he was connected with Fox West Coast, Fox New England and other theatre chains, also handling vaudeville and legitimate attractions.

Murray Returns

William Murray, former Grand National office manager and booker in Albany and Buffalo, has returned to that city as booker for Monogram. He succeeds Mitchell Pantzer, who resigned to accept a position with a major circuit.

Mr. Murray, employed by various film companies in Albany for 15 years, managed the Auto Vision Theatre, operated by Owen Holmes, Springfield, Mass., exhibitor, last summer.

Name District Manager

Jesse Day, former manager of the Rialto Theatre, Fort Dodge, has been appointed district manager in charge of northern Iowa for the Central States Theatre Corp. The post is a newly-created one, which Mr. Day will assume December 1st. H. N. Schrodt will manage the Rialto.

Munsell Joins Drama Board

Warren P. Munsell, Sr., has been named managers' representative to the three-man permanent tribunal set up to administer the amended Dramatists Guild pact governing the sale of stage plays to motion picture companies. Brock Pemberton, producer, has been named alternate representative.

New Branch for Universal

Universal will erect a two-story building at an estimated cost of $35,000 to house its branch office in Cincinnati, Ohio. Peter Rosian is the local branch manager.

Stage Season Set In Philadelphia

Philadelphia legitimate theatres are promised a new lease on life with an abundance of theatrical fare, studded with many screen names, promised the Forrest and Locust St. theatres for the next three months, according to the announcement of bookings made by Lawrence Shubert Lawrence, who operates the two houses for the Shubert interests.

New Musical To Open

Following the current engagement of "DuBarry Was a Lady" at the Forrest with Bert Lahr, Frances Williams and Benny Baker in the cast, "Pal Joey," a new musical with Vivienne Segal, Gene Kelly, Jack Durant and movie starlet Leila Ernst opens a 10-day engagement on December 11. On December 26, Dennis King makes his bow as star and producer of a new musical play, as yet untitled, with Walter Catlett, Paula Stone and Marcy Westcott. "Crazy With the Heat," another new musical with Willie Howard and Luella Gear follows for a single week on January 13 with Alexander Woolcott in "The Man Who Came To Dinner" following on January 20 for two weeks. For February, "Hellzapoppin" is scheduled to open an indefinite engagement on the 17th with an April booking also set in, the Lunts coming in for two weeks on the 14th with "There Shall Be No Night."

"Off the Record," with Bruce Cabot, Betty Furness, Hugh O'Connell, Mary Brian and Dennie Moore opens a fortnight's engagement at the Locust St. Theatre on December 9th following the current run of Flora Robson in "Ladies in Retirement." Other Locust St. bookings bring Dante's "Sim Sala Bim," magic show on December 23 for a fortnight; Alan Dinehart, Glenda Farrell and Lyle Talbot follows on January 6 in "Separate Rooms" for two weeks; with two more weeks starting January 27 for "The Time of Your Life" with Eddie Dowling and Julie Haydon.

Other bookings for the Shubert houses, although no definite dates have been set as yet, include "The Male Animal" with Elliott Nugent; a return of Grace George in "Kind Lady"; revival of "Blind Alley," the gangster melodrama; and a revival of "Blossom Time" with Everett Marshall and Nancy McCord.

William Goldman, who took over the operation of the Erlanger Theatre last month, has promised legitimate attractions for the house with "Life With Father" mentioned for Christmas.

The emphasis on movie names has not been at the legitimate theatres alone. Since Warner Brothers returned vaudeville to its downtown Earle Theatre, the stage emphasis has been on those with a Hollywood background instead of a steady parade of name dance orchestras as in previous seasons.

Miami Adds Three Houses

Paramount Enterprises, Inc., will operate 16 theatres in Miami and Miami Beach, this season, three more than last year. Four will be new houses, recently completed. Paramount's Community, in Lincoln Road, has been sold to Bradley-Thompson, Inc., for $142,500. It will be torn down and replaced by stores in the Spring.

The circuit is preparing to open its new 1,600-seat de luxe house on Lincoln Road; to be called the Beach Theatre; a second in Coral Gables, seating 1,000; a third recently completed in the northwest section, seating 1,000. Already operating, is its new Boulevard on Biscayne Boulevard in the northeast section.

DUAL SALES POLICY U.A.'S ANSWER TO NEW ORDER UNDER THE DECREE

Exhibitors May Be Offered Option of Buying in Single Block or Blocks-of-Five; Trend to English System Is Predicted

United Artists may distribute the 15 to 20 pictures on its 1941-42 schedule both by the old single block system, because the company "never will be" a party to the consent decree, and on the block-of-five trade showing method, if required by competition or exhibitor preference, according to present plans. If the optional selling policies were adopted each exhibitor could decide for himself which method he wished to use in buying United Artists pictures.

Sees Weak Features Eliminated

Maurice Silverstone, chief of the company's world wide operations, said Tuesday in New York that the consent decree might be a means of eliminating a good proportion of poor pictures. Competition is so keen for the domestic market, now that foreign distribution is limited, he pointed out, that distributors would not be able to sell four weak pictures along with a single hit film.

"We are heading very fast in this country towards the English system of selling," Mr. Silverstone predicted. He said that after the Films Act, which he called the English equivalent of the Consent Decree, was passed grosses went up "amazingly" on good pictures. The poor pictures failed to get wide distribution. Under the Films Act pictures are sold after they are made.

Mr. Silverstone pointed out that United Artists was not a party to the consent decree and asserted that "it never will be." The company sells pictures singly, sometimes in advance of production, sometimes after, according to the wish of the individual producer. This year the whole program was sold in advance with the exception of Alexander Korda's "Lady Hamilton."

Better Pictures Predicted

Arthur W. Kelley, new general sales manager, commented that while the company might be obliged to offer its pictures next season on the old and new selling systems it was his opinion that most of the exhibitors would prefer to buy their films in the old way.

"Fewer pictures mean better pictures and better sales opportunities," Mr. Silverstone said in explaining the company's decision to release only 15 or 20 pictures in 1941-42. With the exception of the Walter Wanger and Hal Roach units all the other United Artists producing groups may each make only one picture during the year. Mr. Wanger and Mr. Roach may each produce more than one film.

Quality product will be necessary to compete in conditions imposed by the consent decree, with pictures probably sold on their individual merits, Mr. Silverstone said. Another reason for emphasizing quality and releasing fewer pictures is the loss of the foreign market, he remarked.

Mr. Silverstone said negotiations were under way for "at least four new producers." The deals for the producers are contingent on the important setup that the prospective UA producers can present. In this connection Mr. Silverstone mentioned the importance of the director in any production setup. Also, he said the company would attempt to develop new faces and exploit them to the public.

United Artists will ask 50 percent of the gross during the general release of "The Great Dictator" beginning in the late Winter, if Charles Chaplin, the producer, agrees to the terms, according to Mr. Kelly. In the special pre-release engagements the company was reported to be asking 70 per cent.

Under present plans exhibitors showing the Chaplin picture on general release will not be required to increase admissions. They may be asked to do so but the decision will rest with the individual exhibitor.

In January Mr. Silverstone and Mr. Kelly will discuss selling terms with Mr. Chaplin in Hollywood. In some cities general release can not begin until six months after the close of the pre-release engagement.

Producers Committee Discussed

The company's producers have formed a committee, Mr. Silverstone said, to meet regularly. Of this general committee a smaller committee will be formed to present suggestions to the company as to selling policy and other matters. Walter Wanger is the first chairman. The committee, he said plans to meet about once a week.

Objectives of the new committee were described as primarily cooperative. These include avoiding duplication of story material, simultaneous production and release of films and the exchange of ideas on talent and production methods and closer cooperation with each other and the home office. Mr. Kelly is scheduled to go to the coast after the first of the year to discuss the situation with the producers.

In this connection Mr. Silverstone said that in the 21 years of existence of the company United Artists producers always have had the right to approve or reject, no matter how large or small, any agreement the company makes with the buyer on their product.

Goldwyn-UA Relations Improved

Although pointing out that he had no authority to speak for Samuel Goldwyn, producer, who has been sueing the company, Mr. Silverstone said that relations had improved and he said that he believes there a genuine desire on the part of Mr. Goldwyn and on part of the company "to get together."

On the same day reports came from the Coast also indicating that the rift between Mr. Goldwyn and UA may be healed. Charles Schwartz, company attorney, and James Mulvey, Eastern representative for Mr. Goldwyn were reported to have conferred. Mr. Korda also is said to have attempted to bring about an amicable solution of the year and a half old dispute.

In New York also on Tuesday Federal Judge Edward A. Conger reserved decision on an application of United Artists Corporation to dismiss the complaint of Mr. Goldwyn which seeks cancellation of his distribution contract. If the application is denied UA asks as an alternative that Mr. Goldwyn be required to separately state and number his causes of action.

The pre-trial examination of Mr. Korda will be held in abeyance until the Judge gives a decision on the application to dismiss the complaint. If Mr. Korda is unable to come to New York a deposition will be taken on the West Coast.

Personnel Changes

Haskell Masters, Canadian division manager of United Artists, has not decided on an offer of a home office position with increased duties, according to Mr. Kelly.

Al Margolies, publicity manager, has been appointed director of publicity, under a revision of the department Mr. Silverstone said. Monroe Greenthal, head of the department, will name someone to take his former post as exploitation manager when he returns from the West Coast next week.

Other personnel changes announced by Mr. Kelly include Earl Collins, United Artists branch manager in Denver, becomes branch manager of the Los Angeles Exchange, replacing Ewen MacLean, resigned. Al Hoffman, chief salesman in the Denver territory, takes Collins' place as Denver branch manager. Alex Singelow, Denver salesman, moves into a more important post with the Seattle Exchange. Jack O'Bryan also makes a promotional move from Seattle to the San Francisco Exchange.

Neither the Fairbanks, Goldwyn, Korda nor any other stock has been offered for sale to stockholders or directors. Mr. Silverstone said that under the by-laws of the company the stock must be offered to the corporation and none has.

"Thief" Release in Chicago

"The Thief of Bagdad", Alexander Korda's color production will not be sold at increased prices to exhibitors nor will there be increased admissions at the box office in Chicago. This was learned after a conference betwen Jack Kirsch, president of Allied Theatres of Illinois and representatives of the United Artists exchange in Chicago.

The film was originally sold in the 1939-40 contract as a "black and white". With the start of hostilities in Europe, Mr. Korda brought some of the members of the cast from England to the United States and completed the picture in color. It was reported that plans were being considered to release the picture on a road-show basis with an increased admission price at the box office. Mr. Kirsch protested the proposed increase and after a series of meetings with United Artists heads in Chicago it was agreed upon to maintain the original status of the film as provided for in the selling contract.

Eight UA Films Ready

Within the next four months United Artists will have ready for release the following eight productions: "Lady Hamilton", Alexander Korda film starring Vivien Leigh and Lawrence Olivier; Sol Lesser's "That Uncertain Feeling", Merle Oberon and Melvyn Douglas; Gabriel Pascal's "Major Barbara", Wendy Hiller and Robert Morley; James Roosevelt's "Pot O' Gold", James Stewart and Paulette Goddard; "So Ends Our Night" produced by David L. Loew and Albert Lewin, starring Fredric March, Margaret Sullavan and Frances Dee; "Topper Returns" and "Broadway Limited" from Hal Roach and "Cheers for Miss Bishop", Richard A. Rowland production.

U. A. GIVES BONUS TO ENGLISH STAFF

The United Artists board of directors has voted a "substantial bonus" for approximately 450 employees of the company in Great Britain, including those now in military service. The action was taken as a special reward for the way British workers are carrying on the company's business under difficult circumstances.

MAJORS CALL SPECIAL SESSIONS TO DISCUSS DECREE APPLICATION

Sales Staff and District Changes Aimed at Adaptation to New Order Begun by Distributors; Studio Executive Meetings Set

Major distributors are calling special conferences of production and field staffs to discuss the application of the consent decree to product and policies.

Reorganization of selling forces to adapt them to the new order is also under way. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has announced the creation of a new sales division and four new sales districts, and Warner Brothers two weeks ago, at the time the decree was signed, made a number of changes in the sales personnel.

Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, will preside at studio conference about the middle of January. Paramount studio officials and home office and theatre executives met two weeks ago on the west coast.

The consent decree, parts of which have already gone into effect, has been a factor in the various changes in field selling organizations and in special meetings. This week Hollywood was considering the decree from a production viewpoint and was preparing "blue prints" of $40,000,000 worth of product on order. Story on page 12.

So far as the decree itself was concerned, the principal activity was at the American Arbitration Association where plans were being made to have the arbitration machinery established in the decree operating by early February. See page 13.

United Artists was speculating on the adoption of a dual selling system for 1941-42, one the present system and the second a system similar to that under the decree. See page 21.

Up to now the companies have given little indication of definite selling procedure. It was reported that this was being done so that the competition would not learn the other company's plans too soon and also because the exact selling methods have not been finally determined. The most complete statement of selling policy under the decree was made by Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, who said that, according to present plans, 1941-42 pictures would be made available in each district only after preceding blocks-of-five had been bought and booked and that selling probably would be by territories. The story was on page 14 of the November 23rd issue of the HERALD.

MGM Forms New Division

William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, announced on Monday the creation of a new central sales division to be headed by E. K. O'Shea, formerly New York division manager, and four new sales districts. The changes are to be effective January 1st or as soon after that date as practicable.

It was reported that the changes in the sales organization were decided on in anticipation of the conditions which will prevail after September 1, 1941, when the block-of-five and trade show provisions of the decree become effective. Mr. Rodgers explained the new set-up at a sales meeting in Chicago over last weekend.

The new district managers are: John P. Byrne, Boston branch manager; Rudolph Berger, Washington branch manager; John J. Bowen, New York branch manager, and Burtus Bishop, Jr., Pittsburgh branch manager.

Other promotions include the following: Thomas J. Donaldson, New Haven branch manager, succeeds Mr. Byrne in Boston; Ralph Pielow, Albany, takes Mr. Bowen's place in New York; John S. Allen, Cincinnati salesman, becomes Washington branch manager, succeeding Mr. Berger; Bryan D. Stoner, Cleveland salesman, becomes Pittsburgh branch manager in place of Mr. Bishop; Maurice Goldstein, Boston salesman, becomes New Haven branch manager, and Herman Ripps, New York-New Jersey salesman, goes to Albany as branch manager.

The promotions were made from men in the company ranks. Vacancies made in the sales force are also expected to be filled from within the organization. It was said that division of the territories would make possible closer supervision and analysis of each branch office's problems.

Sales Alignment Announced

MGM announced the new sales alignment as follows:

Among home office sales managers, Thomas J. Connors will supervise the districts headed by Maurice N. Wolf, Mr. Bowen, Mr. Berger, Charles E. Kessnich, the Philadelphia office headed by Robert Lynch, and Canadian offices. Edward M. Saunders will supervise the districts headed by John E. Flynn, Mr. Byrne and George A. Hickey; and Mr. O'Shea will supervise the districts headed by Harris P. Wolfberg, John J. Maloney and Mr. Bishop.

Among district managers, Mr. Wolf will supervise the Boston, New Haven and Albany offices; Mr. Berger, the Washington and Charlotte offices; Mr. Bowen, New York and New Jersey; Mr. Maloney, Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit and Pittsburgh; Mr. Wolfberg, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Indianapolis; Mr. Bishop, Kansas City, Memphis and Oklahoma City; Mr. Kessnich, Atlanta, Dallas and New Orleans; Mr. Byrne, Des Moines, Omaha, Denver and Salt Lake City; Mr. Flynn, Milwaukee, Chicago and Minneapolis; and Mr. Hickey, Los Angeles, Seattle, Portland and San Francisco.

The Chicago sales meeting last weekend was attended by some 50 branch and district managers and other officials. Others from the home office included Howard Dietz, advertising and publicity director; T. J. Connors, E. K. O'Shea, E. W. Aaron, Alan F. Cummings and Tyree Dillard, of the legal staff, who explained the decree. Also considered were plans for the general release of "Gone With the Wind" and forthcoming pictures.

About the middle of January Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, will open a series of conferences at the studio during which preliminary plans for the 1941-42 season will be considered and general effects of the consent decree discussed. Those scheduled to attend the meeting include the following: Herman Wobber, general manager of distribution; Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board; Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production, and William Goetz, assistant to Mr. Zanuck.

The effects of the consent decree on selling policies and practices will also be considered at a series of meetings for branch office personnel. Sessions will be held at all branches. William Sussman, W. C. Gehring and William Kupper, division managers, will preside in their territory. A member of the home office legal staff will also speak at each meeting. Felix A. Jenkins, general counsel, was reported to be preparing a manual outlining operations under the decree for use by the field force.

The week of December 8th to 14th has been designated as Branch Managers' Week by 20th-Fox in the S. R. Kent Drive. M. R. Levy, drive leader, will conduct the final branch meeting of the campaign at the New York exchange on December 9th.

RKO Meetings Scheduled

Andy W. Smith, sales manager of RKO, has been presiding at a series of meetings at Western exchanges at which the problems created by the decree will be considered from the viewpoint of the field selling force. Discussions with branch managers were scheduled at the following exchanges: Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Denver and Salt Lake City. Also considered was the company's new product. Mr. Smith was accompanied by J. H. MacIntyre, Eastern district manager.

Nate J. Blumberg, president of Universal, arrived in Hollywood Wednesday to begin a survey of forthcoming product in preparation for the annual product conference of home office and studio officials scheduled for next week.

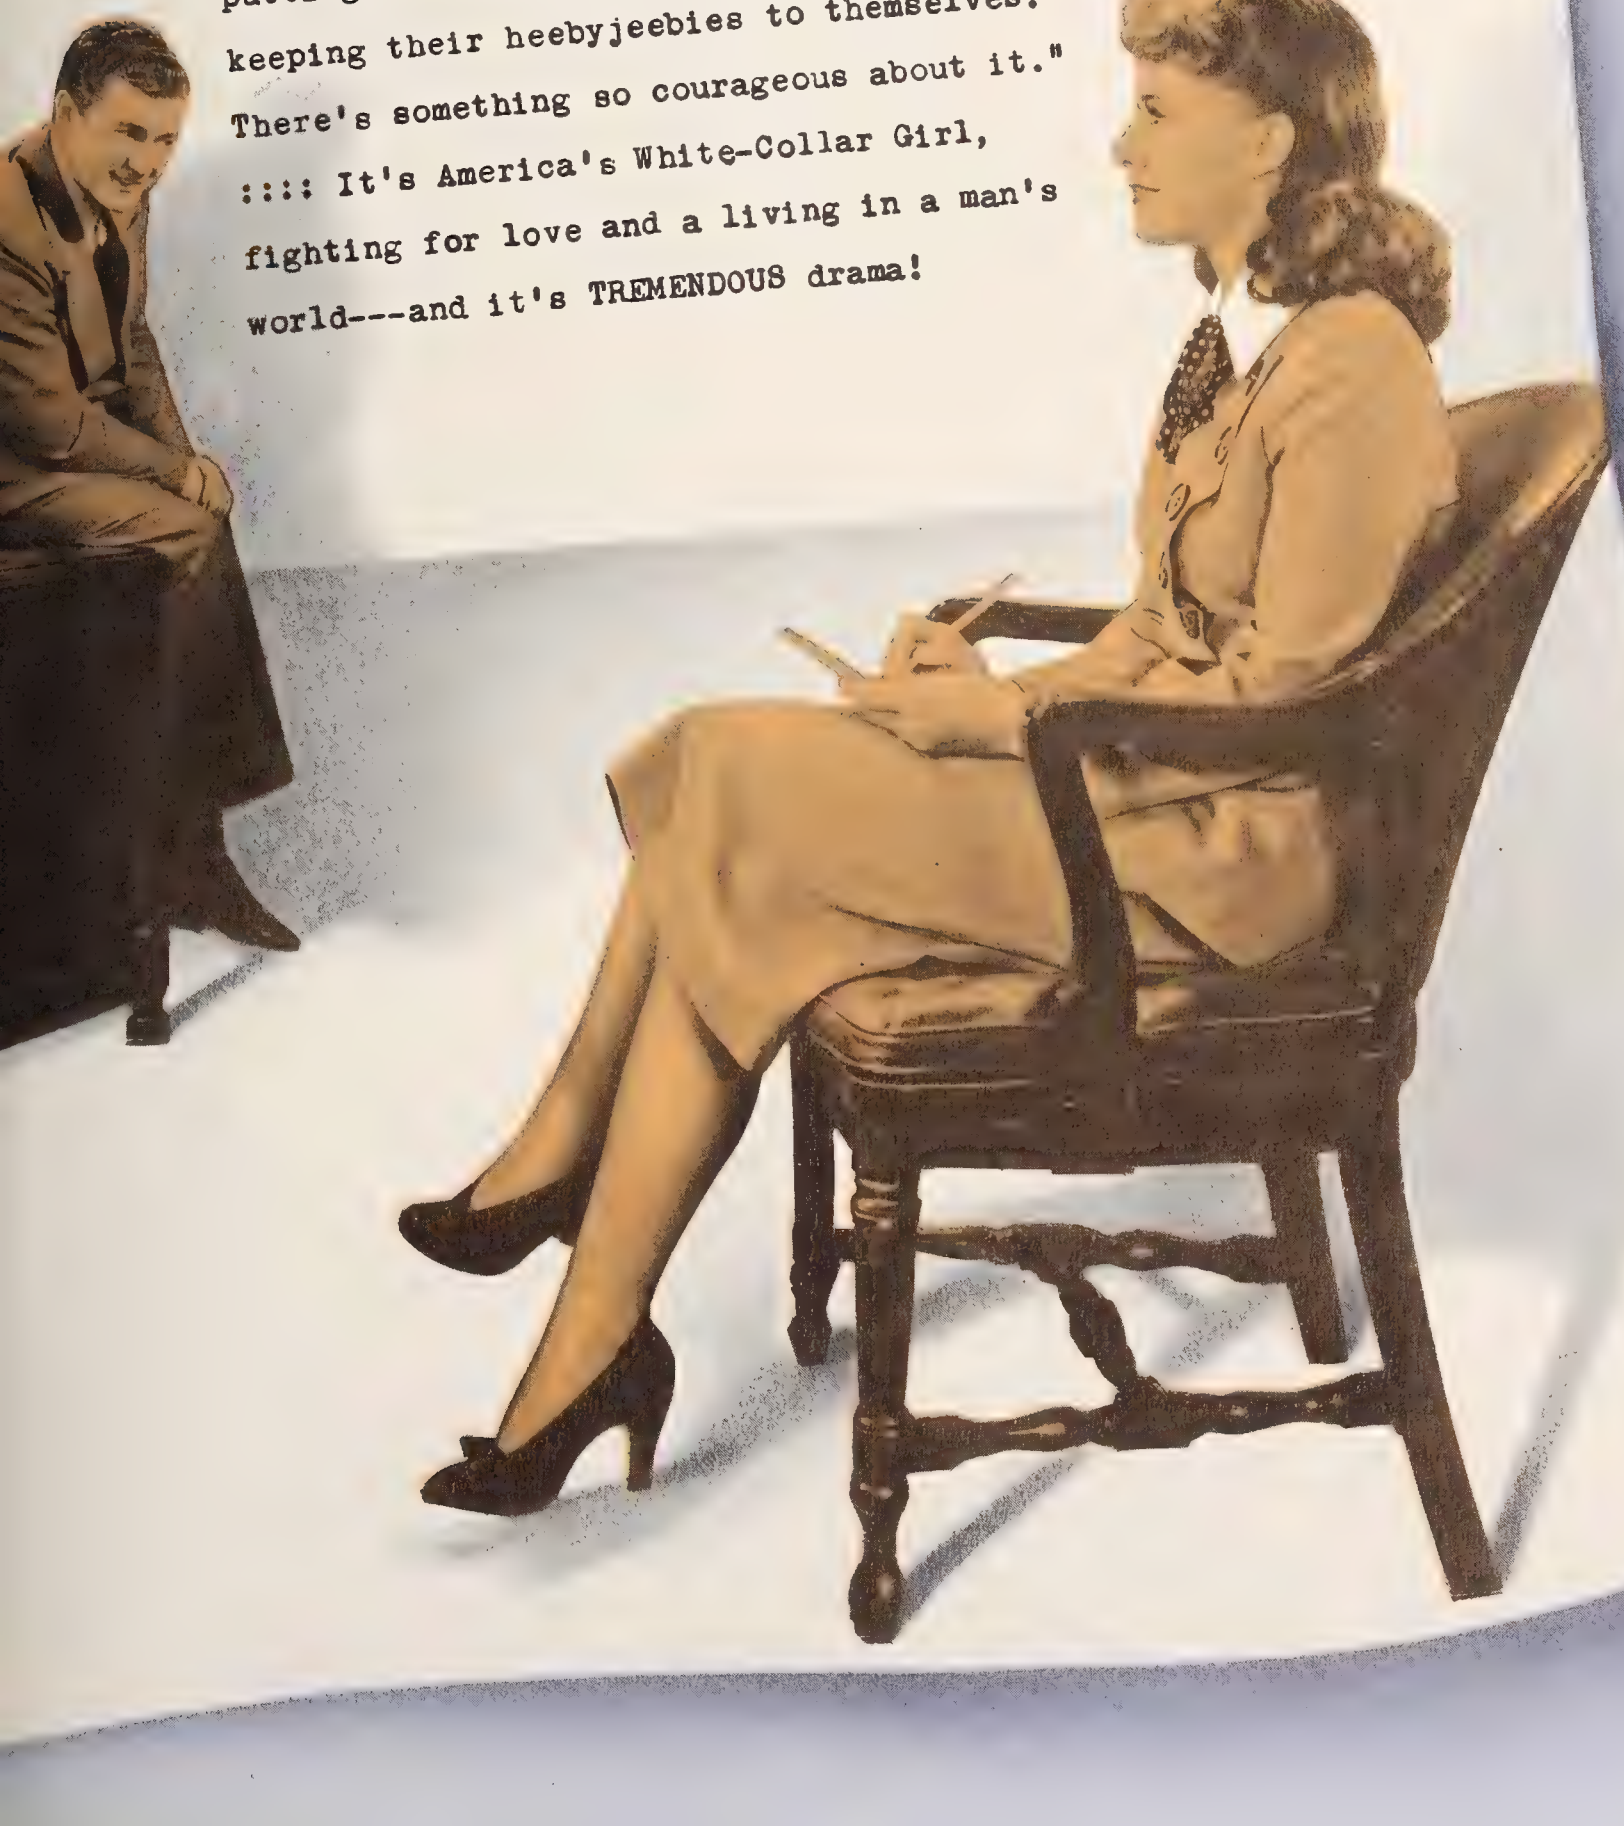
Others planning to go to the West Coast next week include: J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board; W. A. Scully, vice-president and general sales manager, and Joseph H. Seidelman, vice-president and foreign manager. Studio officials to attend the meetings include Cliff Work, Matthew Fox, Milton Field and John Joseph.

Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager of Warner Brothers, is making a tour of Western and Southern exchanges in connection with the new season's selling campaign. The tour will end at the studio. Mr. Sears is expected back in New York in about three weeks.

Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner Brothers theatres, presided over a two-day meeting of zone managers on Tuesday and Wednesday at the home office. Those scheduled to be present were:

James Coston, Chicago; Nat Wolf, Cleveland; I. J. Hoffman, New Haven; Don Jacocks, Newark; Moe Silver, Albany; John J. Payette, Washington; Herb Copelan, Atlantic City, and Howard Waugh, Memphis; from the Home Office, Clayton Bond, Ed Hinchy, Leonard Schlesinger, Harry Goldberg, Frank Phelps, Nat Fellman, Abel Vigard, W. Stewart McDonald, Harry Rosenquest and others.

LOS ANGELES POLICE SEEK CENSOR POWER



Recommendations that the City Council enact a theatre licensing measure giving the Los Angeles Police Commission the power to close houses showing indecent films or playing questionable shows have been made this week by the Police Commission. The Council took no action.

Films which have an industry Production Code seal would be exempt from scrutiny but the measure would be aimed primarily at imported films about which there have been many complaints.

"When I think I was 28 this year and what I've gone through in ten years, it's almost funny. But I'm here to say I've had joy and given it and I was in there fighting. I read about the guts of the pioneer woman. What about the woman of the covered typewriter? I see them on subways and buses, putting up a good fight in their pretty clothes, and keeping their heebyjeebies to themselves. There's something so courageous about it."

LITHO U S A

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

WITH ALL THE NEWSPAPER obituary attention to the passing, last Sunday, of Charles Richman, 70, matinee idol of yesterday, there was overlooked entirely, probably the most colorful incident of his 46 years in theatricals, an incident, ironically, which carries many parallels of America and World War I and America and World War II.

Unintentionally, on his part, Mr. Richman, in 1915, was in the middle of a heated argument between Americans with sympathies for and against U. S. aid to the Allies against Germany.

World War I had been in progress a year in the autumn of 1915, when, as Terry Ramsaye records in his "Million and One Nights," history of the motion picture, the pressure of political and economic events were operating to draw America closer to the struggle. The first motion picture recognition that it might be America's war, too, came with Commodore J. Stuart Blackton's swift enthusiasm over Hudson Maxim's war-inspired book, "Defenseless America," a title, incidentally, which easily applies to some conversations and writings anent the state of affairs today.

Commodore Blackton, who conducted Vitagraph, which later formed the nucleus of the present Warner Brothers' film distributing system, read Maxim's book one night and dashed off a letter to the author asking for filming rights. He enclosed a check as first payment as material evidence of his earnestness.

Under the title of "The Battle Cry of Peace" the picture was pretentiously produced and duly presented in September, 1915, at the Vitagraph theatre on Broadway. The picture starred Norma Talmadge and Charles Richman.

It was a preparedness preachment which won warm endorsement from the belligerently minded, most conspicuously from Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, the Rough Rider, former President of these United States, who, at the time of Commodore Blackton's "Battle Cry of Peace," was having a bully time with the Army's Plattsburg (N. Y.) training camp.

National exploitation of the picture began.

Just when Henry Ford had begun to put his mind on Peace and a Peace Ship envoy to Europe's war fields, on December 1, 1915, Mr. Ford's Detroit was "bombed" by an airplane—an airplane laden with advertising matter for "The Battle Cry of Peace." This was no time to litter up Ford's front yard with heralds on a war movie. He was positively annoyed. He promised to look into the matter and give it sincere attention, later. At the moment he was busy on the blue prints of a plan to "get the boys out of the trenches by Christmas."

On April 12, 1916, Mr. Ford finally did get around to "The Battle Cry of Peace." On that day important papers all over the country carried a full-page, paid proclamation by Ford charging that the picture was plain propaganda for the professional war merchants and munitions makers. He pointed out that Maxim munitions corporation stock was on the market.

Vitagraph countered with a suit against Ford for one round million dollars, and the fight was on.

MAJOR CURTIS—HE WAS SOME ACE

Edward Peck Curtis, Eastman Kodak's ambassador of raw-film sales to the motion picture industry, this week returned to the service of the United States Army, resuming his commission as Major, with the Air Corps Plans and Operations division.

Out of World War I, the then 21-year-old U. S. Army air ace carried the Distinguished Service Cross, the Order of St. Anne and the Croix de Guerre, tributes from the United States, England and France, for two years of air exploits about which much is written in the war records of those three governments.

. . "Ted" was 20 when he arrived in France, in 1917, as an ordinary ambulance driver. When he was mustered out, two years later, he was an ace, with six enemy planes to his credit, and the youngest major in the American air service. He flew with the 95th Aero Squadron, the first American squadron to go to the front.

Irving Liner, manager of the Fabian circuit's Proctor's theatre, Troy, New York, is one of the few survivors of the "Lost Battalion."

Mr. Liner is a patriot, says he will not tolerate any Fifth Columning—least of all, in his theatre.

Which brings a story.

The other night, out of the darkness of the auditorium, rushed a woman patron, panting. A man next to her, she said, was taking motion pictures off the screen. And on the screen were newsreel shots of the Watervliet arsenal, near by.

Mr. Liner sent an usher to collect the culprit. Two minutes later the usher appeared in Mr. Liner's office, dragging a little man, all of five feet two, and "scared to death." From his hand drooped an eight millimetre motion picture camera.

The man looked suspicious—he had one of those Prussian haircuts.

With the diplomacy that precedes a call to the authorities, and sensing something of importance, Mr. Liner put his arm over the man's shoulder and said patronizingly:

"I understand you've been taking pictures of the arsenal, off the screen?"

"Yes," the man replied, in a voice quite American—"did you see the shot of the man painting the barrel of the big gun?"

Mr. Liner acknowledged he had.

"Well," said the little man, "that was me."

And that quiet, unassuming, soft-spoken George Borthwick, custodian of funds at the Hays office in New York, is the same George Borthwick who fought with that hard fightin', hard bitin' "Ladies from Hell" Scottish regiment in World War I. The French nicknamed them so because of their kilted-skirts.

THE RIPLEY DEPARTMENT: "Minnie," house cat at the Queen theatre, St. Stephen, New Brunswick, Canada, not only keeps that border picture house free of rodents, single handed, but is a business booster for the theatre—giving special attention to a hotel directly opposite, and bearing the same name as the theatre.

Minnie leads a parade, nightly, across Water Street, from the hotel to the theatre. Both are owned by the William Smith estate. Charles E. Staples has managed the theatre for the past quarter century.

Just before the theatre opens each night, at seven, Minnie assembles a party of transient and permanent guests of the hotel dining room customers, and local droppers-in, by rubbing against trouser or silk stocking legs. She widens her following as she walks along the street. People come regularly from across the river and U. S. boundary in Calais, Milltown, Woodland, Baring, Princeton, all Maine border towns, to the Queen to see Minnie do her stuff.

Two youthful miscreants thought they had the perfect theatre crime within their grip the other night as they approached the cashier's window at the Colonial Theatre, Albany, N. Y.

As they approached the ticket window the boys opened a cardboard box and threw mice into the cage operated by Cashier Caroline Singer. As Miss Singer reacted in an entirely female way to the threat, one of the boys grabbed the loose change. Miss Singer recovered quickly, however, grabbing the invader's arm, meanwhile calling for Manager Everett Stutz, who put an end to the holdup.

Spyros Skouras, senior brother of the brothers Skouras of the Skouras theatre operating family of the east, the midwest and the west, has been flying around the country, north and south and east and west, calling on Greeks in America to contribute $10,000,000 for the relief of their countrymen, and their women and children in the war with Italy.

Skouras reminds his countrymen here of Thermopylae, that famous pass some nine miles south and southeast of Lamia, where, in the year 480 B. C., a mere handful of Greeks heroically held off vast armies of Persians from invading Greece, the while the country behind them prepared for the invaders, much in the same manner that the Greeks, some 2,400 years later, are battling invaders in the mountain passes today.

LARGE SCREEN TELEVISION SHOWING PLANNED FOR NEW YORK THEATRE

RCA to Show 9 by 12 Screen at Public Demonstration This Month; Network Operation Is Goal, NBC Executive Says

Large screen, theatre-size television is ready to emerge from the laboratory-private demonstrate stage to public exhibition.

American theatre television, with a picture 9 by 12 feet, will be shown publicly for the first time within three weeks at the New Yorker theatre in New York by the Radio Corporation of America, according to Frank Mullen, vice-president and general manager of the National Broadcasting Company, and A. H. Morton, NBC vice-president in charge of television.

In June, 1939 Gaumont-British showed its Baird large screen television system, also with an image 9 by 12 feet, in New York City. Also another British Company, Scophony, is now preparing to demonstrate its theatre television apparatus in New York. Before the war interrupted television in England both Baird and Scophony had installed their equipment in several theatres.

Intermediate Size Shown

RCA showed its wide-screen television, 4½ by 6 feet, to the members of the Federal Communications Commission at Camden, N. J., in February, 1940, and to its stockholders in New York last May. The intermediate model between the home receivers with a 10-inch picture and the planned theatre system giving an image 9 by 12 feet or larger could be used in schools and small auditoriums, it was said. However no effort has been made to market the 4½ by 6 feet RCA projector and the company's engineers have been working on a system which will meet theatre standards.

Instead of the projection system used by Baird and Scophony, which is somewhat similar to regular motion picture projection, the RCA apparatus used a method adapted from equipment used in astronomical work.

Dr. Morton of NBC said it was not certain whether theatre television programs would be transmitted by radio on frequencies which home sets could not receive or by special telephone wires. The Bell Telephone Company is conducting experiments to develop wires suitable for theatre television.

NBC's ultimate aim in television is national and not local coverage, according to Mr. Mullen who said, "Television will not get anywhere without national syndication. Television, ultimately, will be network, not local. Our ambition is national television."

$500,000 for Television Development

A sum of $500,000 is being spent each year by NBC on television development, Mr. Mullen said. He pointed out that the company was proceeding with plans to link New York, Philadelphia and Washington in the first television network. The FCC has already approved the location of the Washington transmitter at the Wardman Park hotel and NBC is now looking for a suitable site in Philadelphia.

NBC will continue with its television development program even if the FCC does not grant commercial status to the new entertainment medium, following the report in January of the National Television Systems Committee, it was said. National defense, requiring special consideration to Government orders, will not cause NBC to suspend television operations, it was also remarked. Delays however are expected in obtaining certain parts and equipment from manufacturers.

By the end of 1941 the four New York television stations (NBC, DuMont-Paramount, Columbia Broadcasting System and WOR-Bamberger) will be offering about 21 to 35 hours of weekly television programs in the opinion of Dr. Morton. The hope was expressed that the various stations would stagger their programs so that the television audience could witness all the programs that are telecast over the air.

To make a necessary checkup and overhaul following special FM tests for the industry television committee seeking standards to recommend to the FCC, the NBC station, W2XBS, will be closed down from December 4th to December 11th. On Tuesday night the motion picture "Circumstantial Evidence," with Chick Chandler and Shirley Grey was shown. Other programs scheduled wrestling and college basketball.

Heads Paramount Station

Lewis Buddy, formerly in charge of Paramount News in Europe, has been appointed director of the Television Productions station in Los Angeles. Television Productions is a Paramount subsidiary.

Paul Raibourn, Paramount television coordinator, said Tuesday in New York that Mr. Buddy would go to the West Coast to take over his television duties about the first of the year. It was reported that the Television Productions station in Los Angeles would begin operation in the spring.

Equipment for the Paramount station in Los Angeles will be manufactured by the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories in which Paramount has a substantial interest. The DuMont company is completing work on its New York television station and also has received a license for a transmitter in Washington. DuMont also maintains an experimental station at the laboratory at Passaic, N. J.

In Chicago work is also continuing on the Balaban and Katz television station atop the State Lake theatre building. No date for the beginning of program operation has been announced.

Howard Gates, former vice-president in charge of engineering for the Detrola Radio Corporation, was appointed president and director of the Majestic Radio and Television Corporation, effective last Sunday, December 1st, according to an announcement by Elmer C. Upton, treasurer of Majestic and Balaban and Katz official in charge of television.

In June the reorganization of Majestic was approved under a plan which gave control to the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Paramount television affiliate. Mr. Upton, Allen B. DuMont and Paul Raibourn are directors. Other directors include Curtis Franklin, Parker McMahon and Rex Parkin.

Mr. Gates succeeded Walter Glenn Scott who was acting president from the reorganization until last week. Mr. Gates has a background of 21 years in designing, engineering and building radio receiver sets.

Majestic is the successor of the Grigsby Grunow Company and its offices and factory are locted at 2600 West 50th Street, Chicago. The company is expected to manufacture television sets under the DuMont patents when mass production becomes advisable. The main DuMont Laboratory in New York would then specialize in experimental work and the construction of a limited number of custom made television receivers.

Review of Year Published

"Television's First Year," a promotion booklet, has been distributed by NBC to television set owners in the New York area. The booklet is a worthwhile addition to television literature, chronicling important events that were televised during W2XBS's first year of regular programs. Television pioneers who appeared on various programs during the first year were listed.

Last week the Columbia Broadcasting System participated in the observance of National Art Week by showing, over its color television system, reproductions of paintings by American artists. Guests included artists, critics, museum directors and members of the National Art Week committee. Gilbert Seldes, CBS director of television programs, said in introducing the program, "When color television has reached into the American home, we hope it will become a great force for wider appreciation of the visual arts, as radio has been for the appreciation of fine music."

According to present reports the National Television Systems Committee will not make its final report to the FCC until a month or more beyond the original deadline of January 1st. A progress report will be made at the public meeting with the FCC scheduled for January 27th. However at that time the commission will not ask for definite recommendations on the question of what standards should be adopted.

The FCC has granted a modification of a construction permit authorizing the WCAU television station in Philadelphia. The transmitter will be located at 117 S. 17th Street, Philadelphia. Dr. Leon Levy is president of the WCAU Broadcasting Company.

"Valuable Information"

To the Editor of the Herald:

I am glad to be able to contribute to "What the Picture Did for Me" because by doing so I may be able to help other exhibitors, as I, myself have received valuable information from this department. When I receive my copy of the Herald I always read "What the Picture Did for Me" before looking at any other part of your magazine.

I may also add that we have been only in the show business for four years, and I can truthfully say that I do not think we could have carried on so well only for the help we obtained from read the Motion Picture Herald.

U.S. 'WATCHING CLOSELY' AS MUSIC WAR SPREADS

Justice Dept. Officials Deny Impending Radio Investigation but Admit Studying "War"

Despite reports that the Department of Justice was about to launch an investigation of monopoly in broadcasting "as soon as adequate personnel is available," anti-trust division officials this week declared there has been no change in the situation. However, the Department is watching the fight between ASCAP and the broadcasters, as the broadcasters near the zero-hour for stopping all ASCAP music on chains, December 31st.

It was suggested that the reports were based on recent developments in the fight between the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and Broadcast Music, Inc., together with the opening of oral argument by the Federal Communications Commission on the monopoly report submitted by its special chain committee last June. Story on page 57.

It was explained by Department officials that the division "has been in and out" of the radio situation right along, but it was declared there was nothing new and that there was no present intention of launching an investigation of possible monopoly.

Watching Music Fight

On the other hand, the Department is watching the music fight closely and may make some move in the direction of a new investigation. It was pointed out that investigations have been made of ASCAP, and it was indicated that after the turn of the year, it would be quite in order, to complete the picture, to study BMI and also the possibilities of some agreement among users of music to refuse to play ASCAP music.

However, no such step would be taken for at least a month after the proposed new set-up goes into effect January 1st, when ASCAP will be barred from many stations, in order that there may be time for the situation to settle down, it was said.

The Columbia Broadcasting System banned all ASCAP music on its sustaining programs last Sunday, December 1st. Only BMI music or music in the public domain will be played on non-sponsored programs. If no new contract with ASCAP is signed by January 1st all the Society's music will be put off the CBS network.

NBC - MBS Effect Ban

The National Broadcasting Company and the Mutual Broadcasting System plan similar action. On December 15th NBC will follow the action of CBS by barring ASCAP music on all non-commercial remote pick-up programs. On Sunday, December 8th, Mutual is scheduled to drop the Society's music from sustaining programs. All the bans apply to remote pick-ups as well as to studio programs.

If the ASCAP-radio industry music fight is not settled shortly musical films may lose some radio exploitation and indirectly the motion picture owned or controlled music publishing houses may suffer.

However, it was reported that the CBS copyright department has decided that ASCAP music may be played over the network after January 1st when used as part of a dramatization of the full story, or a substantial part of it, from a musical film. But independently tunes from musicals, if by ASCAP members, cannot be broadcast under the ruling.

The basis of the dispute is that ASCAP has proposed a new contract calling for rate increases which, according to the National Association of Broadcasts, would make the radio industry pay about $9,000,000 for the use of music in 1941. Radio interests wish to only pay for the music which is actually used. Payments to BMI are based on the number of times each song is played.

On Monday Gene Buck, president of ASCAP, announced that 44 persons had been added to membership in the Society. 139 new members have been added this year, bringing the total to 1,306, including 1,166 composers-authors and 140 publishers. It was pointed out that the membership is greater than at any time since the Society was founded in 1914.

Many Applications for Membership

Mr. Buck said, "the unprecedented number of applications for membership in the Society, at a time when the radio chains are exerting every effort to induce composers to join their subsidized music organization, reflects the feeling on the part of music creators that ASCAP is best equipped to protect their rights and to serve the interests of music in general."

He also remarked, "Although the chains have been able to hold the whip over band leaders, singers and advertisers up to now, the public will soon have something to say about it."

Among the new members announced by Mr. Buck were Eugene Ormandy and Aaron Copland. However, Mr. Copland, who is president of the American Composers' Alliance, wired Mr. Buck Monday denying his election saying the announcement, "was designed to obscure the real attitude of ASCAP toward the serious musicians and the serious music of America." Mr. Buck remarked that Mr. Copland had never indicated his wish to withdraw an application for membership made in 1937.

Meanwhile BMI increased its music catalogue by acquiring Cuban music of Institucion Nacional de Autores, Compositores y Editores de Cuba and of the Sociedad General de Autores de Cuba. Beginning on January 1st it will also control the music of the Society of Authors, Composers and Editors of Music in Mexico City.

No AFM Strike

In Chicago officials of the American Federation of Musicians denied that any general sympathy strike of musicians to aid ASCAP in its dispute with radio interests was planned.

Jack Robbins, of the Big 3 music publishing company, Robbins, Feist and Miller, said, "Never in the past three years has our gross business reached the high level it did during October and November. That's why we're not alarmed over the radio-ASCAP situation."

A number of band leaders and other song writers were reported to be holding back publication of new compositions until the BMI-ASCAP struggle reaches a climax sometime after the first of the year when all ASCAP music is expected to be barred by the networks and a number of independent stations.

WCFL, Chicago station, operated by the Chicago Federation of Labor, has signed a new five-year music license contract with ASCAP, according to an announcement by Mr. Buck. The station will feature the slogan, "Chicago's Station for Good Music."

The National Association of Broadcasters, headed by Neville Miller, has issued a pamphlet called, "Portrait of a Protector" which explains, with drawings, the position of the radio interests in the dispute with the Society.

CANADA BANS REPRODUCER IMPORTS, CAMERAS, PREMIUMS 'FOR DURATION'

New Restrictions to Conserve Exchange Include 1,000 Items; End of Giveaways Seen; New Accessory Centralization Idea

The premium-giveaway practice virtually came to an end this week at Canadian theatres for the duration of the war. The Canadian War Government, on Tuesday ordered immediate discontinuance of all imports—other than those from countries in the British Empire, of all items of chinaware, cutlery, toilet-ware, glassware, jewelry trinkets, and the like, most of which have been used for theatre giveaways.

In a further tightening of the Dominion's economic structure for war purposes, to conserve the country's monetary resources, the Government acted swiftly to stop imports of nearly 1,000 items, among them printed paper accessories, air conditioning equipment, cameras, and sound reproducers for theatres and elsewhere. There was no mention of films or projection equipment.

While the motion picture industry in Canada escaped new taxation in the new Federal budget adopted Tuesday, the curtailment of the aforementioned articles, obviously, will have some effect on industry operations.

Plan Accessory Unit

Probably anticipating the banning of printed film accessory imports from the United States, the source of such material for films of U. S. distributors, interests in Canada, last week, approached a new plan for the centralization of printed advertising matter in Canada. The practice in Canada heretofore has been that each exchange covers its own territory in such advertising distribution.

Now, it is proposed to relieve the exchanges of distributing advertising matter and establish a clearing house for each territory. Although exchanges and advertising bureau will be in the same communities, and will cooperate, they will be under different auspices.

Sponsors of the centralization plan contend it would coordinate all the advertising distribution and improve conditions for both distributors and exhibitors.

Postpone Clearance Meeting

The meeting of the Motion Picture Section of the Toronto Board of Trade, to consider further steps in connection with the organization of the National Clearance Board for Canada, has been postponed to provide time for further study of the situation.

The board, as now proposed, would have equal representation of three members each from the circuit interests and from the independent exhibitors. The distributors, however, have requested membership places as well. Organized independents have proposed equal representation for the exchanges.

Named to Film Board

J. D. Davidson of London, England, has been named assistant commissioner of the National Film Board of the Dominion Government, of which John Grierson is the commissioner. Mr. Davidson was a member of the Film Section of the Empire Marketing Board and, more recently, was with the General Post Office Film Unit, which was organized in England by Mr. Grierson.

Clair Hague, president of the Canadian Picture Pioneers, has launched a move for the organization of a Variety Club in Toronto for the purpose of providing a social center for film trade old-timers and raising funds for administrative and charity accounts. Mr. Hague pointed out that the Pioneers had sponsored many features for the benefit of worthy causes but the organization had little money of its own.

War Activities

Both sexes in the St. John film colony, N. B., are participating in war activities. The Film Girl's Patriotic Club, composed of female employees of the exchanges, have made their debut as sponsors of entertainments with refreshments for the men of the Canadian army and air force and of the Canadian and British navies and merchant marine. The girls are also knitting socks, sweaters and mufflers for the service men during lunch hour at the exchanges and at home.

On the male side, two of the exchanges are being represented in the army reserve for home defense by three staff members each. Arthur Heenan, Walter Rowley and Edward Cox are in uniform from Universal, with which is merged Empire Films, and William Steen, Fred Mann and Leslie Kerr are in home defense from Twentieth Century-Fox.

The six drill two nights a week and are also called on for Saturday afternoons and Sundays for war maneuvers and parades. Sam Kunitzky, a partner of Sam Jacobs in Eastern Films, an independent exchange, is in the draft and will do a month's soldiering at Fredericton, N. B., with the possibility of this being prolonged to four months.

Net proceeds of $22,300 were made available to air raid victims in England from the patriotic rodeo in the Toronto Coliseum under the auspices of the Canadian Motion Picture Service Committee, according to N. L. Nathanson, chairman. The four performances drew a total of 23,500 persons. The committee in charge of the show was part of the Canadian Picture Pioneers.

Famous Players Canadian Corporation has equalled its 1939 dividend record on the common shares of the company by the declaration of a fourth payment of 25 cents to be made December 27th for the final quarter of the current year, making a total of $1 for the 12 months.

Hamilton United Theatres, Ltd., a subsidiary operating theatres in Western Ontario, has also declared a dividend of 1¼ per cent on the preferred shares, payable at the end of the year.

The Halifax city council has endorsed the opening of theatres on Sunday to provide entertainment for service men. The provincial government has the final word.

Community Border Theatres

Not to be deprived of their movies, residents of the islands of Grand Manan, Deer and Campobello, on the Canadian side of the U. S.-Canadian border in the Bay of Fundy have opened community theatres, since war restrictions have prevented them from attending U. S. theatres in nearby Maine.

Campobello, which came into public view when President Roosevelt chose it for his summer vacation some years ago, has its Maple Leaf Theatre; Deer, its Mayfair Theatre. Both houses are converted public halls, seating 400. Grand Manan was the first of the three islands to acquire its own theatre. Failure to have the border and currency restrictions modified led residents of the three islands to open their own houses.

Each of the three theatres is a community enterprise. The Maple Leaf was financed by the taxpayers. Reversing an age-old habit, residents of Lubec and Eastport, Maine, now travel to Deer and Campobello for their movies.

Restrictions on cross the border, imposed by U. S. and Canadian authorities and the latter's currency restrictions, established as a war measure, had cut Canadian patronage of U. S. border theatres to zero. Before the war, Canadians motorboated to the Maine border towns of Lubec and Eastport or took ferries to those towns to attend the movies.

Taxes Hit Profits

The annual report of Marcus Loew's Theatres, Ltd., Toronto, has disclosed improvement in net operating profit for the fiscal year ending August 28, last, but higher taxes reduced the net profit to $94,508, from last year's $121,000. Company's properties include Loew's Theatre in Toronto, and the Uptown Theatre, leased to Famous Players Canadian Corp.

During the past year, preference dividends totaling 14 per cent were paid to stockholders covering arrears up to December 31, 1938. Notice has been given of a 3½ per cent dividend on the arrears of the preferred shares, to be paid December 21st to stockholders of record December 7th.

Loew's London Theatres, Ltd., operating Loew's Theatre at London, Ont., showed an increase in revenue of $10,920 over last year's total of $148,266 and net operating profit of $28,872. After taxation and other charges were deducted, however, the net shown was $7,707, compared with $11,815 a year ago.

GOVERNOR ESTIMATES YEAR'S FILM RECEIPTS

Governor Herbert H. Lehman, New York, for a second year came within 3 per cent of estimating the total fiscal year receipts of the Motion Picture Division. Last February, the Governor's budget to the legislature estimated $300,000 gross receipts and $245,000 net profit, while the figures were $311,800 and $247,922.24, respectively, as reported in Motion Picture Herald, November 30th, page 21.

A year ago Governor Lehman also estimated $300,000 receipts, and the division, under Irwin Esmond, received $298,023.50, with a $230,727.05 net as against the Governor's $233,000 figure.

Actually Governor Lehman has a tougher job in computing receipts than it would seem, since the number of original films licensed at $3 and prints at $2 per 1,000 feet widely fluctuate from month to month.

Levy $250 License Fee

An annual fee of $250 will hereafter have to be paid by the Runnemede Theatre, Runnemede, N. J., to the municipality, the Borough Council voting to enforce a long dormant amusement license ordinance. The theatre, the only one in town, formerly paid no license fee.

Joins Monogram Staff

Victor D'Ambrozio has joined the sales staff of Monogram in Philadelphia.

NO EXTRA CLEARANCE FOR CAMPS; SPECIAL STAGE SHOWS ORGANIZED

U. S. Navy Now a $400,000 a Year Film Customer, and Spending $300,000 a Year for Theatre Equipment

Motion picture distributors are understood to have no intentions of upsetting film clearance schedules in sectors where U. S. Army camps or posts are operating or are contemplated to house the new defense army, despite demands of Army officers that releases of new pictures be advanced for Army posts, and ten-cent admissions charged.

As has been pointed out, film distributors have no general policy for clearance covering theatres at Army camps, the local, individual exchange of each company being expected to decide what clearance is reasonable with local conditions. Usually clearance is worked out for Army showings just as it would be for regular houses in the vicinity, with regular exhibitor customers receiving clearance over the camps when posts are near towns having theatres.

Theatre Preference Seen

In distribution circles in New York it is generally believed that while there is no desire either by the companies or exhibitors to place the army camp theatres in any unfair position in the matter of clearance, the general policy will be to release pictures to the camps only after theatres in the surrounding area have played them.

Because of the delicacy of any public discussion which might be misinterpreted or misunderstood either by the public, patriotic groups or press in these days of war-defense fervor and fever, distribution officials at New York home offices are reluctant to openly state their positions on the subject of Army clearance as against clearance for theatres in a competing zone.

Typical of the distributors' policy, however, one executive of a company among the "Big Three," has said, "To protect exhibitor customers the company has tried to reasonably hold back dates on Army bookings," adding that they would not consider waiving clearance on engagements for Army theatres.

Ten days ago, Major General William N. Haskell, commander of the New York 27th Division, encamped at Fort McClellan, Alabama, disclosed that he was making an effort to get current releases at the camp at a ten-cent admission. He wrote to the War Department at Washington, complaining that "his boys" were seeing pictures at least 30 days later than regular theatre exhibitions at Anniston, only six miles away. General Haskell also has free shows in mind.

Meanwhile there has been no open statement from the War Department on what it intends doing about the General's complaint, if anything.

Businessmen Set Up Entertainment Unit

Proceeding, independently, without waiting for the formulation of plans by any regular branches of theatricals—stage, vaudeville, road show—to route units over all or part of the country's new system of Army encampments, little businessmen of America this week took unexpected and swift action to place entertainment in camps without further delay.

Recognizing the need for entertainment to maintain the morale of draftees, the Smaller Business Association of New York, of which Henry Modell is president, announced plans, Monday, for the formation of a central clearing house to coordinate all activities relating to recreation of conscripts in training, first in camps in the First Army Area in the East. It is hoped that the system will spread to other Army groups throughout the country.

Military and Government officials have given their enthusiastic support to the project, it was said. These include: Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, Lieutenant General Hugh A. Drum, Commander, First Army; Colonel Julius Ochs Adler, Arthur V. McDermott, executive director of the New York Selective Service Board.

Also Lieutenant Governor Charles Polletti of New York; Governor A. Harry Moore, New Jersey; Major General Clifford R. Powell, Commander, Fort Dix.

Radio executives, including Donald Flamm of WMCA; William S. Paley, of CBS, and Alfred McCosker, of Mutual, are giving their support, according to Mr. Modell.

Mr. Modell said: "We are convinced of the need for keeping the draftees happy, especially those of us who are veterans of the last war. Officials of the Army are convinced also of the need for entertainment and for a coordinating "group which will prevent overlapping and duplication of effort."

Mr. Modell announced that the group plans to hold monthly vaudeville shows in the various camps within the First Army area. The first show was held at Camp Dix, N. J., Thursday. Last minute efforts were being made to secure services of Kate Smith to sing "God Bless America."

Among three entertainers scheduled were the Argonne players who enacted plays in the Argonne Forest during that battle in the last war and the Camp Upton singers, who appeared in "Yip Yip Yaphank," presented at the Century Theatre, shortly after the outbreak of World War I. Some ten acts entertained.

Assisting Mr. Modell in formulating and executing plans are: Nick Kenny, Allan Corelli, Al Rogers, Adolph Pincus and Jack Lowe.

Major W. G. Donahue, morale officer of Camp Dix, furnished the entertainers with meals at the training camp. Some 2,000 draftees, confined by routine quarantine, witnessed the show.

The formation of the entertainment clearing house and presentation of shows at regular intervals is part of the "national unit campaign," of the Smaller Business Association.

MORE FILM MEN LEAVE FOR ARMY

Appointed this week to a first lieutenancy of Company I, 51st Regiment, New York Guard, John B. Kimmis, manager of Fabian's Staten Theatre in New Dorp, N. Y., is a veteran of China and Philippine service with the U. S. Army. He held expert rating in the use of the machine gun, rifle, pistol, bayonet, mortar and hand grenade, while in the army. He has been instructor to West Point Cadets and policemen in the use of pistols and machine guns.

The first employe in the home office of RKO in New York to enlist is Bernard Cohencious, of the purchasing department. He volunteered in the regular army and accompanied a contingent to Camp Upton, N. Y., last Saturday. He has been working for the company four years.

Myron J. Segal, eldest son of Harry Segal, president of Imperial Pictures in Boston, has enlisted in the National Guard's Quartermaster Corps.

Navy Now a $400,000 Yearly Film Customer

Uncle Sam's Navy stands today a $400,000 a year customer of U. S. motion picture distributors, and a $300,000 a year customer of motion picture equipment manufacturers and theatre supply dealers.

Expansion of the Fleet has made it necessary for the U. S. Navy to increase its contracts with motion picture producers from two to three prints of each picture it buys, with indications that a further expansion will be necessary as additional vessels are commissioned and to provide recreation for men at the new naval bases recently secured from Great Britain, it was disclosed Monday in the annual report of Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, chief of the bureau of navigation, in Washington.

Rental costs of pictures distributed by the Navy during the fiscal year ended June 30, last, was $386,631, of which $199,993.99 came from welfare and recreation funds appropriated by Congress and the remainder from ships' stores, ships' exchange, ships' service and Marine Corps post exchange profits and from the Navy bureau's reserve. The Coast Guard and Army Transport Service, which avail themselves of the Navy's distribution machinery, contributed in proportion to the films used.

During the year approximately $10,499 was expended for miscellaneous supplies and maintenance for the Navy motion picture exchange, and $293,028 was spent for new equipment for ships and stations.

"Home Talent" Shows On Air from Camps

The NBC-Blue network will inaugurate a series of 13 programs from Army training camps, starting Friday, December 20th, at 8 P.M. A mobile unit will pick up the entertainment, to be furnished by the trainees themselves. The schedule begins with Fort Dix, followed by Langley Field, Fort Bragg, Camp Jackson, Fort Benning, Fort McClellan and others.

Assisting the conscripts in staging the shows will be George Hicks, special events announcer, and Lester O'Keefe, program director.

Wider Radio Scope In New War Plans

Wider participation of broadcasters in development of plans for war-time control of radio, is evident in the announcement by the Defense Communication Board in Washington, this week, that the broadcasters may also be represented on the Industry Advisory Committee, "whenever a problem involving domestic or international broadcasting shall arise." This is in addition to the broadcasters' representation on their own advisory committees—domestic broadcasting and international broadcasting.

The National Association of Broadcasters has been invited to name a representative to the International Broadcasting Committee. The former was not included among the groups from which nominations were sought. Representation of the broadcasters on the industry advisory committee would give them a voice in the most important group working under the defense board.

The Americas

Latest step in "hemisphere solidarity" undertaken by the industry, an action pattern commented on previously in the pages of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, is set for this month with a four city preview on the part of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

On December 17th, MGM's "Flight Command," which deals with U. S. naval aviation and stars Robert Taylor, will get a quadruple premiere in Washington, Havana, Mexico City and Toronto. The affair will also serve as a studio salute to Pan-American Aviation Day, set aside by Congressional resolution and authorized by White House proclamation. Marking the anniversary of the first flight of a heavier than air machine, the commemorative event is expected to be an annual event.

To be held at Loew's Capitol Theatre under the sponsorship of the National Aeronautics Association, the Washington premiere, like the others, was the outgrowth of a suggestion made by Dr. Leo Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union.

Stories

Bolstering future production needs, Hollywood's studios bought four story properties during the last two weeks of November, with Warners accounting for two and Paramount and RKO one apiece.

Purchased by Warners were "Winged Victory," A. J. Cronin play, and "The Man They Couldn't Kill," an original by Sidney Biddell and Frederick Frank. Production is to start December 16th on the former, with a new starring team of James Stephenson and Geraldine Fitzgerald set for the leading roles. Howard Koch and Anne Froelick will develop the screen play.

"The Devil and Daniel Webster," Saturday Evening Post story and, later, published in book form, written by Pulitzer Prize winner Stephen Vincent Benet, has been bought by William Dieterle and will be the first of his two RKO productions. Mr. Benet will do the screen treatment of his own book.

First feature to be set for producer Sol Siegel, who recently left Republic to join Paramount, will be "Two Bad Angels," an original by William A. Ullman, Jr., and Arthur Landau. The story deals with the adventures of an American orphan girl who poses as a wealthy young British refugee and so becomes involved with a pair of confidence men.

MAN BITES DOG

There was many a lifted eyebrow to be seen, many an incredulous "Whew!" to be heard, along Gower Gulch and west to Vine and Hollywood this week.

For a pretty girl had refused an offer of a movie career.

Refuser was Vivian Stolfus, TWA airline hostess, currently acting as technical adviser on stratoliner sequences in RKO's "No, No, Nanette".

Said Miss Stolfus: "I prefer to really be up in the air."

"Topper" Again

Currently shooting at the Roach studios is the third of the "Topper" pictures, based on the characters created by the late Thorne Smith.

Described as carrying its principals further into the realm of ectoplasmic highjinks, the picture again casts Roland Young and Billie Burke as "Cosmo Topper" and his wife, while Joan Blondell is the "spirit," and Carole Landis and Dennis O'Keefe the romantic leads. H. B. Warner, Eddie Anderson ("Rochester") and Patsy Kelly will also be seen.

United Artists' pending deal with Gene Towne and Graham Baker provides for two or three films a year for five years. The proposed contract would be effective in June, 1941, after completion for RKO of Messrs. Towne and Baker's "How To Meet a Man."

Alexander Korda has signed Laurence Stallings to write the screenplay for Rudyard Kipling's "The Jungle Book" which is to star Sabu. Mr. Korda's brother, Zoltan, will direct. The production will be released through United Artists.

Albert J. Cohen, story editor for Republic Pictures and for the past number of years connected in writing capacities with various motion picture companies, has been appointed a producer by M. J. Siegel, studio head. Maurice Hanline, assistant story editor, succeeds Mr. Cohen.

SPENCER TRACY will next be starred in MGM's "Dr. Jeykll and Mr. Hyde.

HENRY BLANKE has been signed to a new two-year producers contract by Warners.

HENRY FONDA will appear in "The Great American Broadcast" for Twentieth Century-Fox.

EDWARD ARNOLD received a long term MGM contract.

GEORGE BRUCE is to do the screen play of "Strange Victory" for Sol Lesser Productions.

ARTHUR LUBIN has been signed to a three year directorial contract by Universal.

BRENDA MARSHALL and JEFFREY LYNN have been set for leading roles in Warners "Jinx Woman."

HUGH HERBERT received a five year contract at Universal.

GORDON DOUGLAS is to direct "Broadway Limited" for Hal Roach.

LENORE COFFEE is doing the screen play of "Quietly My Captain Waits" for Warners.

FRED MACMURRAY will co-star with MADELINE CARROLL in Paramount's "One Night in Lisbon," it has been announced by the company.

Comrade X

(MGM)

Comedy, Communism and Clark Gable

Previewed for press, profession and public in a cinema situated on the fringe of a college campus, which is to say at a place where dialogue spoofing "intellectuals" and their ideologies might be expected to elicit resentment if anywhere, this comedy satirizing, burlesquing and lambasting Communism and its works had its audience in laughter that shook the rafters at point after point, subsiding now and again to chuckles, grunts and guffaws as the style of humour varied. Foyer comment left no possibility of doubt that these people considered themselves entertained in a manner they'd remember and talk about.

Scene of the screenplay written for pungency and speed by Ben Hecht and Charles Lederer, from an original by Walter Reisch, is the Moscow of today, including the interior of the Kremlin, but the war now going on in Europe is not mentioned although Germany and its relationship to Russia is. Dealt with are the experiences of press representatives from other nations under a censorship tightened to force exposure of one among them whose writings under signature of "Comrade X" have irked the government.

Press censors commissioned to detect the offender die in the sequence of their failures to do so, while the American reporter sought attempts to smuggle a girl out of the country on her father's wish imposed under pain of discovery. After complications of variety and kind to suit all tastes, escape to Roumania is effected by means of a tank commandeered by force and followed in its crossing of mountain, plain and river by a battalion of the same. This sequence, coming at picture's end, is Sennett in treatment on a scale and with a result Sennet never achieved.

Clark Gable as the American reporter dominates the picture but his associates crowd him for place and pace. An item of news for showmen to tell their customers is that in her casting as a girl member of the Communist party, up on her textbooks and taking love and marriage in stride, Hedy Lamarr resembles in no detail but her person the glamourite they have seen before and proves she can act with the best of them. Support by Oscar Homolka, Felix Bressart, Sig Rumann, Eve Arden, Vladimir Sokoloff and Natsha Lytess sparkles.

Produced by Gottfried Reinhardt and directed by King Vidor as a King Vidor production, the picture excels in mounting, in timing of lines and situations, in variety and pointedness of humour and in immediacy of effectiveness.

Son of Monte Cristo

(UA-Small)

Swashbuckling in the Balkans

Again exercising the penchant for depiction of adventure by the sword which moved him to give the screen "Monte Cristo" and "The Man in the Iron Mask," Producer Edward Small offers showmen, at a time when the Balkans are in the headlines, a tale of romance, statecraft and dualing with wit and blade set in a mythical Balkan kingdom in 1865. In common with its predecessors, the film dallies not with plausibility, realism or logic to the point of impeding the action, which is keynote of the enterprise from opening to close.

Principals to the fore are Louis Hayward as the son of a father whose fame is legend, George Sanders as a peasant risen to rank of power behind the throne and Joan Bennett as the sovereign sought in marriage by both. Involved in the plottings and counter-plottings which make up the narrative are dungeons, catacombs, secret passages, together with confinements in and escapes from same, palaces, countrysides, balconies, gardens, all the settings and situations custom demands of a film in this tradition.

The screenplay by George Bruce brings the son of Monte Cristo onto the scene at breakneck speed to rescue the fair ruler of the monarchy as she flees pursuing horseman. Checkmated in this attempt, but not before falling in love with the lady and vice versa, he goes to her capital and advances a loan to her conniving aide by way of gaining his confidence. Posing as a fop, he utilizes knowledge thus gained to thwart the plotter while garbed in black cloak as leader of the restless citizenry. Circumstances require him to do this several times before the plotter and his plottings are put an end to.

Rowland V. Lee directed the picture, Grant Whytock serving as assistant to the producer.

Little Men

(RKO Radio)

Farce

This Gene Towne-Graham Baker version of Louisa May Alcott's "Little Men" retains some of the Alcott characters changing some others. It stresses the farce and comedy, assuming soberness only in the passages which show "Don," played by Jimmy Lydon, undergoing changes of character at the school in Plumfield. Dialogue and situations evoke laughs in abundance.

Although the authoress is credited on the screen as source of the story, readers who remember the book as written will note departures from context, emphasized in a program for the film's preview which said, "Faced with the problem of bringing to the screen a book which even the authoress admitted had no plot, Towne and Baker concocted their own story."

Kay Francis enacts the role of the schoolmistress, Carl Esmond that of her husband. George Bancroft is seen as "Burdle," the confidence-man who adopts the son of a criminal and rears him, Jack Oakie as "Willie the Fox."

"Burdle," whose activities range from selling a postage stamp as an engraving of Washington to vending an "alcoholism cure," takes "Don" with him on his travels until, realizing that the boy has had no schooling, he places him in "Aunt Jo's" school. Her husband entrusts "Burdle" with funds to invest but failure of a bank and need of meeting demands of a mortgagor creates a crisis. A chain of events which brings about the saving of the school and the making of restitution for their crimes by "Burdle" and "Willie" is managed in a way to keep from "Dan" the knowledge that his foster-father is a criminal.

Mark Kelly and Arthur Caesar, who wrote the screenplay, and Norman Z. McLeod, who directed, obtained a maximum of laughs from the opportunities afforded.

Second Chorus

(Paramount)

Musicomedy

A variety of approaches to the exploitation of this subject are open to showmen. It is the first pairing of Fred Astaire with Paulette Goddard in stardom and the first film in which Miss Goddard dances, doing it with Mr. Astaire. It is likewise the first coupling of these with Artie Shaw and his band, a coupling in both music and story. It is the first picture produced by Boris Morros for Paramount which he served for years as music department chief, and who is at the moment on tour of the exchange centers presenting the film to exhibitors in person.

What with all these firsts, it would appear, a campaign calculated to attract the music-conscious of all shades and grade of interest is a natural. For the limousine trade, it may be remarked, there is an Artie Shaw composition in the symphonic form performed in the concert manner near close of the picture. And for the collegiates it may be mentioned that Mr. Astaire is cast as a college boy whose pursuit of a career as swing trumpeter is mainspring of the story. Mr. Shaw's vogue in jitterbug circles and Miss Goddard's contemporary appearance in "The Great Dictator" are factors of significance in any exploitation campaign.

Mr. Astaire dances twice in the picture, once with Miss Goddard and once while directing Mr. Shaw's band. Mr. Shaw plays a part and the playing of it includes the playing of his clarinet. Burgess Meredith is foil for Mr. Astaire and is to be seen here for the first time as a comedian.

Robert Stillman served Mr. Morros as associate producer and H. C. Potter as director. The story by Frank Cavett and the screen play by Elaine Ryan and Ian McClellan Hunter place emphasis on the music, spacing out with humor between highlights.

Jennie

Family Drama

"Jennie" is a story of life in an emigrant German family settled in an eastern city whose head, the father, becomes overbearing in his domination of the household. It is an intensely human document, made more so by the performances of Virginia Gilmore, in the title role, and Ludwig Stossel, a German refugee player, as the domineering father who is finally brought to his senses by his daughter-in-law.

The story of "Jennie" recites the almost inhuman overbearing of the father of a German family in a small eastern town, long before there is any thought of Hitlerism. A period picture laid in possibly the early 1900's, the film tells of the regeneration of a family tyrant, first by the ruse of his daughter-in-law having a "grandchild," and then by his realization that his actions are really alienating the affections of his children.

Supporting Miss Gilmore and Stossel, both of whom do surprisingly good jobs, are William Henry, George Montgomery, Dorris Bowdon, Rand Brooks, Joan Valerie, Irving Bacon and others. Harold Buchman and Maurice Rapf adapted the original story by Jane Eberle, with David Burton directing the Sol M. Wurtzel production.

Dark Streets of Cairo

Diamonds and Dirty Doings

Death and destruction follow in the wake of the discovery of the seven jewels of the seventh pharaoh when the precious stones are uncovered by an American archeological expedition in the course of sifting some ancient mummy shroud. Entangled in the diamond doings are a Swedish antique collector, his adventuresome niece, a couple of young men attached to the snooping party from the States, an English police official and an assortment of dark skinned and befezzed menaces. The tussles take place in and around the sunny environs of Cairo, Egypt, and particularly in the dark and dank mazes of underground hideaway maintained by the chief culprit of the jewel thieving clique.

Sigrid Gurie with not much to do but disappear for several reels of the story, Ralph Byrd, carrying a resemblance to Clark Gable, Rod LaRocque as the police power, George Zucco in the role of the chief native mobster and Katherine DeMille, cast as his exotic wife whose heart belongs to the British representative of law and order, are prominently concerned with the plot proceedings. Comedy comes chiefly from Eddie Quillan, as a wise cracking example of American humor, offering a brand of puns that should have made him target number one for the killers' darts. One of the nicest surprises in the film is the appearance of a newcomer, Yollande Mollot, in the role of a shapely target for a knife throwing act.

Seen at an afternoon performance at the New York Rialto Theatre, famed for murder and mayhem melodramas, where a full sized audience, chiefly male, were absorbed in the picture, although some brash individuals offered incredulous laughter at certain crucial points.—Joseph F. Coughlin.

The Bank Dick

W. C. Fields Field Day

Showmen whose customers are addicted to yearning for the W. C. Fields of other years and/or the comedies that were Keystones are now in position to promise them satisfaction of both of these yearnings in one and the same film. For here is the Fields of yore in a film of his own fashioning directed by the Edward Cline who directed more Keystones than he can remember.

The story, by one Mahatma Kane Jeeves whom everybody understands to be W. C. Fields, is about a small town gentleman whose occupation at opening of the film is attending cinemas on bank night, answering radio contests and suggesting slogans, work which leaves him plenty of time to spend in the town bar. Coincidence makes him hero of a bank robbery, much to his surprise, and gets him a job and uniform as bank detective, which interferes not at all with a stint of directing supplied a visiting film production unit willy nilly. Accidents and alcohol combine to cause confusion on many sides, circumstances always making the bank dick a hero. Last and most excitement attends an automobile chase in the Sennett manner plus modern touches.

Designed for humor and humor only, the Fields and Cline variety, the film seeks to entertain and do no other thing, least of all to advocate temperance.

Press-shown at the Hillstreet theatre, Los Angeles, a cinema serving metropolitan and transient trade, where the audience laughed itself to the verge of hysterics.—W. R. W.

San Francisco Docks

(Universal)

Melodrama on the Waterfront

This variant of the tale of the innocent man accused of murder with whom the law has its way while his friends seek detection and apprehension of the guilty party as means of saving the condemned, has an escape from Alcatraz as a factor distinguishing it from others in kind. The scene is the San Francisco waterfront and the hero a longshoreman, as are the friends who effect his vindication.

Burgess Meredith portrays the innocent man and Irene Hervey his sweetheart. Ed Pawley is seen as the murderer and Esther Ralston, returned to the screen in "Tin Pan Alley," plays his wife. Raymond Walburn and Barry Fitzgerald supply humor. Robert Armstrong enacts a priest.

Murder Over New York

Melodrama

Saboteurs who, working for an unnamed country, attempt to prevent shipment of bombing planes from the United States to England, are exposed in "Murder Over New York," latest of the "Charlie Chan" detective melodramas at 20th Century-Fox. With Sidney Toler again playing the title role and Sen Yung, as one of his sons, the cast includes Marjorie Weaver, Robert Lowery, Richardo Cortez, Donald MacBride, Melville Cooper, Jean Valerie, Kane Richmond and Clarence Muse.

Lester Ziffren wrote the original screenplay based on Earl Derr Biggers' character. Harry Lachman directed, under the guidance of Executive Producer Sol M. Wurtzel.

Laid in New York, the timely story, which does not discuss the ideologies of England's foes, has the Chinese detective rounding up all the suspects in the murder-sabotage ring and taking them on a test flight in a bomber which is doomed by the criminals. The saboteur is forced to expose himself to prevent his own death.

Robert Wilcox is seen as the special investigator assigned to track down the mysterious "Doctor Satan" and put an end to the reign of terror. In supporting roles are seen William Newell as the assistant to the investigator, C. Montague Shaw, inventor of the remote control system desired by the criminals, and Ella Neal as the daughter of the inventor and romantic interest in the story. The first chapter runs 31 minutes with succeeding episodes running two reels each.

MAJORS SHAPING PLANS FOR LATIN PROMOTION

Blum of MGM Proposes Sending Recordings to South America for Broadcasts

The manner and method to be undertaken by U. S. distributors for attracting more attention to Hollywood product in South American markets continues in top spot on the agenda of the distributors' foreign promotion directors who, since the war, have been concentrating on advancing their product to make up, at least in part, for losses in Europe's World War II.

Selling Hollywood in larger portions to South America, via radio broadcasts of Hollywood news about pictures and personalities, is at the moment the big subject of discussion. The National Broadcasting Company, which has been developing its short wave departments, has for months been trying to sell the film companies on a series of short wave broadcasts. But the distributors have not been completely sold. This week, an alternative plan came from David Blum, Loew's-M-G-M foreign publicity chief, who proposed sending records to the South American markets and broadcasting from there on regular local long-wave lengths.

The so-called "Metro Plan" was discussed on Monday at the Hays office, New York, by the foreign publicity chiefs. The MGM plan was advanced by Mr. Blum as offering greater returns to U. S. film companies in good will and other valuable considerations. Kenneth Clark, MPPDA, publicity representative, presided at the meeting.

NBC's Proposed Plan

In dissecting NBC's proposed plan, Mr. Blum cited the following as some of the reasons why short-wave broadcasts would not be practicable:

1—The number of listeners necessarily would be limited. The number of short-wave listeners in the U. S. with many more radios is quite small compared with the number of listeners on long-wave broadcasts. In South America, with a much smaller number of radios, the difference would be greater.

2—Static caused by transmission over the ocean would greatly affect the quality of reception.

3—Weakness of volume of broadcast as received in South America. Increase in power of transmitter units would not necessarily increase receiver volume.

Mr. Blum's plan envisages broadcasting an all-industry program on long wave directly from South American stations. NBC's plan was to short-wave programs from the U. S. as part of a comprehensive program of the "Good Neighbor" policy.

The MGM foreign publicity chief reported that a recent survey conducted among his company's branch managers in South America as to the feasibility or necessity of short-wave broadcasts showed a surprising lack of enthusiasm. Many of the managers declared that the number of short-wave listeners would be negligible; others pointed out reception difficulties caused by static, etc.

Mr. Blum pointed out, this week, that his company had been using local South American stations for exploiting their top pictures and were satisfied with the results. Started a year ago, special half-hour discs have been used on "Wizard of Oz," "Balalaika," "New Moon," and currently, "Strike up the Band."

He said he felt that other distributors could adopt a similar policy in creating good will, not only for the industry, but for the country as well.

A spokesman for Warners this week pointed out that the NBC short-wave proposal had been definitely turned down by Robert Schless, foreign department chief. His suggestion was that Hollywood send its big stars to South America for personal appearances; that this would create more good will than any type of broadcast, either short-wave or long-wave.

Good-Will Plans Discussed

Much good-will would be created, he added, by spending money for the broadcasts in South America, instead of in the U. S., thus giving the Latin-Americans much-needed foreign exchange. He further pointed out that no U. S. film company maintains a regular weekly or bi-weekly broadcast at this time within the U. S. The idea has been tried in this country by the film countries and has been found impracticable for a number of reasons.

The Warner spokesman further said that he did not look with favor upon transcribed programs because Latin-Americans do not like them any more than Americans do.

Paramount's foreign department has vetoed the short-wave plan, but may consider a long-wave program broadcast from local South American stations, it was understood.

Producers Corp., Opens Exchanges

Harry Ratner, president of Producers Releasing Corporation, has announced the opening of three more company exchanges, bringing the total number of branches throughout the country to twenty-eight.

Jack Adams, franchise holder for the southwest, has opened a branch at Little Rock, Ark., with S. A. Arnold as sales manager and another in Oklahoma City, Okla., with Eb. Walker in charge. A. R. Ditz, formerly of Gaumont-British, has acquired the St. Louis franchise.

Meanwhile, Ike Katz, Producers franchise holder for the southeast, with headquarters at Atlanta, Ga., has reported to the home office, that he has contracts for his entire 1940-41 program for the Atlanta and Charlotte, N. C., territories.

The next picture for Producers Releasing Corp., is "Secret Evidence," to be produced by E. B. Derr at the Talisman studios in Hollywood. Charles Quigley and Marjorie Reynolds will have the leading roles in the picture and production was to begin this week.

OWNER LIABLE FOR LABOR CONTRACT MADE BY EXHIBITOR ORGANIZATION

New York Court Rules ITOA Member Is Bound by Pact Even After Resigning; Browne Reelected by AFL

Labor contracts entered into by an exhibitor organization, for a member, are binding during the life of the contract even though the exhibitor terminates his organization membership, the courts in New York ruled this week.

The precedent that labor contracts entered into by the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York on behalf of a member theatre are legally binding was handed down by Municipal Justice Mario Di Pirro, who ruled that the Taft Theatre, Flushing, N. Y., operated by Dave Rosenzweig, would have to pay some $800 in back pay, plus costs, to members of Local 306, IATSE projectionists' union.

The defendant claimed that he had resigned from the ITOA prior to the consummation of negotiations of the contract between Local 306 and the ITOA by which projectionists were granted a wage increase, and that, therefore, he was not legally obligated to abide by the terms of the contract. The union, represented by Matthew Levy, attorney, has sued for six months back pay and costs.

Justice Di Pirro, however, ruled that the Taft Theatre was a member of the ITOA when the contract was signed; also that the ITOA had the legal right to enter into labor contracts on behalf of members.

According to Mr. Levy's office, in New York, the wage increase had been granted to the projectionists during arbitration.

Reelect Browne, Weber

George W. Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Joseph N. Weber, former president of the American Federation of Musicians, were again elected vice-presidents of the American Federation of Labor, last week, at the annual convention in New Orleans.

Mr. Browne's reelection was considered by some to be a vindication of his administration in the face of criticisms by the press, as led by Westbrook Pegler in the New York World-Telegram. He was nominated by Thomas Murtha, business manager of IATSE's Brooklyn local and president of the Trades and Labor Council of Greater New York.

The International Garment Workers' Union abstained from the voting, while Mr. Browne was unanimously elected. He will serve on the AFL Executive Council, charged with enforcement of the new anti-racketeering resolution.

Privately commenting upon Mr. Browne's reelection, AFL leaders pointed that the 42,000 stage hands and motion picture employes belonging to the IATSE enjoy uniformly high wage scales and excellent working conditions and that it is unfair to condemn a union leader because of "vague" charges against certain of his underlings.

Extras Abolish Unit

Screen Actors' Guild extra players, last week, in Hollywood, voted 2,666 to 507 to abolish their Class B Council governing body. By a vote of 2,740 to 434 they decided in favor of a priority system of employment and placed their affairs directly in control of the SAG's directors.

BEST SELLERS AND RENTERS

Ernest Hemingway's latest novel, "For Whom the Bell Tolls", and purchased for motion picture production by Paramount in October, headed both the Best Sellers and Best Renters lists during the October 14th to November 13th period. Meanwhile, "Mrs. Miniver", prominent in both lists for some months, still remains in the top brackets, holding position number four during the current period in the Sellers tabulation and second place on the Renters list. The listings are from the December issue of The Retail Bookseller, house organ of the Baker & Taylor Company, New York.

The vote endorsed the standing committee's report which recommended ousting from the industry all extras who worked 10 days or less in the last year and other suggestions aimed at giving the extras a living wage.

Fear Strike in Row

Fears that a strike may result from the order of IATSE that its cameramen withdraw from membership in the American Society of Cinematographers were expressed in Hollywood, this week. Local 659 ordered members to quit the ASC under threat of expulsion. The studios, however, continued to abide by their agreement calling for first cameramen to hold ASC cards.

Although local IATSE representatives declared that "dual unionism" would be fought, no direct word has been received by the studios from George Browne, president of IATSE, regarding the controversy.

Music Guild Appeals

Briefs were filed this week, in the Appellate Division of the New York Supreme Court, on an appeal by the American Guild of Musical Artists for an injunction to restrain James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, from ordering his men to refuse to work with Guild members.

Former Judge Frederick Crane and Attorney Sidney Cohen, requesting the injunction, claimed that the Guild would be driven out of business if Mr. Petrillo's order remained in effect. Samuel Seabury, defended Mr. Petrillo's action and termed the Guild a threat to the musicians' union. Decision was reserved following last Friday's hearing.

IATSE Forms Local

IATSE is continuing its organizing activities in Michigan and has issued a charter for a new local covering West central Michigan, centering at Cadillac, with Frank Olson, as president and business agent, according to an announcement, this week, by Roger M. Kennedy, international vice president.

Through the newly organized local, IATSE is negotiating with three major commercial studios to include 60 technicians in the contract. Jurisdiction of film truck drivers has been turned back by the IATSE to the Chauffeurs and Teamsters Union, after a period of organizational activity.

Seek Court Change

The National Association of Performing Artists will attempt to return its suit against WPEN, Philadelphia, to the Pennsylvania State courts when the case is argued before Judge Guy K. Bard in the U. S. District Court at Philadelphia, on January 6th. The association is seeking to restrain the radio station from playing records. Attorneys for the radio station had the case moved to the Federal Court. Counsel for the Association, however, have since filed application to have the case returned to the State court.

Question of jurisdiction hinges on whether certain radio advertisers were properly joined as defendants to the action, the hearing on January 9th being held for that specific purpose.

Upholds Picketing Ban

President Judge Will Leach, of the Lackawanna county court, Scranton, this week, refused to vacate his injunction banning picketing of an independent theatre in this town, by IATSE and motion picture operators. Judge Leach ruled that no labor dispute is involved and that the issues constituted a contest between the AFL and CIO for jurisdictional control of collective bargaining at the theatre.

Previously, the jurist issued an injunction against picketing the Comerford Theatres in Scranton, on the same grounds.

Annual election of officers of Stage Employes Local 74, New Haven, has been set for Sunday, this week. Local B-41 of the Exchange Employes Union has deferred a meeting scheduled for this week.

Chuck Shannon has been appointed manager of the new Warner Brothers' Whitehall Theatre, Pittsburgh. James Laux succeeds him at the Boulevard.

200 LONDON THEATRES CLOSED; GROSS OFF 75%

Increase in Provinces Offsets Loss However, David Rose Reports; Production Slower

Some 200 motion picture theatres in Greater London have been closed by bombings or related incidents, and business at the 1,600 still operating, mostly on part time, is running less than 25 per cent of normal.

In one of the first, first-hand reports of industry conditions in the war-torn British capital to be made public here since the Nazi attacks assumed really serious proportions, David Rose, Paramount managing director of England, in New York, Monday, said, however, that in spite of this the industry as a whole in England had withstood the aerial blitzkrieg comparatively well.

Foreign officers of American companies returning to this country over a period of months have, for the most part, declined to discuss the situation over there. The general impression in the trade in New York is that instructions were issued by superiors against discussing the subject with the press.

Mr. Rose's report on houses closed and business lagging in the British war zone was made after he had been at sea, aboard the S. S. Excambion, for 10 days, and as his steamer was nearing New York, last weekend, heavy Nazi bombing of various parts of England were reported to have caused much additional damage.

Business Up in Provinces

Although grosses are much lower in the London area because of the bombings, theatre business in the provinces has increased to an unprecedented degree, almost making up for the loss of London business, Mr. Rose reported.

He declared that Paramount's gross film rental for England was approximately 10 per cent higher this year, as compared with last year, in spite of the quickening pace of the bomb attacks and the repercussions of the war.

"London theatres have been hit hard by the bombings, losing about 75 per cent of their business, that is among theatres remaining open," he said. "In the provinces, however, business has boomed surprisingly, patrons showing very little fear of bombings. If there happens to be an air raid alarm while they're in the movies, they go to the nearest shelter and return to see the rest of the show when the 'all clear' signal is sounded."

Studio Bombed

The executive told of the bombing of the studio where Paramount's "Quiet Wedding" was being filmed, just outside London, when a time bomb was dropped only three sound stages away from the set. Within 48 hours, suicide squads removed three quarters of the dynamite from the bomb and production was resumed as though nothing had happened.

Asked about reconstruction of theatres badly damaged or destroyed by bombs, Mr. Rose said the Government had promised to foot the bill for reconstruction.

Paramount's "North West Mounted Police" opened last Monday, November 25th, at the swanky Carlton Theatre, in the West End, at approximately $2 top, doing nine shows weekly.

In answering questions about meeting production quotas under the monetary agreement, Mr. Rose pointed out:

"All of the U. S. companies are doing their best to meet their requirements under the quota. We're hoping that all of us can do so. The British Government is allowing us to use blocked currency for any purpose except for transmission out of the country. It has been suggested that we use part of this frozen cash to pay off mortgages on our property in England. We have this under consideration."

Mr. Rose referred to the agreement now being arranged by which eight U. S. distributors would take out between $12,000,000 to $13,000,000 in currency during the coming season.

The greatest stumbling block to production in England, Mr. Rose continued, is not bombings, but the difficulty of getting American stars to come over. If the war lasts longer, there is a possibility that the Government may requisition the studios for war purposes, but, as yet, nothing in this direction has been done.

Last year, Mr. Rose said, Paramount made some eight pictures, but this year, due to casting and other difficulties, only three or four would be made. In preparation at Denham is Dr. A. J. Cronin's "Hatter's Castle," possibly with Leslie Howard in the lead. Also under consideration is a Clive Brook production.

Due to the casting troubles, production of "Knights of the Round Table," originally scheduled for England, probably will be transferred to Hollywood, Mr. Rose said.

Paramount's executive personnel has not been unduly affected by the Nazi air offensive, all of the heads of departments functioning as before, none having been severely injured or killed. The company's Water Street office in London is still operating, although the sales and accounting departments have been moved to the suburbs. All of the U. S. companies with London offices are "still doing business at the same stand," Mr. Rose explained.

Paramount's rental gross for this year, so far, is 10 per cent ahead of last year, in spite of the fact that London's business is definitely off. London business was especially hard hit in September.

Discussing the Londoner's taste in movies, he said: "Londoners definitely don't like the propaganda type of movie. They don't mind if their pictures are a bit sad, but they won't stand for pure propaganda. They seem to be fond of the American type of picture and its native brand of patriotic propaganda, if you can call it that."

DEFENSE PINCHES ERPI'S SALES

ERPI's merchandising policies in the foreign field have begun to feel the pinch of the national defense program, according to E. S. Gregg, the company's general foreign manager in New York.

Although the tempo of production has stepped up in anticipation of emergency requirements, Mr. Gregg urges caution in establishing delivery schedules. The production of military lighting equipment is already crowding domestic manufacturing facilities to some extent, he points out, and the same condition may soon appear in related fields.

State Financing For Mexican Films

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

Various bills calling for government aid to the Mexican motion picture industry have been assured by Congress before the end of this year. The measures include the founding of a state-directed financing bank with an ultimate capital of $4,150,000, to be provided for jointly by the industry and the Government; Federalization of the business, and to compel American distributors to use 25 per cent of their yearly income to finance Mexican production.

The first two bills are expected to pass, but there is little hope for the third.

Meanwhile, the proposal to dicker with Hollywood for the production of Spanish language pictures in Mexico has been brought up again. This same idea was presented some time ago but was discarded. This plan, it is said, would be of mutual benefit—Hollywood getting low cost production and Mexico a stimulant for her motion picture business—yet in such a way that the prestige of the business would not be hurt.

This proposition is expected to be presented with the turn of the year, by which time, it is hoped, the new Government will have settled down to business, so that the political and economic situations will be cleared up and business will have a reasonable idea of where it is going.

Poor Film Year Predicted

Unless Mexican film producers are able to increase production, it seems that 1940 will be the poorest year they have had in the ten that they have been making talking pictures. Up to the end of October, Mexico had only produced 19 feature pictures. General uncertainty as to the present and future, politically and economically, explains, to a large extent, this sharp let down in Mexican production. Lack of money was another factor, and so was labor and its demands.

New RKO Theatre

The new Magerit theatre, which is to be the new RKO first-run outlet in Mexico City, opens December 12th with "Lucky Partners" as the initial attraction. The theatre is owned by Don Rafael Laffarga.

Equals 1939 Dividends

Equaling its 1939 dividend record on the common shares of the company, Famous Players Canadian Corp. has announced a fourth payment of 25 cents to be made December 27th for the final quarter of the current year, making a total of $1 for 12 months.

Hamilton United Theatres, Ltd., a subsidiary, operating theatres in Western Ontario, has also declared a dividend of 1¼ per cent on the preferred shares, payable at the close of the calendar year.

American Films Dominate Azores

Of the 900 reels of films distributed to theatres in the Azores during the year 90 per cent were of American origin, five per cent were French and five per cent Portuguese according to the annual report of the U. S. Department of Commerce. Theatres are now required by law to include in each program at least one film of Portuguese origin. A Portuguese film is said to bring in about $100 in American currency while imported product yields about $50.

The legislation in force in continental Portugal applies to all the Azores. There are no local laws on films exhibited as all film being shown in the Azores have been previously censored in Lisbon.

Annual taxes paid by the leading theatre in Posta Delgada, the largest in the Azores, with a seating capacity of 3,000 and with four performances a week, amount to 26,300 escudos (over $1,000 in American currency). The average admission price to the theatres is about 14 cents.

Gain in Indo-China

The same report covered the market in French Indo-China where American films showed an increase following the armistice between France and Germany. Imports from these countries dropped off rapidly bringing the percentage of American product exhibited from 20 per cent in 1939 to more than 44 per cent for the first six months of 1940.

According to local exhibitors about 160 films of French and American production are now required annually to supply local needs in Indo China. Before the war, practically all films shown were imported by the local theatres, renting the films to small theatres after showing in their own houses. Only a few American films were imported directly and Singapore and Hongkong supplied the market with Chinese and Hindu films.

The French residents prefer sentimental comedies, whereas natives prefer films with action predominant since many of them have only a limited knowledge of English.

Seven Spanish Films For South America

Plans for production of seven pictures in Spanish, to be made in the east and distributed in Latin-America, were announced this week by John Malandre, president of the newly-formed United Spanish Artists Films, Inc., with offices at 1650 Broadway, New York.

The company will specialize in operettas and biographical subjects. Shooting on the first production, tentatively titled, "The Hawks," will start at the end of January. Eduardo Diaz Ochoa, vice president of the company, is expected to direct. The company will handle its own distribution.

Negotiations for a studio, either in Fort Lee, N.J., or New York, are under way. Gregory Ferrer, vice president and secretary, completes the roster of officers.

Directors of the corporation were given as Irma Abeloff, M. N. Reinstein and Herman A. Kaplan in the application for incorporation papers in Albany recently.

Wins Maxim Memorial Award for 8mm. Film

"The Will and the Way," an 8mm. color film, produced by Chester Glassley, of Dallas, has won the Hiram Percy Maxim Memorial Award for the best of the ten outstanding non-theatrical films of the year as selected by the editors of "Movie Makers." The winning film, 200 feet in length, is described by the judges as "a simple story of little people, but one which looms large in its appeal to the human heart."

Mr. Glassley will be the fourth winner to have his name engraved on the memorial, which stands in the headquarters of the Amateur Cinema League, Inc., 420 Lexington Avenue, New York. The award was established in 1937 by Mrs. John G. Lee of Hartford, daughter of the inventor, who founded the League, which publishes Movie Makers.

Bill Pine Forms Production Unit

William H. Pine, associate producer for Cecil B. DeMille, and William C. Thomas, former producer at Paramount, announced in Hollywood on Wednesday the formation of a new producing unit. The company's three productions for the 1941-1942 season will be released by Paramount.

Mr. Pine, who still retains his position with Mr. DeMille, is president of the new company, and Mr. Thomas is executive vice president in charge of production. The first of the company's three films, all based on aviation action stories, will be "Power Dive," starring Richard Arlen, from an original story by Paul Franklin and screen play by Maxwell Shane.

Shooting starts in January at the Fine Arts Studio. Terry DeLapp and Ed Churchill will be in charge of the company's publicity and advertising and have opened their own offices. Mr. Churchill resigned from Paramount's publicity department on the Coast to join Mr. DeLapp.

Fire Destroys Theatre

The Star theatre in Salem, N. Y., was burned to the ground when a fire of unknown origin swept the theatre. All the film in the theatre, including prints of "Tin Pan Alley" were lost. This is the second bad fire in that territory to destroy a theatre. Two weeks ago the Ideal, at Chateaugay, N. Y., was also destroyed.

Comerford Builds Two

Ralph Pries, formerly of Atlanta, Georgia, has been appointed assistant purchasing agent at the National Theatre Supply Company San Francisco office.

Swiss Demand U. S. Features

American films still predominate in the Swiss market according to a report supplied to the U. S. Department of Commerce by the American Consulate in Zurich. Because of transportation difficulties imports from the United States to Switzerland are seriously handicapped and exhibitors at present are concerned with the possibility of obtaining an adequate supply of good films, rather than the choice of a particular type of picture. Due to the lack of available product many theatres are showing successful old American pictures and frequently have found that they draw better than many of the imported product from other countries.

Of the three leading countries from which pictures are imported—United States, Germany and France—Germany alone has thus far been able to supply the Swiss market without interruption.

With the normal imported source of supply unreliable because of war developments, interest in domestic production has increased and, according to reports from Switzerland, several new feature pictures are planned for the next season.

In August, 1940, the showing of a domestic newsreel became obligatory by law for all cinemas in Switzerland.

In 1939 over 46 per cent of the standard size films by titles came from the United States. Out of 502 feature pictures imported by Switzerland during that year 265, or more than fifty per cent, were brought from the United States. Thus far this year the United States still leads by a wide margin as the principal supplier of features and standard sized film.

Twelve French Films To Be Reissued

A series of 12 representative French films, will be reissued for the 1940-1941 season by the recently-formed Datlowe Productions, of 729 Seventh Avenue, New York, it was announced, this week. J. J. Balaber, executive director of the company, said that the pictures would be shown in various neighborhood theatres, following consummation of deals now pending. Titles of the films follow:

"Le Bonheur," with Charles Boyer and Gaby Morlay; Guy de Maupassant's, "The Orderly;" "The Barber of Seville," "The Bells," featuring Harry Baur; "Giboulette;" Jean Gabin in "Marie Chapdelaine," Rene Clair's, "The Last Millionaire," Ramu in "Charlemagne;" Jacques Feyder's "Pension Mimosa"; "Les Petits," "Lac-aux-Dames," with Simone Simon and "Mysteries of Paris."

U. S. Films in Panama

Two-fifths of the films shown in Panama's 32 theatres come from the United States, according to the U. S. Department of Commerce. Records show that of 25,241 reels shown in the country, last year, some 10,322 originated in the U. S.

IN COURTS

Appeal Upholds Ticket Profit

The New York State law restricting all ticket brokerage to a maximum advance of 75 cents on each ticket was upheld on Friday, November 29th, by the appellate division of the supreme court. The decision, which unanimously affirmed a ruling of Supreme Court Justice J. Sidney Bernstein, denied an application of seven New York ticket brokers to restrain the enforcement of the law.

The ticket brokers had contended that the law was unconstitutional because it was arbitrary in nature, and that the theatre was not a subject of public interest. No opinion was handed down by the court. William A. Hyman, attorney for the plaintiffs, announced that he would appeal the decision to the State Court of Appeals.

Helen Twelvetrees, film actress, has filed suit against RKO for $100,000 and charges the company filmed a story based on her life in the picture "I'm Still Alive." NBC, CBS ATTACK U. S. PROPOSALS TO CURB 'POWER' OF NETWORKS

Mutual System, However, Approves FCC's Recommendations, as All Sides Line Up at Radio "Monopoly" Hearings

Battle lines were drawn, Monday, between the United States Government and the important broadcasters over extending Federal Communications Commission control over the radio networks.

The National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System attacked proposed regulations curbing the power of networks over member stations. Mutual, however, in general, backed the proposals.

Except for passing references, the FCC radio monopoly committee report, supposedly the subject of argument, was practically forgotten during hearings before the Commission this week as representatives of the national networks battled over proposals for regulation of chain contracts and activities.

Contract Regulation Debated

Fully analyzed in the briefs which they had previously filed, the report, at the suggestion of James L. Fly, chairman of the FCC, was dismissed with casual observations so that a full discussion could be had of proposals set forth last week by the Commission.

In an opening statement for the FCC legal department, Telford Taylor, its general counsel, made it clear that the main subject under consideration was whether the Commission should promulgate regulations on contracts between networks and their affiliated stations and, if so, what those regulations should provide.

He emphasized that the proposals, which he admitted had the support of Mutual Broadcasting System and were opposed by the National and Columbia broadcasting systems, were not intended to embody the views of the Commission.

He explained that the proposals barred exclusive contracts between chains and stations, with the possible exception of large cities with five or more stations; limited the amount of time which a station might option to a network, dependent upon the number of stations in the community; limited the period for which chain contracts may be made, either to the period of the station's license or to two years, or giving the station the same right of cancelation as the chain; prohibited chains from controlling the advertising rates of stations; prohibited a single company from controlling more than one network, aimed at NBC; prohibited chains from owning stations or stations from owning chains; and gave the broadcaster the absolute right to determine whether he wished to take or reject a chain program.

Legal Question Involved

Declaring that the legal question involved was the heart of the whole chain problem, Joseph C. Rauh, FCC assistant general counsel, presented an argument to confirm the Commission's authority to promulgate such regulations, declaring that it had jurisdiction because of the public interest involved. He based his contentions largely on the fact the chain affiliation affected the program service of a station, which was one of the features of the "public interest," convenience and necessity" standard laid down by the commission.

Taking a strong position in opposition to both the Commission's authority and the desirability of the regulations suggested, Phillip J. Hennessey, counsel for NBC, and John J. Burns, counsel for CBS, argued there was no provision in the Communications Act which would permit the Commission to interfere with the program activities of broadcasters.

Counsel for both chain organizations attacked the proposed regulations as disadvantageous, not only to the two older chains, but to the listening public, pointing out that any disturbance of the present structure would tend to reduce rather than improve the quality of programs.

It was explained that withdrawal of the power to make exclusive contracts would open stations to the highest bidder with the result that the strongest transmitters would get the cream of the commercial programs and the weaker stations would have to take what was left. At the same time, it was pointed out, under such an arrangement there would be no incentive for the chains to furnish high-class sustaining programs, now used to keep the audience tuned to the station. A limitation on the amount of time to be used for chain programs would have a similar effect, and a limitation on the life of contracts would be a disadvantage in attempting to sell time, as would the granting of the right of cancelation to the stations.

Interested in New Network

Mr. Fly expressed keen interest in the possibilities of the establishment of another national chain, but network counsel admitted it would be difficult, although they held it would not be impossible.

Both counsel charged that the proposals represented what Mutual Broadcasting System felt would be desirable from its point of view and admitted that regulation along the lines suggested would be highly advantageous to the junior chain. However, it was contended, the commission is without authority to promulgate regulations which Mr. Hennessey declared "would destroy the American system of broadcasting."

Samuel Rosenbaum, president of the Independent Radio Network Affiliates, Inc., and Paul M. Segal, counsel, supported the arguments of the attorneys for the networks.

On Tuesday counsel of the Mutual Broadcasting System presented arguments in favor of the regulations to curb network control over affiliated stations.

Unfair Practice Charged

The Federal Communications Commission in Washington, on Tuesday, was told that even though a licensee might use the power of his license to suppress competition and engage in unfair practices, it was without authority to act as long as he operated his station in the public interest and met the Commission's requirements of character.

Phillip Hennessey, NBC counsel, offered this contention, after Martin Gang, representing independent artists' agents and Waddil Catchings of Associated Music Publishers, arguing on the FCC committee's monopoly report, had charged the two major networks with using their artist bureau to the disadvantage of independent artists' agents.

Mr. Hennessey told the Commission that the proper course to be taken in dealing with any abuses which might be alleged, would be through the courts or the Department of Justice and maintained that the FCC, itself, was powerless to act so long as its public interest and character requirements were met.

At the final hearing, on Tuesday, Louis G. Caldwell, counsel for the Mutual Broadcasting System, submitted recommendations for regulation of networks closely approximating those suggested last week by the Commission. He charged that the two competing chain companies were violating the anti-trust laws in forcing purchasers of time to take other stations when contracting for outlets in cities where they have exclusive affiliations.

The Commission gave interested parties until December 16th in which to file briefs suggesting methods for increasing competition between the networks.

Organizations Request Time

Other organizations which had requested time at the hearing included: Don Lee Broadcasting System, WBNY, WHBF, KFRO, World Broadcasting System, Association of Radio Transcription Producers of Hollywood, American Federation of Musicians, Independent Artists' Representatives and the Associated Music Publishers.

On Friday of last week Senator Gurney of South Dakota said in the Senate that the proposed rules of the FCC would "strangle, if not impose a death sentence upon the established networks." The monopoly report was "generally discredited because of its inaccuracy and demonstrable bias," according to the Senator.

NBC Billings $4,699,078

NBC gross billings for the month of November were $4,699,078, an increase of 11 percent over the same month last year. The Red network grossed $3,653,135, an increase of 7.4 percent and the Blue chain's billings were $1,045,953, up 25.6 percent. Billings for the first 11 months were up a similar percentage over last year. NBC has grossed in the period $45,753,127, up 11.7 percent; the Red total being $36,168,421, an increase of 8.9 percent and the Blue total, $9,584,706, an increase of 23.4 percent.

Two members of the board of governors of the Canadian Broadcasting Company resigned over policy disputes last week. Those resigning were Alan B. Plaunt, one of the original members of the board, and D. W. Buchanan, director of public affairs, who gave as the reason for his action, "lack of organization and a clear definition of policies." His statement has been interpreted as an attack on Gladstone Murray, general manager. The board adopted however a vote of confidence in Mr. Murray and Dr. Augustin Frigon, assistant general manager.

CBC also announced that commercial news services would be eliminated January 1st when the company starts its own service.

PRESS OWNS 300 STATIONS

Approximately 300 radio stations of the nation's commercial broadcasting outlets are owned partially or completely by newspaper publishers and, although the question has frequently been discussed in Congress, the number of such stations has been on the increase, especially during the past two years.

The decision of the Associated Press directors in the Spring of this year to make AP news available for sponsorship brought the last of the major news services into the radio field.

PROFITS FOR 'U', PATHE; FIVE DECLARE DIVIDENDS

Universal Net for Year Estimated at $2,000,000, Nearly Double Last Year's Universal's net this year is expected to exceed $2,000,000 sending that company's income to its highest peak in years. From motion picture financial quarters this week also came reports of a $215,188 profit for Pathe Film, for nine months, and statements of dividend declarations by Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, Keith-Albee-Orpheum, Pathe and General Theatres Equipment. The Securities and Exchange Commission, in Washington, disclosed stock transactions by officers of five film companies.

"U" Income Nearly Doubled

A net profit in excess of $2,000,000 is estimated for Universal for the fiscal year ended last October 27th. The estimate, by Wall Street sources, is after allowances have been made for Federal taxes and special amortization reserve for foreign market losses due to the current European complications. It shows further considerable improvement for the company under the presidential guidance of Nate J. Blumberg.

Universal reported a net profit of $1,153,321 for the fiscal year ended October 28, 1939, after all taxes and charges had been allowed. The company's audited report for the 1940 fiscal year is not expected to be completed until after the first of the year, due to delays in transmission of reports from foreign subsidiaries and other offices abroad.

Pathe's Nine-Month Profit

The statement of profit and loss for the nine months period ended September 30, 1940, follows:

INCOME:
Dividend on 3,500 shares Dupont Film Mfg. Corp.		$245,000.00
EXPENSES:

Legal Services	1,250.00
Stockholders' Reports, Stockholders' Meetings and Other Corporate Expenses	3,073.15
	$17,706.96
TAXES:

Federal Capital Stock Tax	1,306.54
Federal and State Social Security Taxes	176.57
New Jersey Franchise Tax—1939	157.23
	$3,561.32
Total Expenses and Taxes		21,268.28
Net Profit Before Federal Income Taxes		$223,731.72
Provision for Federal Income Taxes		8,543.42
Net Profit for the Nine Months Ended Sept. 30, 1940		$215,188.30

Pathe explained that the Dupont Film Manufacturing Corporation (the common stock of which this Company owns 35 per cent) had a net profit, after all charges, of $1,188,960 for the first nine (9) months of 1940, as compared with $1,244,229 in the corresponding period of 1939.

The proportion of these earnings which accrued to this Company's 35 per cent common stock interest amounted to $416,136 in 1940, as compared with $435,000 in 1939. Of these earnings $171,136 were undistributed in 1940 and $190,000 in 1939, which undistributed amounts are not reflected in the income accounts of this Company as given above.

The board of directors of Paramount Pictures, Inc., on Friday, November 29th, declared a dividend on its common stock of $.15 per share together with a quarterly dividend of $1.50 on its first preferred stock, and a quarterly dividend of $.15 on its second preferred stock, payable December 24, 1940, to common stockholders of record of December 9th, 1940, and preferred stockholders of record December 10, 1940.

Following the declaration of a dividend on the common stock, market experts familiar with the film company's charter discovered that the holders of the company's preferred stock may receive two dividends in the same quarter.

Although the declared common dividend was the third successive one voted by the board of directors, the common stock has not yet been put on a regular dividend basis. Under the terms of an unusual provision in the Paramount charter, stockholders converting their preferred stock into common during the current week will receive the accrued portion of the preferred dividend for the quarter and will also get the full common dividend of fifteen cents per share.

Fox Dividend on Preferred

The board of directors of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp., at its meeting on Thursday, November 29th, declared a cash dividend of 37½ cents per share for the fourth quarter of 1940 on the outstanding preferred stock of the corporation, payable December 27, 1940, to stockholders of record at the close of business December 13, 1940.

KAO Dividend Declared

The board of directors of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation declared a dividend, out of operating surplus, of $3.50 per share on the 7 per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock for the quarters ended June 30, 1940, and September 30, 1040, to the holders of record at the close of business on December 13, 1940.

Meanwhile, the board of directors of Pathe Film Corp., has declared a dividend of 30 cents per share on the common stock, payable December 30, 1940, to stockholders of record December 10th, 1940.

General Theatre Dividend

The board of directors of General Theatre Equipment Corp., have declared a dividend of 25 cents per share on the capital stock, payable December 20th, 1940, to stockholders of record December 10, 1940.

Film Stock Transactions

Transactions involving nearly 4,800 shares of stock in five film companies were reported by the Securities and Exchange Commission this week in its first semi-monthly summary of October activities of officers and directors in the securities of their corporations.

The largest transaction was the acquisition of 2,500 shares of Paramount Pictures common by Stanton Griffis, New York director, bringing his interest to 6,500 shares.

Disposition of 1,000 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox common stock was reported for Sidney R. Kent, New York officer, reducing his holdings to 1,180 shares.

A smaller transaction, but one revealing the holdings of Radio Corporation of America in Radio-Keith-Orpheum, was the disposition by RCA of 928 shares of R-K-O common stock, leaving the radio company the holder of 316,328 shares of common, 555,254 warrants for common and 44,757 shares of preferred.

Sales Methods Discussed at AMPA

Showmanship and sales methods applicable to the motion picture industry were discussed Thursday, November 28th, at a luncheon attended by members of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at the Hotel Edison in New York. Zenn Kaufman, author of "Showmanship in Business" and a specialist in the field of sales and exploitation was the featured speaker.

Leon Bamberger, president of the Association, announced at that time the appointment of an attendance committee, headed by Vincent Trotta, and the appointment of Martin Starr as chairman of the publicity committee. Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia Pictures will be the featured speaker at the next luncheon meeting on December 12th.

Ralph Blank Starts Circuit

Ralph Blank, nephew of A. H. Blank, Paramount partner and operator of a circuit of theatres in the mid-west, has entered the exhibition field in partnership with A. Gerhard, having filed incorporation papers for $10,000, under the trade name of Blank Theatres, Inc. Omaha is listed as the home office and it is expected that the new chain will operate in Nebraska and Iowa, in the same zone his uncle's chain operates.

The younger Mr. Blank was formerly Nebraska district manager for Central States, in which he held an interest.

New House in Great Neck

The Esquire-Great Neck Corp., operators of motion picture theatres, has filed incorporation papers in Albany, listing its capital as $80,300. The corporation is believed to be erecting the new theatre in Great Neck, N. Y., opposite Skouras' Playhouse.

Although Michael Gerome, Robert Pulleyn and Richard Jackson are listed as the incorporators, with the Wall Street law firm of Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett, acting as attorneys, it is believed that Lehman Brothers, Wall Street bankers, have a hand in financing operations. It is reported that one Herbert Scheftel is directing arrangements.

Columbia

ANGELS OVER BROADWAY: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Rita Hayworth, Thomas Mitchell—An excellent picture that will not be liked by but very few in small communities. Box office poor. Running time, 79 minutes. Played November 19.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

GIRLS OF THE ROAD: Ann Dvorak, Helen Mack, Lola Lane—A good action feature. Played with Republic's "Gaucho Serenade." Running time, 60 minutes. Played November 21-23.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

HE STAYED FOR BREAKFAST: Loretta Young, Melvyn Douglas—This is a very good comedy feature which was enjoyed by our patrons. Running time, 87 minutes. Played November 11-13.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

HOWARDS OF VIRGINIA, THE: Cary Grant, Martha Scott, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Richard Carlson—Opened on Thanksgiving. Same night we installed new strong intensity lamps. Plenty of compliments on picture and light on screen. Very timely from patriotic point of view.—Elstun Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio. General patronage.

HOWARDS OF VIRGINIA, THE: Cary Grant, Martha Scott, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Richard Carlson—One of the year's finest pictures that should be played by every exhibitor. Attendance average but pleased everyone that saw it. Running time, 123 minutes. Played November 20-21.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

I MARRIED ADVENTURE: Osa and Martin Johnson—If this type of film has done well with you in the past, this will do even better due to the popularity of the book. Studio scenes and items from the Johnsons' past films are well blended to hold interest. Many commented on it the day after. We played it with "Maryland" and had a fairly good crowd, even though everyone around here goes away on Thanksgiving week-end. Running time, 78 minutes. Played November 23.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: Jean Arthur, James Stewart, Claude Rains, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibbee, Thomas Mitchell, Eugene Pallette, Beulah Bondi, Harry Carey—The following remarks, made by several members of our audience and all "tough critics," are sufficient to indicate the appeal that the picture had here. "The best that I have ever seen, bar none." "It is a dandy." "Certainly glad we didn't miss this one." "I could sit through it a dozen times and like it better each time." "Some of the best acting that it has been my privilege to see." "Talk about patriotism, this picture will instil more patriotism in the people of this country than all of the patriotic speeches that could be given today." "This one should be shown in every theatre in America." Messrs. Theatre owners, and I mean those who have not booked this one (if such a thing can be possible), what more can you expect from a motion picture? Why wait? Running time, 127 minutes. Played November 21.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

RIDERS OF THE BLACK RIVER: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith, Sons of the Pioneers—Very satisfactory business. Played on double bill.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontairo, Canada. General patronage.

SO YOU WON'T TALK: Joe E. Brown, Frances Robinson—A very good program picture. It will delight your patrons to their uttermost. One of Joe's best shows. Running time, 68 minutes. Played November 17.—Harry H. Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

First National

NO TIME FOR COMEDY: Rosalind Russell, James Stewart—Why, oh, why, do these commentators for the producer in his trailer lead the audience into the promised land of a superlative, etc., comedy, when they have just a mildly entertaining program picture that has its moments, but not sufficient to draw more than a dozen people the second night. Just a plain case of over-selling and the audience knew that they had been oversold. It is breeder of skepticism and with business the way it is there is need for honesty in the appraisal of the product you have to show.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

NO TIME FOR COMEDY: James Stewart, Rosalind Russell—A good little picture and I was surprised at the business it did. Almost broke record for this year. Running time, 93 minutes. Played November 3-4.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

THEY DRIVE BY NIGHT: Ann Sheridan, George Raft, Ida Lupino, Humphrey Bogart, Gale Page—Everybody came out praising this picture and we don't mind telling you plenty went in.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TORRID ZONE: James Cagney, Ann Sheridan, Pat O'Brien, Andy Devine, Helen Vinson—The dialogue is reminiscent of that in pictures B. L. D. (before the Legion of Decency). In other words, it is plenty suggestive in numerous spots, more so than in anything I have seen in several years. Most of the fans will like it—shall we say in spite of this or because of it?—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

TUGBOAT ANNIE SAILS AGAIN: Marjorie Rambeau, Alan Hale, Ronald Reagan, Jane Wyman—Good picture but poor business due to rainy weather. However, those who came were pleased. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 22-23.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BOOM TOWN: Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert, Hedy Lamarr, Frank Morgan—Again we see some business. This picture has everything. Give us more like this.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DR. KILDARE GOES HOME: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—One of the best in the Kildare series, although business off on this picture but still a good show. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 22.—Harry H. Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

FAST AND LOOSE: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—An average program picture. We double billed with "Blondie" to nice business on Foto-Nite. Second night no good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FLORIAN: Robert Young, Helen Gilbert—We used this on a Friday-Saturday change. Would be very good for a Sunday show. This is one we haven't heard much about but is far ahead of many that have been highly publicized. This is really one of the best pictures of 1940. Many fine comments.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

I LOVE YOU AGAIN: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Frank McHugh, Edmund Lowe—This is a very funny comedy with a very unique plot. It drew a good crowd that thoroughly enjoyed itself. Play it up for its hilarity. Running time, 100 minutes. Played November 18-19.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

NORTHWEST PASSAGE: Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan—Exceptional entertainment, beautiful color and a story packed full of action, beautiful scenery. Although not a woman's picture, some will enjoy this feature. Perfect entertainment. Running time, 126 minutes. Played November 14.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

PRIDE AND PREJUDICE: Greer Garson, Laurence Olivier, Maureen O'Sullivan, Mary Boland, Edna May Oliver—Lord Haw Haw on the screen and English locale mess if there ever was one. Talk, talk, affected "oh, my deah" that and "oh, my dear" that. I would advise any small town exhibitor that has to play this, due to the percentage agreement, to have your exit doors well greased so they won't tear them down getting out. If you have it bought flat, cancel it. We did not get one good comment on it.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER, THE: James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan—Stewart and Sullavan natural enough and almost funny enough. The one situation is good and played up enough (or too much) by Lubitsch. Morgan can't make up his mind whether to be comic or pathetic. Poor biz Friday, better Saturday. Played second run here with weekly western for rural population. Running time, 101 minutes.—Ken Gorham, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Vt. General patronage.

SKY MURDER: Walter Pidgeon, Donald Meek—Good action picture and good business on family night. Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 19.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

STRIKE UP THE BAND: Judy Garland, Mickey Rooney, June Preisser, Paul Whiteman and His Orchestra—Did not draw near as good as "Wyoming" but seemed to please, although we had a few walkouts. Running time, 121 minutes. Played November 17-18.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

THIRD FINGER, LEFT HAND: Myrna Loy, Melvyn Douglas—Good picture and good business. This comedy will please all adults. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 20-21.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WATERLOO BRIDGE: Vivien Leigh, Robert Taylor—I made the mistake of running this midweek. It is distinctly a Sunday show and a very excellent one. Just about the best thing that Taylor had done and Vivien Leigh turns in a near perfect performance. Easily one of the 10 best for 1940!—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

WYOMING: Wallace Beery, Leo Carrillo, Ann Rutherford—A natural. How our folk do like Wallace Beery. He's "rough and tough" and the lumberjacks sure fall for him. Swell business. Running time, 89 minutes. Played November 10-11.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

WYOMING: Wallace Beery, Ann Rutherford, Marjorie Main—A grand action picture with Wallace Beery at his best. Marjorie Main also exceptionally good. Business very good on this picture. Running time, 89 minutes. Played November 9-11.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

Monogram

BOYS OF THE CITY: "East Side Kids," Bobby Jordan, Leo Gorcey—Played to a packed house and everyone enjoyed this program picture. Sure winner for any Pal nites or one of your cheap nights. Don't miss this one, "Boys of the City." Running time, 63 minutes. Played November 19.—Harry H. Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ARISE, MY LOVE: Claudette Colbert, Ray Milland—This a top rating picture and in which Claudette is seen at her very best and her very best is very pleasing and interesting. The support all excellent and the plot is very thrilling, having to do with Spain, as a starter, and ending with Germany and the Axis. A daring newspaper woman, a daring flyer and with love as the theme topic, intermingled with daring adventure, ship torpedoed, yet the lovers, Claudette and

Ray, had time to stop off for three days, while en-route to Berlin, and nobody knew where they were at, except themselves, and all is well that ends well and Claudette and Ray lived happily ever afterwards. Running time, 113 minutes.—William Noble, Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

COMIN' ROUND THE MOUNTAIN: Bob Burns, Una Merkel—The draw was a pleasant surprise. In fact, it was Paramount's biggest grosser for me this year and gave us one of the best Saturday nights we have ever had. The picture isn't much to rave about, although we had no complaints. Very similar to Republic's Weaver Brothers and Elviry shows but much higher priced and not a bit better.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Thetre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

GHOST BREAKERS, THE: Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard—I think this has been highly over-rated. We did not receive a single comment on it either way—which is always a sign that a show hasn't gone over too well. The gross was also very disappointing, not being nearly average business for a three day run. We ran "The Cat and the Canary" on a double bill and think it was much better than "The Ghost Breakers," which was given a Sunday opening (single).—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

GREAT VICTOR HERBERT, THE: Allan Jones, Mary Martin, Walter Connolly, Susanna Foster—Had my doubts about this one appealing to more than 60 per cent of our audience but when THE END made its appearance the burst of applause that was registered astounded me. Of course, I later found out that much of the applause was being directed at the little 14 year old songbird, Susanna Foster, who virtually stole the picture from such top notchers as Allan Jones and Mary Martin. Let us hope that Paramount will not overlook the tremendous possibilities of a youngster who can be so impressive in her initial appearance. Many of the men here were very much disappointed in Mary Martin but thought possibly the picture was not especially suited to her talents. If your fans appreciate really fine singing and music that will live for years, do not be afraid to book this one. Running time, 84 minutes. Played November 16.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

HONEYMOON IN BALI: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Allan Jones, Helen Broderick—Good business good picture. Played September 19-21.—Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood and general patronage.

SAFARI: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Madeleine Carroll—No business, no comments, and not much to talk about. Was allocated too high. The story came to an end without any climax. Satisfactory for the lesser show on a double. Really a big disappointment.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

STAR MAKER, THE: Bing Crosby, Louise Campbell, Ned Sparks—Good picture for children and adults who like children. Just fair business here. Weather good. Played October 13-16.—Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood and general patronage.

UNTAMED: Ray Milland, Patricia Morison, Akim Tamiroff—A very fine picture that pleased.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WAY OF ALL FLESH: Akim Tamiroff, William Henry, Gladys George, Muriel Angelus—Although this was not a good draw, due partly to very severe weather conditions, it went over very well. We received many exceptional comments and think it is one of the best that Paramount has turned out this year. I say this in spite of the numerous unfavorable comments this picture has received from the critics and in these columns. Excellent story and good character parts.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

Republic

COVERED TRAILER: James, Lucile, Russell Gleason, Mary Beth Hughes, Harry Davenport—This is one of the best "Higgins Family" pictures. Played with Fox's "Elsa Maxwell's Hotel for Women." Running time, 64 minutes. Played November 14-16.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

GAUCHO SERENADE: Gene Autry, June Story, Smiley Burnette—This is a good feature but Autry seems to be slipping here. Played with Columbia's "Girls of the Road." Running time, 67 minutes. Played November 21-23.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

HIT PARADE OF 1941, THE: Kenny Baker, Frances Langford, Hugh Herbert, Ann Miller, Mary Boland, Patsy Kelly—Good musical show and good business. Running time, 88 minutes. Played November 29-30.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HIT PARADE OF 1941, THE: Kenny Baker, Frances Langford, Hugh Herbert, Ann Miller, Mary Boland, Patsy Kelly, Phil Silvers—Baker weakly received, Langford liked, but never finished song "Little Old Lamp." Somebody always cut her off before the last verse. Why? Kelly always a good comic, and this Phil Silvers from burlesque shows promise. Fair biz but the show had too little of any one element to bring 'em in in crowds. Running time, 88 minutes.—Ken Gorham, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Vt. General patronage.

IN OLD MISSOURI: Weaver Brothers, Elviry—Really better than "Grand Ole Opry," but drew less than this. A fair program picture. Running time, 65 minutes. Played November 20-21.—Harry H. Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

MONEY TO BURN: James, Lucile, Russell Gleason, Harry Davenport—Very fine family picture which we double billed with Chas. Starrett to nice week-end business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SING, DANCE, PLENTY HOT: Johnny Downs, Ruth Terry—Pretty good but biz was off some. Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 6-7.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

RKO Radio

DR. CHRISTIAN MEETS THE WOMEN: Jean Hersholt, Dorothy Lovett—The weakest of this series; yet pleased. Needs story and direction. A shame to throw this series to the dogs. Anything now that has possibilities should be capitalized on.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LOST SQUADRON, THE (reissue): Richard Dix, Mary Astor, Erich van Stroheim—You can't lose your bet on this picture. Good picture; good business. Weather was cloudy and cool.. Running time, 79 minutes. Played October 24-26.—Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood and general patronage.

LUCKY PARTNERS: Ginger Rogers, Ronald Colman—A grand comedy, capably played by the two stars and a picture that drew very well at the box office. Light comedies such as this are what the public seems to want. Running time, 100 minutes. Played November 16-18.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BRIGHAM YOUNG—FRONTIERSMAN: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Dean Jagger, Brian Donlevy, Jane Darwell, Mary Astor, Vincent Price, Jean Rogers—Another top allocated Fox picture that was a box office flop. Played to lowest Sunday gross in six months. The picture is well acted; only criticism is minor part that Tyrone Power plays. Running time, 114 minutes. Played November 16-18.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

ELSA MAXWELL'S PUBLIC DEB. NO. 1: George Murphy, Brenda Joyce, Ralph Bellamy, Mischa Auer, Charles Ruggles, Elsa Maxwell—Good enough picture that is slow getting started. This picture does not, however, warrant the allocation that Fox placed it in. From a box office standpoint it outdrew many of their more highly touted pictures that played on preferred playing time. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 21-22.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

ELSA MAXWELL'S HOTEL FOR WOMEN: Ann Sothern, Linda Darnell, James Ellison, Jean Rogers, Lynn Bari, Elsa Maxwell—A good cast in a good feature. Played with Republic's "Covered Trailer". Running time, 83 minutes. Played November 14-16.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

LUCKY CISCO KID: Cesar Romero, Mary Beth Hughes, Evelyn Venable—A good western but no more business than Rogers, O'Brien or any good western star. Should be sold in western bracket and price.—C. L. Niles, Niels Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MARYLAND: Walter Brennan, Fay Bainter, Brenda Joyce, John Payne, Charlie Ruggles, Hattie McDaniel—Very, very good. A few said the best picture that they had ever seen. Really better liked here, if comments mean anything, than "Swanee River". Did only average Sunday-Tuesday business but severe weather hurt the gross considerable.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

THREE CONTRIBUTORS JOIN DEPARTMENT

Three new contributors have been added to those sending weekly reports to the What the Picture Did for Me department. They are:

WALTR ELDRED, Colfax Theatre, Colfax, California.

ELSTUN THEATRE, Cincinnati, Ohio.

YALE THEATRE, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

Read the reports of these and other contributors in adjoining columns.

RETURN OF FRANK JAMES: Henry Fonda, Gene Tierney, Jackie Cooper—Not the draw of its predecessor but will rank among our five biggest grossers for 1940. Seems to be just as good as "Jesse" and comments were all favorable. First night was biggest Sunday we ever had but the third night—election night—was away off.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

YESTERDAY'S HEROES: Robert Sterling, Jean Rogers—Just another football picture with nothing outstanding in it that drew an average crowd on bargain night. Running time, 66 mintes. Played November 19-20.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

United Artists

FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT: Joel McCrea, Laraine Lay, Herbert Marshall, George Sanders, Robert Benchley—One of the greatest pictures to play here in sometime. Business above average. Running time, 120 minutes. Played November 18-20.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT: Joel McCrea, Laraine Day, Herbert Marshall, George Sanders, Robert Benchley—Exceptional picture. Many favorable comments. Business average. Running time, 120 minutes. Played November 17-18.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

KIT CARSON: Jon Hall, Lynn Bari—The best picture of this type in a long time. Held interest of all classes. Business above average for single bill. Running time, 97 minutes. Played November 22-23.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

SOUTH OF PAGO PAGO: Victor McLaglen, Jon Hall, Frances Farmer, Olympe Bradna—Not the the grosser that we expected it would be. Did about average Sunday-Tuesday business. The picture has entirely too many brutal scenes that do not please the women patrons. Rates a fair average for this type of picture but not a bit more.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theater, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

TURNABOUT: Carole Landis, John Hubbard, Adolphe Menjou, Mary Astor—Somewhat overdone—which is to be expected from this story—where the husband is going to have a baby. Drew well but not the kind of a show people care to comment on. Really nothing would have been lost if this hadn't been made.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

Universal

LITTLE BIT OF HEAVEN, A: Gloria Jean, Robert Stack, Nan Gray, Hugh Herbert, Stuart Edwin, Butch and Buddy—Gloria Jean has a swell voice. The public likes it but why the highbrow music? The pictures makes fun of aristocrats but the music is slanted to them, not the public. Little plot, no swing. Leave the arias to Durbin. Butch and Buddy pretty well received. Running time, 86 minutes.—Ken Gorham, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Vt. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

BROTHER ORCHID: Edward G. Robinson, Ann Sothern, Ralph Bellany, Humphrey, Bogart—Robinson always good. Here he combines the acting of "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" with his gangster roles. Moves a little slow but in keeping with the spirit of the film. Pretty good audience appeal—Ken Gorham, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Vt. General patronage.

MY LOVE CAME BACK: Olivia de Havilland, Jeffrey Lynn, Charles Winninger, Eddie Albert, Jane Wyman—Very good entertainment and the music in this feature will please most every kind of patronage. This was very much enjoyed by all my patrons and I can recommend this one. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 7.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre. Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

CALLING ALL CURS: Three Stooges—A very good Stooge comedy. Action all the way through. Running time, 15 minutes.—Haryy H. Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

CANVAS CAPERS: Sport Thrills—If your crowd likes those slambang professional wrestling reels, this one will get the laughs. It certainly did here. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

COMMUNITY SING: No. 6—Very good. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

MAD HATTER, THE: Color Rhapsodies—Colored cartoon not up to Columbia standards.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WORLD OF 1960 (FUTURAMA): Cinescopes—An interesting review of the "looking into the future" General Motors World's Fair exhibit that attracted so much attention. Since our boys were unable to make the Fair they appreciate these shorts very much and I find it difficult to secure enough of them. Running time, nine minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

EYES OF THE NAVY: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Entertaining two reeler showing airplanes and airplane carriers. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FLAG SPEAKS, THE: Special—A swell color short, both instructive and historical that pleased everyone. Running time, 20 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOOD BAD BOYS: Our Gang—The Gang comedies are off. They lack action of past Gang comedy. Running time, nine minutes.—Harry H. Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

MIRACLE AT LOURDES: MGM Miniatures—Very good of its kind. Running time, 11 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: We have used this for five years and feel it has given us satisfaction. We prefer Fox of the two.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PLEASE ANSWER: Pete Smith Specialities—Interesting.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

Paramount

AQUA-RHYTHM: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Very good. Better for summer time. Little cool here for swimming.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

BUSY LITTLE BEARS: Paragraphics-Paramount did us a favor when they suggested we play it. A very good single reel that is different. A good substitute for a comedy on any program. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

DANGEROUS DOLLARS: Paragraphics—No matter how many reels you have run on counterfeit money, this one is by far the best. It certainly tells you plainly how to tell a bad bill when you see one. That's more than the earlier reels on the subject have done. Be sure the girl in the box office sees it. It should be run everywhere to help combat counterfeiters. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

DIVING DEMONS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Good Sportlight.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

FIGHTING PALS: Popeye the Sailor—This cartoon is a little different from the other Popeye cartoons but they do not seem to improve. They just get by as a cartoon. Running time, eight minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

KING FOR A DAY: Gabby Color Cartoons—This is the first of this series we have played and it is certainly a weak sister. The Paramount color classics were excellent. Why this series? We certainly will have to move them off our good days.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SNEAK, SNOOP AND SNITCH: Animated Antics—One of Paramount's very funniest Animated Antics. Will surely please all seeing it. Running time, seven minutes.—William Noble, Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

RKO Radio

INFORMATION PLEASE: No. 3—Another good short in this series. Even the recording seemed better. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

PICTURE PEOPLE: No. 1—A very nice reel showing the cinema actors in action. Pleased and a good filler.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PICTURE PEOPLE: No. 3—Don Dickerman's Pirate Den night club in Hollywood opening. Recording very poor.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

SCRAPPILY MARRIED: Leon Errol Comedies—Leon Errol never fails to please here. While this one was good for plenty of laughs, we did not consider it to be in the "better" class. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

TROUBLE SHOOTERS: RKO Pathe Sportscopes—A nice reel for those interested in golf. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ACQUITTED BY THE SEA: Believe It or Not-Ripley—A very amusing short. The conviction of the wrong man, yet saved by the sea. Running time, nine minutes.—Harry H. Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

HAPPY HAUNTING GROUNDS: Terry-Toons—Just fair cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—Harry H. Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

LAND OF FLOWERS: Magic Carpet Series—If the Florida Chamber of Commerce did not pay for this, they should. A very pretty reel in color.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LUCKY DUCK, THE: Terry-Toons—An ordinary color cartoon in which everything you expect happens. Running time, seven minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

AN ENDLESS CHAIN

In checking over a September Round Table section for "Boom Town" ideas, Ken Prickett, of the El Rancho, in Victoria, Tex., came across the photo of the 15-foot model oil rig promoted by Francis Deering, in Houston, for the same date. Ambitious to borrow the display for his showing, Prickett noted the name of the owners, carried in the photo, got in touch with their local dealer who arranged to have the rig brought in two weeks ahead. The owners paid all shipping charges, sent two men to set up the exhibit.

The tiein proved as effective for Ken as it did for Francis. Publicized in the press and over the radio, the promotion drew continuous crowds which contributed no little to the excellent business gathered by the attraction.

Here again, and vividly, is illustrated the primary function of the Round Table, to act as the industry's clearing house for tested exploitations of boxoffice worth. An idea reported by one member is picked up by others, who in turn tell what they have done for the cause.

It goes on and on, an endless chain moving only in one direction, a direction, of course, always pointing toward the ticket window.

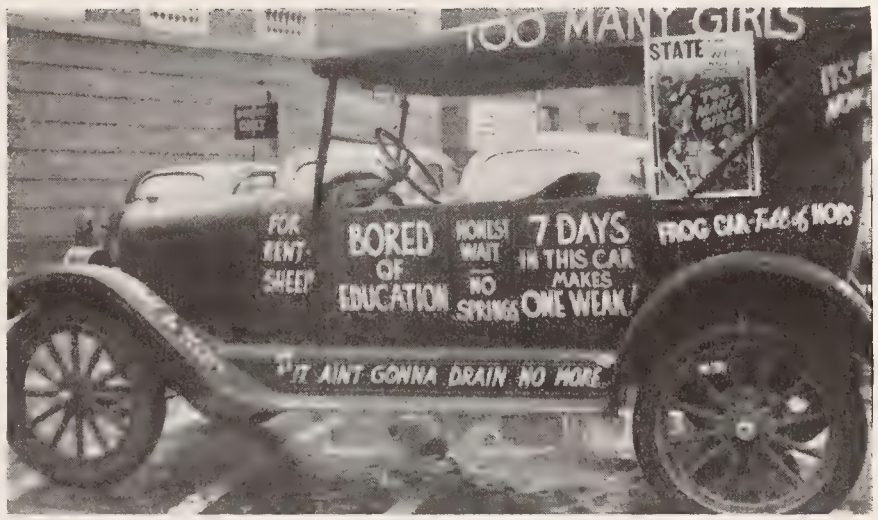
SPOTLIGHT FOR THE MANAGER



Silent for much too long, the Warnermen in Steve Barutio's North Philadelphia district are heard from on a following page. Designated a publicity committee to represent these unassuming members, Stanley Benford and R. Lee Kline will see to it that the district campaigns are reported for the information of our readers. Writes the committee:

"Steve thinks that considerable good work of the boys is being overlooked as a result of their personal modesty."

This would be a good time to repeat what J. J. Fitzgibbon, Famous Players Canadian headman, on more than one occasion has emphasized:

"It is amazing that many good managers can see and execute ticket selling ideas for either a screen personality or story, yet fail to realize the importance of publicity for themselves. When a manager fails to take advantage of the opportunity given him, he definitely dissipates an asset of inestimable value."

Continuing our recent discourse on the mistermed "oldie" in exploitation, the above is a reproduction of Ed Harrison's jalopy stunt for "Too Many Girls" at the State, in Waterville, Maine. The college boys and girls in the town "went crazy" over the stunt, says Harrison, in noting that he remembers first using the gageroo back in 1925.

PARAMOUNT'S current project which invites production ideas from theatremen in the field is to be taken as another move in narrowing the gap between studio and theatre. That there might be a fertile source of boxoffice material among showmen in close touch with the cash customers is recognized by the offer of cash prizes for the best picture suggestions. The returns already are said to be promising.

IT isn't too early to begin planning for New Year's Eve. Now that the December campaigns are in full swing, consideration is to be given to the year-end celebration. Obviously, there is to be a lot of currency in circulation for the Big Night. Many Round Tablers are preparing to get their teeth into a fair hunk of it.

Round Table In Pictures

In advance of "The Thief of Bagdad" opening in New York, United Artists tied up a number of the best Fifth Avenue store windows, one of which is represented above. Dignified credit cards were conspicuously displayed calling attention to date at the Music Hall.

Converting his boxoffice into a compo Christmas tree, studded with colored bulbs, Arnold Stoltz at the Avon, in Utica, thus spotlighted the pre-holiday atmosphere. In the Christmas wreath seal, copy sold pictures as the best gift 365 days a year.

Perambulating through the streets of Victoria, Tex., was lad with portable radio as advance for Ken Prickett's "Foreign Correspondent" at the El Rancho. As folks gathered chap tuned in on newscasts and distributed heralds.

Reported by Manager Eddie Selette at Warners' Albany, in Albany, N. Y., are institutional lobby easels used in front of his boxoffice. Alternating the signs with each change of program, Selette changes his copy to fit the occasion.

Seeks Gatling Gun On 'Mountie' Date

For three days ahead, readers of the Watertown, N. Y., papers were concerned with classified ads run by Manager Garson Jaffa, Schine's Avon, seeking the rental of a Gatling gun similar to the one used in "Northwest Mounted Police," copy tied in with the picture. The want ad slant continued interest in the date, started with an intense publicity barrage and built further with the pressbook "Get Your Man" contest, wherein cash and guest tickets were offered.

The campaign aimed at school coverage with announcements in history and English classes, letters to principals and teachers in upper grades and high school classes throughout the county. Paramount's national essay contest was tied in with the schools, plus added prizes for the best local entries. Poster contest for the schools art departments also aided. The date received further plugging at meetings of the various lunch clubs.

Street stunts included a parade, headed by a 50-piece children's band and a young horseman in "Mountie" uniform. In line were decorated sound truck, autos, and ushers bearing banners. Other coverage was secured via Postal Telegraph hookup whereby memos on wire blanks were inserted in outgoing messages.

"Hullabaloo" Quiz Contests Featured by Bordonaro

Since his local paper features a weekly football quiz contest, B. C. Bordonaro, manager of the Palace, in Olean, N. Y., tied in by offering guest tickets for "Hullabaloo" to winners, thereby receiving daily plugs on the picture. Second contest consisted of tie-up with same paper which ran the Frank Morgan radio quiz for three days, tickets were also given in this connection.

Large lobby display with cutouts from the one and three sheets with art work were used a week ahead. Special front was built which included cutouts from the 24s, threes and one sheets and stills. Valance covered two sides of the marquee and festoons were hung from the roof.

Sponsored Quiz Program Clicks for Schoonmaker

Sponsored by a local dairy who put up the money for prizes is the quiz contest arranged by Paul G. Schoonmaker, Jr., and held on the stage of the Wilson Theatre, in Tyrone, Pa. Questions are submitted either to the theatre or the dairy and for each question used on the program, person receives guest tickets. All entrants, whether their questions are accepted or no receive a quart of milk.

The way the stunt is handled is that each person entering the theatre is given a number and a drawing, which is held on the stage, is made to find the 10 people who are to participate in the quiz. Sponsor advertises the event weekly, theatre building it up through trailers, ads and house copy. Schoonmaker reports that the program has proved popular with his audiences and has resulted in increased boxoffice.

Barutio District Warnermen Report Recent Activities

YURASKO'S "LITTLE THEATRE" LOBBY HALLOWE'EN SCREEN SHOW

DESIGNATED a forwarding committee to make known the good works of the Warnermen in Round Tabler Steve Barutio's North Philadelphia district, Stanley Benford and R. Lee Kline send along a group of campaigns touching upon recent activities.

At the Sedgwick, Manager Bill Yurasko is represented by two jobs on Hallowe'en and "Tom Brown." The holiday event was celebrated with a costume contest held on the Saturday before and for which attractive prizes were secured from cooperating neighborhood merchants. In addition to the usual stage judging, Yurasko took motion pictures of all the children as they arrived at the theatre, the youngsters filmed via an 8 mm. camera with Kodachrome Technicolor stock. The entrants were posed on a lobby platform against vari-colored backgrounds, alone or in groups of three, according to the merit of their costumes. Over 300 of the youngsters were shot, some 700 or more others and their parents watching the proceedings.

Parents Given Film Clips

All attending were given Hallowe'en candy and comic strip books, after which the costumed children paraded across the stage to be appraised for the big prizes. For the followup in the next weekend Bill ran the 8 mm. costume pictures in the lobby "Little Theatre," after which clips of the different children were distributed to the parents requesting the individual shots. (See cut above.)

Yurasko's date on "Tom Brown" was tied to a pictorial display and newspaper contest stemming from group pictures of graduating classes from the nearby Penn Charter and Germantown academies. The paper ran photos of 1910 and 1911 graduating classes offering to readers who could identify all the students in one group, tickets to the picture. At the theatre, a large setpiece featured blowups of other similar graduating classes from 1885 on.

All schools in the area were contacted on the date and copies of the book donated to their libraries. After school showings were announced and theatre cards distributed.

At the Strand, Manager I. Wiernik is credited with an interesting old-time movie show that included some of the Chaplin shorts and the Great Train Robbery. Atmosphere was built up with a street stunt of old-time tandem bicycle pedalled about town by two boys in costume of the nineties and distributing circus-type heralds at traffic corners. The front was boxed in and decorated with old-time lithographs and stills.

Kiddie Checks Distributed

During showings of the shorts, boys in white coats sold peanuts and popcorn. Between the shorts, illustrated slides were run asking women to remove their hats, gentlemen not to "spit on the floor" and, of course, the old reliable "one minute, please, while the operator changes slides."

Expanding the uses of the Warner "kiddie checks," book tickets for youngsters, Manager Joe Neumson at the Bromley, was successful in having a leading neighborhood restaurant offer and advertise children's birthday parties, the price to include theatre "kiddie checks." Tent cards with tie-in copy were placed on all the restaurant tables, copy also calling attention to the checks as appropriate gifts to children.

It was a "Spooks-A-Poppin" show at the Keystone, put together by Manager Roland Haynes in booking a repeat on "Hidden Staircase," and spook cartoon shorts with "Ghost Breakers." Special trailer with backstage spook effects attracted, as did trick teaser cards throughout the theatre.

Boy Finds Girl and Queen Elected On Promotions By Round Tablers

What resulted in a distinct "hypo" for ailing matinee grosses came about at the L. & J. Palace, Athens, Ga., when Moon Corker and Frank Bickerstaff "played Cupid" to the local high school and college students. Compiling a list of boys and girls "going steady", the Round Tablers set the cashiers to calling the girls so listed, for three days ahead. Representative call was as follows:

"Louise, this is the Georgia Theatre. We have decided to be Cupid. If you can get Frank to bring you to the Georgia before 6:00 o'clock Thursday, we will admit you free to see 'Blondie Plays Cupid'. You must come with Frank."

Business boomed, since many of the girls so invited brought along other friends in addition to the "only one". The theatremen report the returns good enough for a repeat on the stunt, scheduled for a later date.

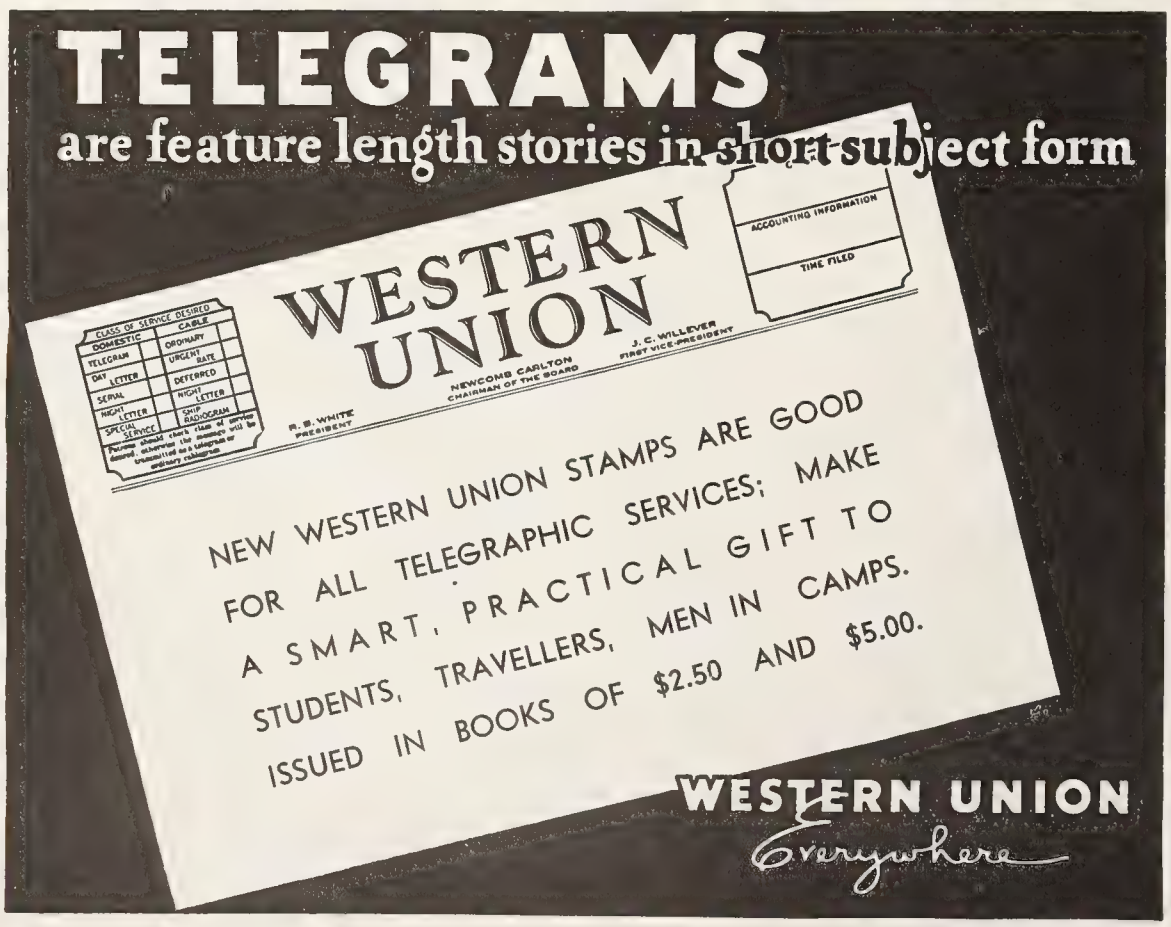
Figuring that the crowning of the high school freshman Class Queen in Abilene, Tex., an important event among the students, Manager Ted E. Waggoner sold the 500 members of the class on holding the party on the stage of the Majestic. Incidental to the crowning ceremonies was a 25-minute stage show, supervised by Waggoner, with a cast of over 70 "frosh". Encouraged by a percentage of the gross for the class fund, the students went out and sold the house to turnaway business, some 2,000 ticket buyers descending upon the 955-seat theatre, according to the Round Tabler.

Griffith Ties Merchants To Psychic Personal



Entirely costless was the engagement of a well-known psychic by Bob Griffith at the Lex, in Chicago, through tieup with local merchants. Pluggers were distributed by the stores calling attention to the mind-readers appearance at the theatre and stores at certain hours. Co-op ads were also run in papers together with readers.

Through cooperation of permanent residence hotels in the vicinity, Bob planted advertising on a special morning matinee in each mail box. Front cover of theatre program was entirely devoted to the engagement and special teaser folders were distributed with copy "For Women Only."

Darby Switches Cooking Class From Newspaper to Theatre

With his local daily conducting its own annual cooking class, Jim Darby at the Norwalk, Norwalk, Conn., approached them with the idea of transferring it to his theatre this year. Plan was accepted by the editor, who agreed to pay a flat rental for use of the house and give publicity to the event in all their ads as well as announcements for coming attractions.

Holding four sessions of the class, front page stories were run in advance calling attention to the opening and inviting all to attend. Promoted from leading merchants were prizes which were awarded each day. Presiding was a well-known home economist.

Lessons in Conga Sell "Argentine"

The nationally musicalized "six lessons" were neatly incorporated in the advance of "Argentine Way" at Loew's Palace, Washington, when Dan Terrell, city ad head, put out a folder showing the various steps of the Conga danced by Betty Grable in the picture. Illustrations of each step were accompanied by explanatory text compiled by one of the local dance instructors, with picture copy on back page plus credits for the instructor. Another advance piece that attracted was a folder on behalf of Carmen Miranda, cover copy reading, in Spanish, "Presentation de la Sensational Estrella," translated on inside, "Presenting the Sensational Star" and facing a cut of the South American songstress plus theatre dates.

Pan American Airways cooperated with a model plane in the lobby and window display, music stores were tied in for the song hits and free admissions offered to the first 10 persons coming in Argentine costume. Bars and restaurants were covered with one of those famed Washington Loew cocktail tieups, this one called a "Bombshell" after Miss Miranda, folders plugging the drink carrying the intriguing line, "it has voltage without joltage."

On Mickey Rooney's recent personal appearance at the Capitol, Terrell reports a Postal Telegraph tiein for a specially priced "welcome to Washington" message to the star. Special blanks carrying theatre copy were made up by Postal and distributed far and wide to schools, offices and the company's mailing list. Posters of the date decorated all the branches and for an added stimulant, the telegraph blanks noted that Rooney would personally acknowledge the first 100 messages addressed to him at the theatre.

Studebaker Plants Contests For "Hullabaloo" Engagement

Highlight of W. T. Studebaker's campaign for "Hullabaloo" at the Logan Theatre, in Logansport, Ind., consisted of pressbook quip contest asking the public to complete unfinished sentence hurled at Frank Morgan in the film by his three ex-wives. Second quiz contest was held in cooperation with newly opened five and dime and local papers displayed "Hullabaloo" bulletins along with regular news flashes. Bumper strips, window cards, directional arrows, sound truck and window displays were used to good effect.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Kalberer's Amateur Show

As a buildup for two of his weak nights, A. J. Kalberer at the Indiana, in Washington, Ind., contacted heads of parochial and public schools to put on special amateur shows in which the children participated. Judged by audience applause, promoted prizes were awarded winners. Plugged widely in local dailies and schoolwide, percentage of the proceeds went for class funds. Entire stage presentation lasted between 30 and 40 minutes each evening. Tickets were sold by members of the eight grades.

F-P Canadians Set Thrift Ticket Sale

For the fifth consecutive year, Famous Players Canadian theatres are putting on an intense campaign for the sale of the circuit's "Thrift Ticket" for Christmas gifts. Sales have increased with each year's campaign with 1939 figures topping the previous year by a solid 30 per cent. Suggestions for the drive in all theatres have been compiled by Jim Nairn's ad department in a manual stressing that managers will share in the sales through the circuit sharing plan, other members of the staff to receive a 10 per cent commission on all outside sales. Tickets will be honored until June 28, 1941, and as a convenience to buyers, orders will be accepted for tickets to be delivered in other towns where the circuit operates.

Among the cooperations suggested, based on past experiencee, are stores whose type of business and locations provide the best tieins. Counter sales are stressed with managers advised to make regular visits to stimulate sales and to check the advertising material furnished by the circuit for display. Tickets to be given by merchants for sales over a certain amount are also advised and attention also is being brought to newspapers to give tickets to their carriers. The same idea is intended for store delivery boys. Organizations such as insurance companies and others with large personnel staffs are also found to be good prospects.

Personal Contacts Stressed

The tickets are being pushed as children's gifts wherein special lobby cards are to be used. Clubs interested in child welfare, school and Sunday school teachers are among other fields considered fertile.

Particular stress is placed upon the value of personal contacts by managers, the manual stating individual cases where such contacts returned big sales. Last year such visits returned satisfying sales to automobile dealers, to charitable clubs, selling the tickets through members for a percentage of sales for club funds.

Managers Solicit Hospitals

Hospitals are also found to be wide open for the gift tickets, switchboard operators selling tickets to doctors for internes and nurses. Junior Leaguers used them and other women's organizations built up club funds through the commission allowed. Coal companies were among other businesses to fall in line, giving the tickets with orders delivered within a certain period near Christmas. This year, with so many Canadians in service, the circuit is making extra effort to sell tickets to sailors, soldiers, etc.

Gordon's Fiddlers Contest

A. C. Gordon of the Rialto Theatre, Boise, Ida., promoted an old time fiddler's contest in his campaign on Lum and Abner's "Dreaming Out Loud." The contest was held on the stage of the Rialto. The stunt won considerable space in both the Capitol City News and Statesman. Another phase of Gordon's campaign was the imprinting of paper bags of half a dozen of the City's leading grocery stores.

Two-Theatre Tiein Marks Thanksgiving Giveaway

Elaborating upon the usual poultry giveaway for Thanksgiving to cover two theatres instead one, Managers Milton D. Levy and Don Johnson of the Commercial and Gayety in Chicago, combined to offer the local Butchers and Grocers Association a comprehensive coverage in cooperating on the project. Composed of some 60 neighborhood stores, the Association was offered the facilities of both houses in exchange for underwriting the entire cost.

This included window cards in all stores, large ads in local papers, trailers and posters. The merchants distributed 200,000 coupons to make the drawing an unprecedented success. Capacity business was insured on two nights instead of one, by linking the theatres with special telephones, with patrons in each house eligible for the prizes.

Laugh Angle Stressed By Rodnok on "Love"

Newspaper coverage on "I Love You Again" as arranged by Steve Rodnok, Jr., at the Oaks, in Oakmont, Pa., consisted of a limerick contest with guest tickets to winners. Front page story was devoted to picture and cast, followup included names of winners. Spot announcements were made over WYPA, heralds distributed in advance and special laugh trailer made for the occasion.

Playing up the sequence in which Powell is a scout master, Rodnok planted posters on bulletin boards of Scout headquarters reading: "Attention, boys. Imagine William Powell as your troop leader," etc. For street bally, girl in nurse's uniform distributed capsules with picture copy, while ambulance appropriately bannered was stationed out front. Another street stunt included girl distributing candy hearts.

SIX OF THE PIVAL ONE-COLUMN "HORROR SHOW" TEASER ADS

Pival's Ghost Girl Tops 'HorrorShow'

For a revival of "Dr. Crespi," at the Kramer, Detroit, John F. Pival, ad head, worked a "horror" campaign wherein a local girl was offered $50 if, alone in the "dark" theatre at midnight, she would sit through a screening of the picture. Promptly dubbed "Ghost Girl" by Pival, the courageous female was tied to a two-column story and photo in the local community daily, girl posing with a skeleton head for added effect. For next day follow-up, John put out a handbill (see cut below) telling all about the offer and carrying the girl's comment on the showing. As it turned out, the girl did not prove quite up to sitting through the entire picture. This was used by the theatreman to promote even more publicity than otherwise.

Newspaper advertising started with a series of small one-column "can you take it" teasers, six of which are reproduced on this page. The same slant was stressed in a circus-type herald with plenty of "can you" copy and cuts. More scare-stuff was had in advance of the trailer when Pival had a man in doctor's gown, spotted in green, come out on the stage, following a flashlight powder bang, to pitch about the date.

Lobby buildup featured an operating table carrying dummy figure and tabbed with tiein copy. Here, too, the "doctor" fussed around for added attention. Copy on 40 by 60 poster alongside and decorated with skull-and-bones gave notice that the theatre would not be responsible for "persons with weak systems who dare to see," etc., and that patrons who came to see the picture did so "at your own risk." Local station was promoted for three-day advance plugs exactly at the stroke of midnight.

PIVAL'S HORROR SHOW HERALD

Plugs Double-Bill As 'Girlesk Revue'

On a suggestion offered by Ralph Bartlett, Wichita, Kan., Fox Midwest city manager, "Woody" Barritt, city ad head, adapted an idea successfully for a recent double-feature at the Palace under the heading of "Girlesk Revue." The pictures selected to carry out the idea, appropriately enough were "Dance, Girl, Dance" and "Argentine Way." The campaign stressed "burlesque," this being brought out in copy and art for newspaper advertising, lobby decorations and publicity.

In advance was a series of daily teaser one-columns in reverse, spotted with "what" copy highlights of both attractions. One read, "What's Brooklynonga. See Girlesk Revue," etc. The second asked, "What's Rhumboogie," the third "What's that hot lick in entertainment." The big ads followed, running mostly three-column and illustrated in the reproductions on page to right. Here, as noted, all copy centered on the "girlesk" idea with a sprinkling of "burlesque" for seasoning.

For lobby, Barritt used 40 by 60 blowups, photo montages of hot girl dancers, and a colored blowup of one of the larger ads. Also contributing to the wide interest was a special trailer, leading off with: "Back in the good old days they called it Burle-que. (But that went out with the horse and buggy.) Today it has a new name, a new verve, a new everything," etc.

Trathen's School Tieup

Tying in with local school which publishes its own paper by the students, Ralph L. Trathen at the Tower, in Bremerton, Wash., has instituted a contest angle which appears in each issue. Front page of paper carries a box with a number, and to the holder of the lucky number run in regular theatre ad, guest tickets were awarded.

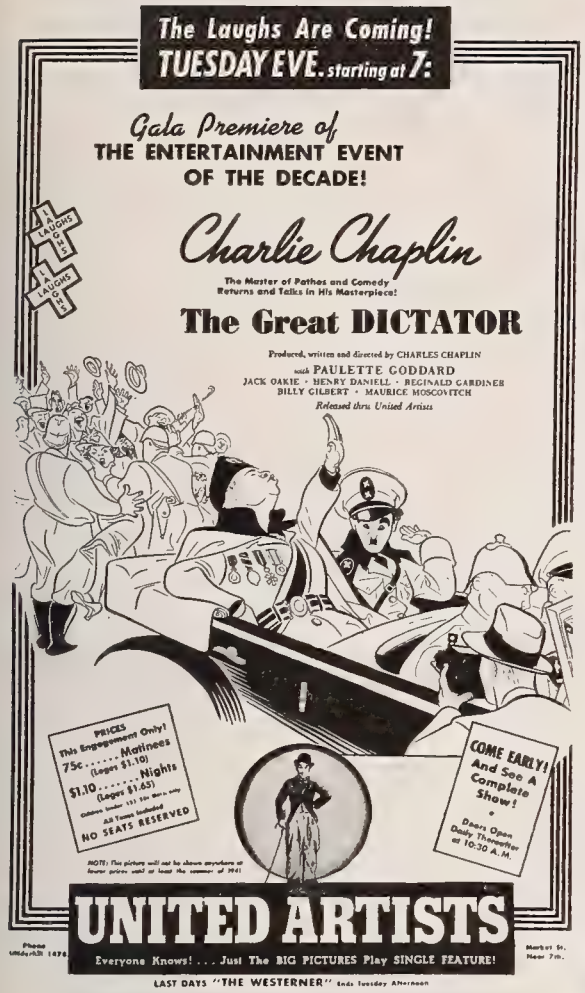
GIRLS WITH RADIOS BUILD "BAND" DATE

For "Strike Up the Band" at Warners, Sheyboygan, Wis., Marlowe Conner and Jack Keegan, district supervisor, utilized the M-G-M transcription for an effective radio tiein by having the program broadcast at the height of the Saturday afternoon shopping hour in advance of the date.

Ten attractive girls with portable radios were stationed at the busiest spots about town. As the program went on the air, the girls tuned in.

Newspapers Aid DiPesa On "Susan and God"

Generous newspaper coverage was accorded Joe DiPesa's date on "Susan and God" at Loew's State and Orpheum in Boston, included in which was a serialization which ran for several days ahead of opening. Art work on Crawford and March was featured together with readers, and columnists praised the picture in their copy.



For "New Moon" the music angle was plugged strongly. Tinted heralds carrying cut of Eddy and MacDonald were distributed which stressed the hit tunes in the picture. In addition visiting cards carrying picture teaser plug with telephone number were distributed.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Busch Hosts Patrons

After both matinee and night performances of "Arise My Love" at the Midwest Theatre, in Oklahoma City, Manager Robert Busch arranged to serve his outgoing patrons promoted coffee and doughnuts. In addition cooperating coffee company which has an air program gave seven spot free ads, calling attention to the showing.

COMPETITIONS

PERHAPS when the annals of this mad era are on some remote day finally set down in their place in the perspective of Time, it will be known as the Age of Showmanship, a period when all that was accomplished with the multitudes was done with the tools of entertainment, "names" and emotional appeal, supplanting quite the processes of intellect and methods of reason.

Show devices have escaped from the theatre, and now they are all over town, at every night-spotted cross-road, strewn across the nation. So now, more than ever it is the problem of the motion picture showman to increasingly institutionalize his theatre, to make it a place to go, integrated with and built into his community. What the exhibitor is able to put into his theatre on his own cannot be cancelled out or sold away; nor can it be put on the air in competition with him. Now that "all the world's a stage", indeed, the job for the box office is more explicit.

MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher

Vol. 141, No. 11 — December 14, 1940

IT'S THE SAME JOB

FROM Wall Street to Times Square to Hollywood Boulevard you can have reports any day of this and that which is happening or going to happen to the motion picture industry in a big broad way. Some of these are laden with an excessive alarm.

It is inevitable that various pressures and evolutions, indicated by legislative projects, and by the Consent Decree and its sequels, tend to modify practice and procedure. It is probably accurate, however, to say that such matters as the Consent Decree are much more symptoms than actual causes, despite all of their ponderous official appearances.

Structurally, the motion picture industry may and must expect that it will be subject to such changes, economic, political and social, as are affecting, in varying degrees, all sectors of American industry. It may be irksome to adopt new methods, to make over established machinery, and inevitably there are both fundamental objections in principle, and just sheer inertia, opposition to the labours involved. These are likely to be confused. Pressures for change are resisted often because they are change.

It is certain, however, that come what may there will always be the amusement-consuming American public, which will pay down a part of whatever money it has in the pursuit of amusement. The motion picture will be getting its share in the degree that it appeals in competition for the entertainment dollar.

PRODUCTION is worried, more than it admits, just now by the apparent, and currently actual, inelasticity of production costs. Standards are those of an industry which flourished in a world market which is no more, may never be again. Wage scales, union, artistic and executive are still based on those merry days. Selling prospects call for inventory investment in terms that create new financing problems.

The public, facing the box office, examining the lobby, scanning the advertising, does not care a whoop in the superheated Hence about all that—but it will buy a show. That is the basic assurance for the motion picture industry, today and tomorrow. Business will be done—by those equipped with the zeal and ingenuity to do it.

Close application of the seat of the pants to the chair at the work desk will have a lot to do with what happens in individual and corporate instances.

Certain, perhaps minor but promising, indications come across this desk. There are evidences in every morning's mail to the editor of Motion Picture Herald that motion picture people are doing a considerably more intensive job of attending to their business. It comes in inquiries, in comment and argument, from exhibitors, executives high and less high, from promoters, advertising persons and, also most interestingly, in a rising tide of concern about the screen from many external areas.

Important evidence of acute new interest in the business of doing business is to be had in the flood of correspondence which has arisen from the Herald's extension of its service functions with the addition of the elaborate new living catalogue of the wares of the screen in the Product Digest section. Again, evidence is had in a sharp upturn of the already high rate of response to the polling of showmen, affiliated and independent, on the "Money Makers".

Showmen, with new problems in hand, and ahead, are going to work again.

"SOFTLY"

PROBABLY the quietest place in all the nation is a new sound laboratory right amid the din of the Westinghouse works at East Springfield, which has been hushed to a new noise low so that testers can listen to machinery.

You'll be remembering it was this Westinghouse which was the 40 per cent of that historic 60–40 arrangement on sound devices leading up to the RCA Phonophone recording and reproducing system.

Now they have a room where, if you can't hear yourself think, you can at least hear your heart beat. It is a space surrounded by a foot of felts and air spaces, approached through felt-lined baffle tunnels and supported on steel springs. The noise level is 37 decibels. The ordinary quiet home, they say, registers 45 decibels, an executive office 50, a typical factory 85, and the gurgle of water in a little fountain up to 72. Even the vibrations of the earth rate between 5 and 10 decibels. An ordinarily healthy man, by his body vibrations, rates about 5 when he's absolutely still.

They say a man with a sharp ear is more accurate than instruments, that he can detect a difference of one decibel. That's probably what makes a sales manager.

CAREER MAN

NOW a full twenty-five years have elapsed since Mr. William A. Scully, who sells pictures, made his first sale to an exhibitor, and he and that exhibitor are still friends. This comes to mind because about now Mr. Scully is having one of those anniversaries, his third with Universal Picture Corporation, as general sales manager, but it was way back in 1916 when the lad took up with Famous Players-Lasky's Boston exchange, and in 1918 he went over to Metro as New Haven manager for a temporary connection which ran on through M-G-M for twenty years. He went to Universal January 1, 1938, since which time it seems the curve has been upwards.

PRESS day this week your editor made his 1,000th taxi trip from Grand Central station to the Herald's office in Rockefeller Center, and reports that in those thousand rides only eighteen drivers have been able to distinguish, on the first telling, between the RCA building and the RKO building. They all feel underpaid. Incidentally, there's the kind of mind to which box office advertising is addressed.

This Week in the News

New Sound Coming

SIX companies are at work developing new sound systems so that speech and music in all theatres can be released from behind the screen and come from the whole stage or even from other parts of the theatre, to create more perfect illusions of reality. Electrical Research Products, Radio Corporation, Warner Brothers, Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Universal all are giving attention to the matter of bringing new, "living" sound to the theatre screen.

First attempts in this direction have already been made. ERPI's stereophonic sound, developed by Bell Telephone Laboratories, was shown without pictures in New York and Hollywood last Spring. RCA's "Fantasia" has been playing in New York for a month and will open in other cities soon. The Disney film uses an elaborate reproducing system to give three-dimensional effects and added volume. Warner Brothers are installing equipment in the Strand, New York, for their new Vitasound, which will make its debut around the holidays. Though not as complicated as the RCA Fantasound of "Fantasia" it also has some special qualities and can reproduce sounds in a more natural way than possible in the present method. Other systems are also being prepared in the sound laboratories and being tested in the film studios.

The story of the new advances in sound from a technical point of view, with discussions of the various proposed systems and necessary changes in theatre installations required for each, are treated in Better Theatre, the second section of this week's MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

Ultimately it will be the exhibitors who will have to make the additions to their reproducing equipment, if the improved sound is to be generally adapted. It was reported that changes in the sound head and additional amplifying and speaker apparatus would cost in the neighborhood of one thousand dollars for the average theatre.

"Fantasia's" Fantasound uses three sound and one control tracks on a separate strip of film; the system is not considered practical for general commercial use. Warner's Vitasound has one regular sound track and one control track, running down in the sprocket space which regulates volume and switches in and out speakers on the right and left of the main speakers behind the screen. Several other companies are working on systems which combine some of the features of Fantasound and Vitasound. Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Universal are working on methods which will give stereophonic effects, requiring two sound tracks and a control track.

Bombs Close 300

THE war has closed 320 film theatres in Great Britain, because of either extensive damage or total destruction from German air raids, as of December 1st. (David Rose, managing director in England for Paramount said last week on his return to New York that 200 theatres in Greater London alone had been closed.) Despite almost constant attacks, however, theatre building and re-building continues in England. Two houses, one at Cotonend, Warwick, and the other at Grays in Essex, have opened in recent days.

The British exhibitors organization, the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, and the distributors group, the Kinematograph Renters Society, have been trying to work out a satisfactory policy with respect to bookings at theatres which have been forced to close on account of the war.

On Thursday representatives of labor in the industry were to meet with Government officials at the British Board of Trade, London, to discuss ways and means of obtaining help to carry on film production. The meeting was postponed from Friday of last week.

A motion picture theatre in a "South Coast Town," identified as Portsmouth, headquarters of the British Fleet by dispatches from Berlin, was destroyed and some 50 of the 300 persons watching the show were killed. Two persons were killed when a bomb hit a studio at Denham, 15 miles from London.

The London offices of both Columbia and National broadcasting companies were seriously damaged this week.

No final decision has been reached yet by the major American motion picture companies on the monetary agreement being negotiated with the British Government to replace the one which expired last October 31st. During the first year of the war about $17,500,000 was withdrawn from England. The new pact will allow the American firms to take only about $12,500,000, it was reported.

Grierson Quits

JOHN GRIERSON, British documentary film producer, who became Dominion Film Commissioner 15 months ago, after the National Film Board of Trade of Canada was formed upon his recommendation, has resigned. His resignation, effective late in February, has been accepted by the Dominion Government. His successor will be named in January. Anent his action, Mr. Grierson said:

"My job in Canada was to establish a national film board and, when it was established, to hand it over to Canadians to run. I believe the time is right to hand it over."

Fair Trial Demanded

THE Independent Theatre Owners Association, of New York, Wednesday, demanded of exhibitors a fair trial for the consent decree.

"Fighting the consent decree now, is like beating a dead horse," it said. "We must resign ourselves to the hard fact that the consent decree is now law and, as such, cannot be controverted. There is talk that action will be taken to set it aside or seek an injunction. Anyone who tries it will have no standing in court.

"There is only one logical step to be taken. Exhibitors must live under the decree and abide by it long enough to determine definitely that it either be detrimental or not. If it be detrimental, as we believe it will be, then forceful measures must be taken to counteract the effects. It might mean Congressional legislation. It might mean State legislation. It might be an action in court.

"But none of these steps can be taken until exhibitors can prove by actual experience that the consent decree is working a hardship on them so bitter that relief must be afforded."

Vaudeville Closed Shop

THIS week it appeared that, for the first time in their history, vaudeville performers have secured a union shop contract. The agreement, in New York, is expected to serve as a pattern for the contract which the American Guild of Variety Artists hope to obtain in film-vaudeville houses throughout the country.

The contract has been on the fire for several months, signatures being delayed variously by minor points and by the absence through travel or sickness of the circuit executives with whom the Guild representatives were dealing. At mid-week, Dewey Barto, president of the Guild, said it appeared that by the week's end all signatures would be obtained, and admitted that some circuits had already signed, without, however, revealing which.

Trust Penalties

THE Administration's Temporary National Economy Committee, in Washington, Tuesday, formally proposed that a special court be established to hear all trust cases in all fields. Stiffer civil penalties for violations of the trust laws were proposed. One suggestion made was that for the entire period of the violation a guilty company forfeit twice its income and its ranking officers twice their salaries.

The report criticized the smallness of funds appropriated for enforcement of the trust laws, saying, "$1,325,000 is being used to police industry, break up restraints, enforce competition throughout the United States. Around $60,000,000 is spent to preserve peace and order within New York City alone."

Thurman W. Arnold, Assistant Attorney General and head of the Anti-trust Division of the Department of Justice, argued for the Government before the U. S. Supreme Court, Washington, Tuesday in a case charging that a jurisdictional suit called by one union to deprive members of another union of employment was a conspiracy in violation of the Sherman Anti-trust laws.

"Labor should be given every opportunity to organize but should not be permitted to destroy itself by factional wars," Mr. Arnold told Justice Frankfurter, who remarked that unions might better be indicted under the Sherman Act than under the National Labor Relation Act under certain conditions.

Charles H. Tuttle, a former Federal Attorney in New York, represented the union, the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners (A. F. of L.), asserting that this was the first time the Government had attempted to include jurisdictional strikes under the anti-trust act. This, he said, would mean that the Government would have to decide which strikes were justified and which not. The result of such a policy would be fascism, the attorney asserted.

Meanwhile, on Tuesday the Balaban and Katz trust decree violation case in Chicago was ended. Story on page 11.

'Dictator' in London

WAR or no war, and blitzkriegs notwithstanding, United Artists says Charlie Chaplin's "The Great Dictator" will open simultaneously at three London houses—the Prince of Wales, Gaumont Haymarket and the Marble Arch Pavilion theatres, on Monday, December 16th. The picture has been guaranteed a minimum run of ten weeks, says United Artists.

General release in Great Britain (outside of London) has been set for January 6th, 1941; general release in the London area will follow after the pre-release engagement, February 24th.

"Gone With the Wind," will make its Mexican debut at two Mexico City theatres on January 15th, when it opens on a 70 per cent rental basis, similar to the road-show terms in the United States. Subsequent run houses in the U. S. will exhibit the picture on a fifty-fifty rental percentage.

The film will play the Cine Olimpia, only directly-owned American theatre, which will re-open next month after being modernized, and the Cine Iris. The two are the leading first-runs in the capital. Admissions have been scaled at the equivalent of 65 to 70 cents, the highest admissions ever charged.

Aid for Mexico

TWENTY United States bankers and promoters, unnamed, have proposed to Mexican President Avila Camacho, in office a week, a plan of industrial development of Mexican industry, including amusements, through an initial capital investment of $100,000,000.

George Creel, California, and John A. Hastings, former State Senator from New York, were reported, this week, to be in Mexico City working on details.

William Gibbs McAdoo, former U. S. Senator from California is also associated with the enterprise.

This group, which has been scrutinizing the Mexican situation for the past three years, has informed the Mexican president that it believes private American capital would find ample opoprtunity for almost unlimited business development in Mexico without the penalties of excessive taxes.

Mr. Creel known in motion pictures for early efforts in scenario writing, served as chairman of the "Committee on Public Information," which was charged with "selling" World War I to America through motion pictures and otherwise.

France's New Order

THE motion picture industry in France has been put under strict Government control under the supervision of Pierre Laval, vice-premier. Rene Ploquin is to head the Film Commission with the title of Government Commissioner. A central committee has been formed to run the five divisions into which the industry has been divided. Members are Marcel Pagnol, Jean Paineleve, Jean Galland and Marcel Achard.

Double features were banned by a Government order which stated that no program could include more than one film of over 4,000 feet. The length of the whole program, not including newsreels, may not be over 12,500 feet. Each organization active in the industry must have a license from the Ministry of Information. Principal executives also must have identification cards issued by M. Laval's committee. Any violation may be punished by the seizing of the films involved and the closing of the theatre from one week to one year.

The weekly trade paper, La Cinématographie Française, had its name changed to Le Film shortly after the Germans took control in Paris but it continues publication under the same editor and some of the staff, according to reports from France.

The Electrical Research Products, Inc., reported in New York this week that advice from Fred Hotchkiss, manager of the Marseille office of the French company, and from H. L. Pemberton, Paris manager, is that theatres throughout France are rapidly returning to normal operation.

AMERICAN NEWSREELERS IN CANADA. For the first time in years (with the exception of the coverage of the visit of the King and Queen of England) the Canadian Government has waived the high border tariff of 50 per cent of the cost of sound and camera equipment which has kept American newsreels from filming in the Dominion. Above are the first pictures of the first U. S. newsreelers to arrive in Canada under the new order, shown at Camp Borden, Ontario. Canada desires attention on U. S. screens for her war and defense messages. The American newsreels will occasionally use "regular stories" of their own making in their regular releases. Canadian footage heretofore has been purchased from Canadian cameramen. Left to right: Lawrence Kennedy, Fox Movietone; Howard Winner, Pathe; Roy Edwards, Universal; Leo Rossi, Hearst News of the Day; Al Mingalow, Paramount, and Flight Lieutenant John McGinnis.

C. C. POTWIN, acoustical consultant for Erpi, is the newly elected treasurer of the Acoustical Society of America. An advocate of the correct shaping of auditoria for sound control, he is a consultant and contributing columnist to Better Theatres.

ALFRED N. SACH, Dallas circuit owner, in Hollywood on vacation, looks into the radio situation. Here he is with Ona Munson back stage at the CBS studios during the broadcasting of Edward G. Robinson's "Big Town" program for Rinso soap products.

J. ROBERT RUBIN, of Loew's, below right, with Arthur H. Compton, national co-chairman of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, has been appointed chairman of the film division.

LEO DEVANEY, Canadian division manager for RKO, is captain of the company's Ned E. Depinet annual billings drive to start January 25th and end May 9th.

JOHN OJERHOLM, left, manager of Olympic Laboratories of England, a resident American, recently patented a film processing device by which negative shadows are given high definition. The process treats the film after exposure but before printing and is said to add nothing to negative costs.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE TO GET REPORTS ON ARBITRATION CASES

New Film Unit To File All Records; B. & K. Chicago Suit Dismissed and New Decree Ordered; "Little Three" in Court

The special motion picture unit of the Department of Justice, set up following the consent decree settlement of the New York anti-trust suit, will receive for its files a condensation of each case brought up for abitration, including a summary of the issue involved, the questions decided, the arbitrator's name and the award, it was reported this week as the American Arbitration Association speeded plans for the establishment of the arbitration machinery for the industry.

J. Noble Braden, executive secretary of the AAA and executive director of the 31 local arbitration boards provided for in the rules of arbitration of the decree, was to arrive in New York Saturday from the coast and on December 17th he is to leave again to organize tribunals in the mid-west. After the Christmas holidays he will set up the remaining boards in the east.

Meanwhile, the Little Three—Columbia, United Artists and Universal—resumed the trial proceedings which were interrupted when the Government and the five theatre owning distributors adjourned them to negotiate the consent decree. Attorneys for the three companies declared their intention of carrying the case to the supreme court.

B & K Settlement Approved

In Chicago on Tuesday Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward ordered that a decree be prepared for his signature ending the contempt proceedings against Balaban and Katz and seven majors for violating the 1932 consent decree, imposing fines totalling $10,000 and costs on three corporations and changing the Chicago decree to agree with the one signed in New York on November 20th.

The action was taken by Judge Woodward following recommendations made by Edgar Eldredge, of Ottawa, Illinois, special master-in-chancery. Two years ago the Government started criminal contempt proceedings against the defendants, signers of the 1932 decree and Mr. Eldredge heard testimony from all parties before making his report to the judge.

With the decision of Judge Woodward was also entered an order that all Loop theatres in Chicago will hereafter arbitrate the release of first run pictures.

The companies found guilty and the fines were Balaban & Katz Corporation, $5,000 fine; B. & K. Management Corporation, $2,500 fine and Paramount Pictures, Inc., $2,500 fine. Balaban & Katz will also pay costs, estimated at $2,000. The other defendants, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., Twentieth Century-Fox, RKO Pictures, Inc., Universal, Loew's, Inc., United Artists, Vitagraph and Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, were dismissed.

Arbitration File System Planned

The Department of Justice's motion picture unit, headed by Robert L. Wright, will be furnished by the American Arbitration Association with a condensation of each arbitration case, including a summary of the issue involved, the questions decided, the arbitrator's name and the award, under the consent decree's arbitration system. It the Government becomes interested in any particular case they may order the complete record which will be kept at the New York headquarters of the Association.

A copy of every form in each step of every arbitration proceeding in the 31 tribunals will go to New York so that the AAA will be in touch with the activities of each board and so that complete records may be kept at one point.

The hearings throughout the country at each key city will be open to the public and all interested persons, even though no parties to the arbitration, may attend. The Department of Justice asked that there be no closed hearings, it was said. The only limitations in attendance, it was pointed out, will be the size of the hearing rooms in the various arbitration districts.

Two members of the arbitration administrative committee, headed by Paul F. Warburg, have been assigned special duties. Sylvan Gotshal, of the law firm of Weil, Gotshal and Manges, will be in charge of leases and other legal matters, and S. D. Leidesdorf, will supervise the financial system. Both men are also members of the board of the AAA.

Three names for each office of clerk will be proposed by Mr. Braden to the arbitration committee of the AAA which is headed by Franklin E. Parker, Jr.. He will also present his nominations for the panel of arbitrators. In each of the 31 key cities at least ten arbitrators must be chosen. In practice it is expected that the panels will be much larger. As reported last week the principal sources for obtaining suggestions for local arbitrators are Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., Equitable Life Insurance Company, National Association of Credit Men, Bar Associations and Educational Institutions.

Mr. Braden besides interviewing candidates for the office of Clerk of the local tribunals and arbitrators has been arranging for the necessary office space in the 30 cities outside New York —where the boards will function. In New York the Association is planning to expand its space to handle the motion picture arbitration system.

The January issue of The Arbitration Journal, edited by George A. Little, will be devoted exclusively to articles on the motion picture arbitration system. Contributors will include Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied States Association; a spokesman for one of the five consenting companies and various articles by officials of the AAA on particular phases of the machinery.

A spokesman of the AAA commenting on reports that the consenting companies were informing their sales forces to do everything possible to avoid arbitration pointed out that that is one of the effects of arbitration. The AAA set up recently a national system of arbitration for the Air Transport industry which previously had been involved in much controversy and litigation and was charged with actions which endangered lives. In a year of operation not a single case was presented for arbitration. Industry relations were satisfactory and the record for safety in the air was greatly improved.

The arbitration system in the motion picture industry, it was said, should also gradually cut down the number of complaints and charges of

U. S. Court Rules Trust Plaintiff Need Not Show Inability to Obtain Product

In a decision which may be of far-reaching importance in the motion picture and other businesses, the U. S. supreme court this week held that purely local activities may be made the basis for anti-trust suits and that it is not necessary for a plaintiff to show that he has been rendered unable to obtain product in order to maintain such a suit.

The Court's position was defined by Associate Justice Roberts in an opinion remanding to the ninth circuit court of appeals for new consideration a case which it had dismissed, brought by the C. E. Stevens Company against the Foster and Kleiser Company, et al, seeking triple damages for alleged violation of the Sherman Act through a conspiracy to create a monopoly in the business of bill posting on the Pacific Coast.

The complaint asserted that the respondents were members of an association, which had one member in each municipality, and that by reason of its membership it caused the association to refuse to post lithographs if the manufacturers thereof sold or furnished them for posting by independent plants, thus hindering the complainants and others from securing such lithographs. It charged also that the association refused to post bills for advertisers who dealt with independents.

The circuit court dismissed the bill on the ground that the complaint failed to allege that the conspiracy, so far as it affected interstate commerce, was effective to injure the petitioner, since there was no allegation that the practices complained of prevented the petitioner from obtaining any posters, and held that the allegations of damage to the petitioner's business were directed to the local acts of the respondents rather than to any restraint of interstate trade.

The supreme court, however, held that "while these allegations are general, we cannot say that they are inadequate nor are we able to agree with the court below that they are coupled with and treated solely as the consequences of local activities of the respondents.

"We think that, in order to state a couse of action, the petitioner was not bound to aver that it had been wholly unable to obtain posters."

TRIAL OF "LITTLE THREE" RESUMES

unfair practices. It was pointed out that arbitration is a form of insurance against disputes as well as a quick and relatively inexpensive method of settling them as they arise.

"Little Three" Start Fight Against Suit

The "Little 3"—Columbia, United Artists and Universal—began on Thursday, December 5th, their court fight against the Government's anti-trust suit and indirectly against the consent decree signed by the five theatre-owning defendants in the original action brought by the Government in July, 1938. Columbia announced that it would carry the struggle to the supreme court, if necessary, rather than submit to the consent decree.

Louis Frohlich, of Schwartz & Frohlich, counsel for Columbia, told Judge Henry W. Goddard who signed the consent decree on November 20th, that the company would join in the arbitration set-up established in the decree, if the suit were dropped. It was also reported that Universal and United Artists would cooperate with the arbitration system, if the attempt to force them to sign the consent decree were terminated.

Judge Goddard refused to accept the objections of the "Little 3" to the amended complaint offered by the Government, the principal business at the first court appearance of the three non-theatre-owning defendants at which the "Big 5" were not also present. In contrast to the crowded courtroom at previous hearings in the Government's action so few people were present that it was not even necessary to turn on the lights except in the front of the room. Robert W. Wright, assistant attorney general, alone represented the Department of Justice.

On Thursday of this week Mr. Wright was to report to the court on trial dates for the Griffith case in Oklahoma City, the Schine action in Buffalo and the Crescent case in Nashville. The non-consenting companies had requested the court to enjoin the Government from proceeding with the trust suits in the field until after the New York case was settled. Judge Goddard indicated that he would deny the request on the ground that the suits in the field with local exhibitors named as principal defendants were not identical with the New York action.

At the opening of the hearing Mr. Wright explained the amended complaint pointing out that the individual officers and directors named in the 1938 bill had been dropped and that the whole had been rearranged. The chief changes were that charges of preferential treatment for unaffiliated as well as affiliated circuits were included and that the prayer requests a national arbitration system for relief of some of the alleged evils.

Edward C. Raftery, of O'Brien, Driscoll and Raftery, counsel for Universal and United Artists, asserted that the only real addition in the amended complaint was the material requesting arbitration.

Mr. Frohlich then moved to dismiss the original bill. However, the Judge said that argument must be made on whether he should accept the amended complaint. The amended complaint was not drawn in good faith for its chief purpose is to bring the three non-consenting companies under the consent decree, according to Mr. Frohlich. Commenting on the decree he said, "it is a remarkable document because nowhere does it comment on restraint of trade." All it does is set a "formula of future conduct." If all trade practices are involved that is a matter for the Federal Trade Commission and not for an anti-trust action, Mr. Frohlich said.

To show that the "Little 3" do not and cannot dominate the industry Mr. Frohlich cited the folllowing figures for 1939: $520,000.000 total assets of all the companies, $390,000,000 gross; Columbia—$15,000,000 assets, $19,000,000 gross; Universal $12,000,000 assets and $20,-000,000 gross and United Artists gross for that year, $10,000,000. It was pointed out that the three companies assets or grosses combined do not total those of any one of the five consenting companies. The "Big 5" have 80 percent of the business; the "Little 3" 15 percent and the independents 5 percent. On these figures there could be "no substantial restraint or domination," it was said.

Mr. Frohlich concluded his remarks on this point by repeating his statement, "It is a sham and a fraud. The amended complaint was made to bring the three companies into the consent decree against their wishes and best interests. Columbia can't consent to the decree. It can't make pictures in fives and sell them other than once a season."

Mr. Raftery based his objections to the amended complaint on the charge that an amended complaint cannot be filed without reasons. He quoted Mr. Arnold as saying before the case was started, "Why aren't you on our side of the case? Why don't you help us disintegrate the Big 5?" He asserted that on the words of Government representatives and the papers in the suit there was no cause of action.

In refutation Mr. Wright argued that there was a cause of action in that a conspiracy was alleged. The court agreed that a cause of action was stated and that there were reasons for filing an amended complaint.

During the course of the discussion Judge Goddard pointed out that when he signed a decree set up an arbitration system he was not imposing such arbitration but that he had the authority to sign because the parties had agreed to accept arbitration.

Mr. Raftery said that the "escape" clause in the decree imposed on the Government the obligation of "going out and catching the 'Little 3'". He further asserted that the Government was seeking a consent decree to prevent those three companies from acquiring theatres in the future if they should decide such was desirable or necessary.

There was also considerable discussion on whether or not the old bills of particulars, interrogatories and answers filed in connection with the old complaint could be used again. No final decision was made. It was pointed out by the court that an effort should be made by all parties to get together and expedite the proceedings as much as possible.

At the end of the hearing the defendants were given until February 5th, 60 days to file answers to the complaint or move for dismissal of the suit.

Other counsel present included Herman Finkelstein and Irving Morros, Columbia; Benjamin Pepper and Adolph Schimel, United Artists and Universal; C. W. Bickford, Paramount and O. C. Doering, Jr., RKO.

NEW YORK OWNERS HAIL HOLIDAYS

New York theatre owners this year are anticipating, more than ever, the Christmas holidays and the week preceding. Reason is the announcement by the city's Board of Education that the school holiday vacation season will begin after classes end next Friday, December 20th, instead of December 24th, customary date. Usually the pre-Christmas week is feared; the ruling makes it anticipated.

Lack of Legal Standing Balks Decree Test

Until exhibitors can establish legal standing necessary to bring such actions, there appears to be little likelihood of concerted litigation by organized groups against the consent decree, according to legal observers, this week.

Neither Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America or the Allied States plans to bring test actions to invalidate the decree and this policy is expected to govern the atttitude of the affiliated units of both organizations. Moreover, no litigation is under consideration by such regional units as the Independent Theatre Owners of New York or New York Allied.

Exhibitor litigation against the decree is not expected to be launched, in the opinion of film attorneys, until after arbitration decisions have been given, which may deprive an exhibitor of clearance, run or product. This development might conceivably give an aggrieved exhibitor the legal standing necessary to bring suit to test the legality of the decree, legal observers said.

Another Trust Suit Filed by Independent

Irving Gilman, Minneapolis exhibitor, has filed an anti-trust suit for $120,000 damages against eight major distributors in the U. S. District Court in that city. The complaint alleges that Mr. Gilman was forced to close his 300-seat Esquire after being unable to obtain sufficient major company product.

Following more than a year of legal maneuvers, suit of Midwest Theatres against Co-operative Theatres went to trial, last Wednesday, December 5th, before Federal Judge Frank A. Picard in Detroit. In their opening statement, counsel for the plaintiff, alleged that Co-operative used its buying power to prevent Midwest Theatres from obtaining product, claiming a violation of the anti-trust laws.

Defense attorneys took the position that the Federal Court does not have jurisdiction as interstate commerce is not involved and hence there could be no violation of anti-trust statutes.

Raymond E. Schreiber, chief of the Midwest circuit, testified that he had been informed, when he went to purchase film from the major companies, that all had sold 100 percent of their product to Co-operative Circuit.

Dismiss Oklahoma City "Big Five" Complaints

Federal District Judge Edgar S. Vaught, at Oklahoma City, has granted the remaining defendants in the Government's anti-trust suit against the Griffith Amusement company, and the major distributors and producers, et al, until January 2nd to file objections or to answer the Government's interrogations in the litigation.

Judge Vaught, on November 27th, dismissed complaints against the following defendants; Twentieth Century-Fox of Texas; Twentieth Century-Fox Flm Corp.; Loew's, Inc.; MGM Distributing Corp. of Texas; RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.; Vitagraph, Inc., and Paramount Pictures, Inc., co-defendants with Griffith Amusement Company, in the suit.

Remaining defendant companies and individuals include: Columbia Pictures Corp.; Universal Film Exchanges, Inc.; United Artists Corp.; R. E. Griffith Theatres, Inc., Westex Theatres, Inc., Consolidated Theatres, Inc., the Griffith Amusement Company and the three Griffith brothers, L. C., R. E., and H. J. Griffith.

TAXES NO. 1 ON AGENDA OF 41 STATE LEGISLATURES MEETING IN JANUARY

Interest Shifts from Congress and Justice Department to Threatened Taxation and Regulative Bills in States

Legislative observers of the industry in New York, and of localized film interests in the field, view with keener interest than usual the potentialities in the approaching biannual meetings of state legislatures—times and taxes being what they are in the national emergencies of defense here and arming the Allies abroad.

Forty-one State legislatures begin regular sessions between January 1st and January 10th; two others open regular sessions later and the other five probably will call special sessions.

The prime concern of Congress, of course, is national defense, and efforts will be made to increase revenue through additional taxation. But the problems facing the states are somewhat different. Defense matters, with the exception of a few specialized matters are left to Congress and all tax attention will be turned to state deficits. Only Connecticut, Nebraska and Indiana have budgets which are balanced or nearly so and whose financial position is such that new means of raising money need not be sought.

With almost all the States looking for ways and means to balance budgets without cutting expenses, additional taxation will be resorted to in many cases. The last sessions of some of the legislatures were reluctant to pass tax bills because the election was approaching.

Legislative Meetings Set

In the following States regular legislative sessions will open this year, between January 1st and 10th:

Georgia is scheduled to meet in July, 1941; the session is limited to 70 days. Florida is to meet in April. Alabama, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Virginia are expected to hold special sessions in the Spring. Some States have held as many as three special sessions in one year.

Although the forty-odd State legislatures do not convene until January tax possibilities are already being explored by special legislative committees. Local admission taxes in addition to the increased Federal tax are expected to be debated in a number of States.

In recent years the principal form of raising additional revenue has been some form of sales tax. Up to now such taxes have been on retail transactions usually and the leasing of motion pictures has not been included.

The motion picture industry is reported to be facing in 1941 one of its most serious years, so far as taxes are concerned. One spokesman remarked, "The industry will have to forget all about consent decrees this year and stand together to fight tax measures which would cripple the business."

In addition to the threat of inclusion in general tax bills the industry faces the possibility of special taxes such as increased censorship fees, footage fees, license charges and other assessments in some states. Bills to create state censor boards are regularly introduced in certain states.

Another possibility this year is the introduction of regulatory measures in some places. It has been reported that bills modeled after the Neely anti-block booking bill might be introduced locally. Also it has been said that bills relating to the consent decree might be presented in some States. The consent decree provides that the Court may relieve the five signing theatre-owning majors from any requirement of the decree which might be in conflict with some State law or rule made pursuant to a State law.

P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, has asked exhibitors to contact personally their senators and representatives prior to the first of the year in an effort to combat the possibility of an increase in the admission tax. Cleveland city officials have recommended state legislation to permit municipalities to increase local taxes to meet relief funds, suggesting admission tax among others. The Ohio Farm Bureau Federation also has passed a resolution favoring an increase in the admission impost. The General Assembly convenes January 1st.

Current indications are that the most important legislation to face exhibitors in the 1941 session is the attempt to be made by the Wisconsin State Medical Society to repeal the statute which prohibits the use of any other but central standard time in the state.

42% of all U.S. Luxury Taxes from Theatre Admissions; Increase Seen

Approximately 42 per cent of all Federal collections from the so-called luxury taxes in 1938 came from the theatre admission levy, it was disclosed, Tuesday, in a report on taxation, recovery and defense just prepared for the Administration's Temporary National Economic Committee by its executive secretary, Dr. H. Dewey Anderson, in Washington.

One of a number of "regressive" taxes—imposts which fall more heavily upon small incomes than upon large ones—the admission levy in 1938, with a 40-cent exemption, accounted for 41.8 per cent of the revenue from all luxury taxes. No estimate is made of the still higher percentage it will reach under the revenue act of July 1, 1940, which dropped the exemption to 20 cents.

"Collection of the tax has been made easy by simply adding it to the price of admission tickets," Dr. Anderson commented. "However, it is a very high sales tax, and one which bears heavily on the amusement costs of the people."

The report shows that the amusement tax is but one of a number of levies—Federal, state and local—which will make the 1940 tax bill of the Nation approximately $15,000,000,000.

Declaring that the tax situation has reached a point where the whole structure should be overhauled, Dr. Anderson recommends the development of a flexible tax system so designed as to be readily and easily modified to meet changing economic conditions, suggesting the possibility of the adoption of a general sales tax and the lowering of exemptions and the raising of rates on individual income.

While "regressive" taxes are criticised as inequitable, the TNEC official apparently feels that they are too important as revenue-producers to be discarded off-hand.

Washington observers, six weeks ago, concluded that additional taxation might be expected on motion picture tickets, along with all other taxed amusements, to take the form of an increase in the present emergency rates, created last July 1st, rather than a reduction of the present taxable minimum of 21 cents. It is expected that exhibitors would again pass along any additional tax to the public.

The national defense tax bill to motion picture theatres is already running at about an additional $36,000,000 a year, under the July 1st enactment of taxes on all tickets above 20 cents; previously, the exemption ran up to and included 40-cent admissions. In Washington, it was estimated that the reduction, four months ago of the Federal admission tax exemption in July from 40 to 20 cents, was bringing in nearly $3,000,000 a month more than was collected formerly.

State Legislature Sessions Threaten New Tax Problems

a series of interviews with labor leaders, farmers and other interested groups, takes the stand for the change in the recent front page editorial which concludes as follows:

"Wisconsin undoubtedly ought to use daylight saving time in the summer months because it brings the working day to a close while there still are hours of daylight to enjoy."

The Wisconsin Council of Agriculture, on the other hand, at its annual conference in Madison November 20, went on record opposing the adoption of daylight savings time in the state.

Fears of new tax levies have been somewhat mitigated by a statement of Governer Julius P. Heil, who has informed the public that he will seek to re-enact the same taxes as are now in effect without requesting any new taxes. Governor Heil has declared that he will attempt to balance the state budget during his coming term and that he believes he will be able to accomplish this without any additional taxation.

Lottery Proposal in New York

While the New York state legislature will not formally convene until January 8th, a state-operated lottery amendment has been drawn up for presentation by State Senator Phelps Phelps, New York City Democrat. Senator Phelps, in Albany this week to complete the draft, said he also was submitting a resolution to memorialize Congress to authorize a national lottery.

The Phelps amendment to the state constitution would simply legalize state-operated lotteries. If passed by the legislature two successive years, it would be submitted to the electorate for a vote in November, 1942. This was the procedure used in legalizing pari-mutuel betting in New York through the Dunnigan-Penny bill.

A brighter chance of passage is seen by Senator Phelps in view of the fact that pari-mutuel betting brought the state more than $5,500,000 revenue in its first racing season operation.

Senator Phelps, who sponsored the Wet-Dry referendum in New York 15 years ago, maintains government-operated lotteries will eventually be realized to obviate the necessity of imposing other new taxes under the National Defense program. However, his present amendment does not earmark the money to relief, as in the past.

Blue Law Study in Delaware

Although progress toward a solution of the Sunday blue laws problem in Delaware was reported to have been made, the special blue laws commission appointed by the last session of the State Legislature, to study possible modification of the ancient statutes, refused to divulge any of its plans following a two-hour meeting in Legislative Hall in Dover last week.

The commission, appointed to make a study of possible changes with recommendation to the next session of the General Assembly next month, discussed procedure suggested by Attorney-General James R. Morford of Wilmington and statutes of other states.

The Rev. Ralph L. Minker of Wilmington, chairman of the commission and superintendent of the Ferris Industrial School, reported progress but refused to divulge any specific recommendations that might be made to the Legislature.

It was said the commission was in accord on certain general outlines of what it believes would be a good solution. Chairman Minker said that some announcement may be made in the next few weeks, but the commission's full recommendations will not be disclosed until made to the General Assembly.

George Brown Succeeds Cliff Lewis on Coast

George Brown has been appointed director of studio publicity to succeed Cliff Lewis, Paramount announced in Hollywood on Tuesday. Only last week, Mr. Brown announced he had been appointed to the executive staff of the Screen Directors Guild as an advisor on public relations.

Mr. Brown, until recently a member of Warners' studio publicity staff on the Coast, is a former director of studio publicity for Columbia. He was a newspaper reporter for several years after leaving college; later handled publicity for a former New York night club, Reisenweber's.

At 27, he was advertising manager for Universal, remaining in that post for eight years. Free lancing for a time, he was press agent for Helen Morgan, Harry Richman and Texas Guinan. After handling RKO publicity, he became director of advertising and publicity for Columbia in 1932. In 1937, he was appointed director of studio publicity for Columbia on the Coast and later joined Frank Capra's unit at Warners.

Mr. Lewis had worked for the studio for 18 years. Confined to his home with a cold, he said he had no plans, at this time. Blake McVeigh, formerly assistant publicity director at the Warner studio, will be Mr. Brown's assistant in charge of press relations.

Moss Plans New Amusement Center

An amusement and business center covering an area of 26,000 square feet, will be erected at Continental Avenue and Austin Street, Forest Hills, N. Y., by the newly formed Forest Hills Realty Corp., of which B. S. Moss is president. The projected structure will cover an area one and a half blocks long by one block wide and will house a motion picture theatre, a cafe, a bowling alley and stores.

The theatre will be built in accordance with latest inventions in the acoustical field and will be completely sound-proofed. An underground garage will have accommodations for hundreds of automobiles. All of the stores will be served from a central air-conditioning plant. The proposed amusement center will be located in the heart of the Forest Hills business section, a short distance from the World's Fair grounds. The property was purchased from the Long Island Railroad.

Warner's Quarter Revenue Estimated At 50% over 1939

Deferrment of dividends on the preferred stock of Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., was questioned and retrenchment in salaries and fees paid to directors and officials of the company was suggested by a New York stockholder at the annual meeting at Wilmington, Del., Monday. Revenue for the quarter just ended will be 50 per cent higher than last year, stockholders were told. Four directors were reelected and one new member added to the board.

Meeting in the offices of The Corporation Trust Company at Wilmington, stockholders reelected Samuel Carlisle, Stanleigh P. Friedman, Charles S. Guggenheimer, and Morris Wolf. The new director is Joseph H. Hazen.

Milton R. Weinberger, New York stockholder, queried the board as to the deferment of dividends on preferred stock and was told by Robert W. Perkins, secretary and general counsel of the company, that dividends had been deferred due to uncertainty in the status of the company's foreign market.

When Mr. Weinberger suggested a retrenchment in salaries and fees to directors and officers, pointing out that the $1,100,000 paid them during the last year represented a large portion of the company revenue, Harold S. Bareford, assistant secretary, declared that the company had always been the first to retrench when depleted revenue prompted a cut in expenditures.

Edwin D. Steel, Wilmington attorney, who presided in the absence of former Judge Hugh M. Morris, informed the stockholders the revenue of the company for the quarter ending Nov. 30, 1940, was 50 per cent higher than in the corresponding period of last year.

Officers of the company attending the meeting were: Mr. Bareford, Mr. Perkins, T. J. Martin, auditor; Edward K. Hessberg, assistant secretary, and W. Stewart McDonald, assistant treasurer.

MOTION PICTURES AMONG THOSE IN THE MIDDLE IN BMI-ASCAP BATTLE

Industry Directly Affected by Music War; Elimination of Radio Exploitation of Musicals to Follow Ban on January 1

The fight between the radio industry behind Broadcast Music, Inc., and the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers this week moved in directions which indicated that motion pictures, along with others, would be caught in the middle, subject to firing from both sides, when the "war" breaks out in the open on January 1st.

When the complete ban against ASCAP goes into effect on January 1st, the motion picture companies will lose one of the chief exploitation mediums for musical films. Some of the major companies also may lose revenue through reduced payments by ASCAP to publishing firms affiliated with the film companies. Exhibitors throughout the country will also lose free advertising through the radio plugging of songs from pictures which will play their theatres. Furthermore it was reported likely that if ASCAP suffered a substantial loss in gross receipts due to smaller payments from radio, it might turn attention to theatres and raise their annual license fees.

The three networks—NBC, CBS and Mutual, and some independent stations, have announced that they will not renew their ASCAP licenses when they expire on December 31st, that after that date their stations will not broadcast any music licensed by ASCAP. Columbia Broadcasting and Mutual have already banned ASCAP music from sustaining programs. Within a week National Broadcasting plans to take similar action. By the end of the year the three chains report that ASCAP music will not be permitted even on sponsored programs. The NBC ban will go into effect December 23rd, according to Niles T. Trammell, president.

On Tuesday it was reported from Washington that the six year old suit of the Government against ASCAP might be dropped. Department of Justice officials hinted that a settlement was being considered but refused to state to what extent negotiations had progressed or principles of the proposed settlement. It was suggested, however, that such a conclusion of the case would dispose of much of the controversy between ASCAP and the broadcasters because, it was said, the Government suit involves issues similar to those raised by the radio industry when it rejected ASCAP's new contract, but officials of the Society in New York denied that a settlement was being negotiated.

Increases Proposed by ASCAP

ASCAP which controls the performing rights to about 90 percent of the popular music in this country as well as many foreign numbers offered the radio industry a new contract to replace the one expiring December 31st. Under the old agreement the broadcasters paid the Society between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 in 1939. It was estimated that the fees under the proposed new contract would total eight or nine million. The networks were asked to pay seven and one-half percent of their gross for music performing rights. The present contract provided for a uniform fee of five percent from all stations.

This week Edward B. Marks, president of the Edward B. Marks Music Corporation which has the performing rights to 15,000 songs announced he was leaving ASCAP to join BMI. The Society replied by issuing a statement saying that 135 publishers controlling 200,000 songs had already signed with the organization for 10 more years.

BMI Seeking Catalogues

It was also reported this week that BMI had resumed negotiations to buy music catalogues of publishing firms affiliated with major film companies. J. T. Abeles, counsel who handled the Marks transaction, also represents music interests of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox and Universal. Earlier in the year BMI had attempted to buy the Robbins, Feist and Miller catalogues from MGM for a reported price of over $4,000,000. However the deal was never signed and it was reported that the Metro music group had decided to stay in the Society.

To compensate for the loss of exploitation by radio of songs by ASCAP members used in film musicals several of the companies were considering using BMI music for at least the title song of musicals. BMI announced this week that Columbia and RKO had agreed to release some music scores through the radio music company. Columbia, it was said, will make some shorts featuring BMI music.

The principal question facing the film companies with respect to the BMI-ASCAP fight was whether or not ASCAP controlled musical numbers could be included in radio versions of the picture in which the numbers are used. On this point authorities differed and long and involved litigation was indicated.

Last week CBS sent out a memorandum to all its stations on the copyright question involving music licenses. In part the CBS statement said "ASCAP controls only the non-dramatic or so-called 'small' performing rights for the works of its members. Accordingly, if proper contractual arrangements have been made with the actual copyright owners, a 'grand rights' performance may be broadcast."

Included in the list of such types of works "grand right broadcasts" was "bonafide musical picture in its entirety, or a substantial portion thereof."

John G. Paine, general manager of ASCAP, was quoted as saying that ASCAP controlled all performance rights in connection with music except on the stage and certainly broadcasting of any ASCAP music anytime, anywhere would constitute an invasion of ASCAP's rights.

Prior Lien for ASCAP

Most of the music reproduced in motion pictures is written expressly by persons who are commissioned to do the work or employed exclusively by the motion picture producer. Edwin P. Kilroe, Twentieth Century-Fox copyright authority, pointed out that section 62 of the copyright law states, "The word 'author' shall include an employer in the case of works made for hire." However he emphasized that the courts have held that a person can assign works that have not even been written or composed so the grant of performing rights by ASCAP members to the Society stands even though subsequently the person is hired exclusively by one company. There is a prior lien of ASCAP present when an ASCAP member is employed, he pointed out.

The dramatic use of music comes under the "grand rights." However probably 90 percent of the music used in motion pictures is not essentially dramatic and is only incidental or interpolated, according to Mr. Kilroe. The rights to this type of music are somewhere in the middle between the "grand rights" and the "small rights." However he added through acquiesance ASCAP has been allowed to control the performance of music in this "middle ground."

Back in 1848, in the first case of its kind, the courts held that the performance of a song is dramatic, even if performed without scenery or costumes or the like, if the musical number is of itself dramatic.

In 1939 ASCAP won a case in Louisiana against a motion picture theatre operator who did not have an ASCAP license. The defense contended that all music in films is dramatic and hence did not come under the ASCAP "small" performance rights.

Rights of ASCAP to control old music by members who do not have the copyright and have renewed their membership might be questioned, it was reported. In this way it is possible that music written years ago by members of the Society might have passed out of the control of ASCAP, it was said.

Copyright Damage to $5,000

Radio stations and everyone else involved in the ASCAP-BMI fight in any way will be very anxious to avoid infringements because the Copyright law specifies a minimum damage of $250 and a maximum of $5,000 for each unauthorized performance and performance does not mean playing the whole piece but any recognizable portion of it. It was reported that some violations on the part of the broadcasters may occur but that they are willing to risk extensive and expensive litigation to force a settlement of the music question rather than pay ASCAP $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 in the next ten years.

Exhibitors would probably protest vigorously and effectively if the companies authorized the broadcast of an entire musical film, or even a substantial part of it, it was pointed out. The present indications are that the film companies,

CANADIAN MUSIC FEES REVIEWED

The Copyright Appeal Board of the Dominion Government, sitting in Toronto, last week heard objections of music users to the proposed license fees of the Canadian Performing Rights Society, the Canadian equivalent of ASCAP. The new rates for theatres were reported to be the same as in 1941, but it was said the fees have been increased for independent broadcasting stations and for hotels. The hearing was adjourned to February 17th.

H. J. Jamieson, president of the Canadian Performing Rights Society, has announced that shares of the fees for performances of musical works in the Dominion to residents of countries with which Canada is at war were being paid at intervals to the Custodian of Enemy Property of the Dominion Government for disposal according to Government decisions.

MUSIC WAR HITS FILMS

anxious to avoid as far as possible becoming involved in the BMI-ASCAP dispute, will not be able to broadcast music by ASCAP members, except in rather rare cases, without ensuing litigation.

Radio exploitation of musical film numbers while the battle is going on may take two forms, it was indicated. The first special broadcasts over stations which have ASCAP licenses or circulations of disks to those stations, if the film has ASCAP music. The second means will be to use some BMI music in the films in exchange for extra free plugging by the broadcasters who are anxious to build up a supply of popular music. BMI has already announced that it will not request any license fees for use of its music except in broadcasting, for the present. Ultimately it is possible that users of BMI music, including motion picture theatres, might be required to obtain performing licenses from BMI. The copyright law is clear in giving the author of a piece of music or any other composition right to license performances. The right is still present, even if not exercised at present by BMI authors.

Irving Caesar, president of the Long Writers Protective Association has announced special plans for publicizing ASCAP music after January 1st. Piano and song writing teams will be put on the streets of key cities, he said.

Marks Catalogue Acquired by BMI

On Monday announcement was made that BMI had acquired the rights to the music catalogues of Edward B. Marks Music Corporation. Over 6,000 of the 15,000 songs involved have been released to BMI for immediate use it was reported. The complete transfer will be made on January 1st. J. T. Abeles, Mr. Marks' attorney, said the contracts were for five years and that BMI would pay $250,000 per year, or a total of $1,250,000. The Marks publishing firm is the first leading company affiliated with ASCAP to break away. The Marks company also agreed to furnish a minimum of 60 new tunes each month.

Gene Buck, president of ASCAP, said he was not disturbed "a bit" by the transfer of the Marks catalogues for it had been expected for several months. He remarked that all BMI had done was to build up a "very wonderful foreign catalogue."

A BMI spokesman on the other hand predicted, "With the signing the Marks' contract you'll see a lot of others scramble aboard the bandwagon."

John G. Paine, general manager of the Society, said the transfer of the Marks' catalogues would affect only the publishing company for the composers and authors were remaining with ASCAP. He compared the situation to "one where the captain of a ship had struck his colors with the crew refusing to surrender."

"All works in the Marks' catalogue written by any writer-members of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Pubilshers are controlled by the American Society, and no radio station may use them unless it has a license from the Society to do so," Mr. Paine said.

Mr. Abeles, speaking for the Marks company, said that 70 percent of the music had been written by non-ASCAP members and that 20 percent had been written by ASCAP members before they joined the Society.

BMI also announced Monday that it had acquired rights to the catalogue of Southern Music, Inc., a former ASCAP publisher, beginning January 1st. Some 5,000 hillbilly and other tunes are involved in the transaction.

Fred Waring, chairman of the orchestra leaders' committee which tried to mediate the dispute, announced Tuesday that the effort had been futile and attacked the attitude of the broadcasters.

Edwin Claude Mills, chairman of the administrative committee of ASCAP, announced that 135 music publishing companies had renewed their licenses with ASCAP for 10 years giving the Society control of 200,000 songs, plus all those published by the firms during the next decade.

It was reported that the American Composers Alliance, including 250 composers of serious music, headed by Aaron Copland who refused last week election to membership in ASCAP was considering an affiliation with BMI. On Tuesday Mr. Copland attacked ASCAP for neglecting "serious" musicians.

Supreme Court To Review ASCAP Case

ASCAP's fight for life came to the fore in Washington this week when the supreme court agreed to review an alleged error by the Federal District Court at Lincoln, Neb., in 1937 in over-ruling a motion by the State to dismiss a suit brought by the music society to restrain enforcement of the Nebraska "anti-ASCAP" act.

The case was one of three pending before the court, appeals having been filed last week by the Florida state authorities and ASCAP from decisions on the ASCAP law of that state. The court is expected to announce whether it will review that law when it hands down decisions December 16th.

In another quarter, the Federal Communications Commission refused to attempt to mediate the fight between ASCAP and the broadcasters, advising E. F. Hummert, New York advertising agency executive that the controversy had not been presented to it by any of the interested parties "and consequently no position has been taken." The commission suggested that Mr. Hummert carry his suggestion for arbitration to the parties involved.

In the case on which the supreme court acted December 9th, ASCAP and its members brought suit to enjoin the enforcement of the Nebraska law which makes it unlawful for authors, composers, proprietors, publishers or owners of copyrighted musical compositions, when they constitute a substantial number who own or control such compositions, to form any organization, either in Nebraska or elsewhere, if one of the objects of the organization is the determination of license fees required for the use of copyrighted musical compositions for profit in Nebraska, for the purpose of preventing free competition between different copyright owners.

The District Court, rejecting a motion by the State to dismiss the case, rendered an opinion in November, 1937, holding that because a section of the act (relating to the failure of the author, composer or publisher to affix on the musical composition the selling price) was a violation of the Federal Copyright Act, therefore the whole act must fail because that provision was inseparable from the balance of the law.

The appeal to Washington was based solely on the failure of the court to uphold the law by dismissing the case, and none of the issues therein are specifically involved. In the event the Supreme Court rules that the case should have been dismissed, of course, the matter will again become alive.

On Wednesday ASCAP put on a special two hour program as a testimonial to Major Laurence Leonard, owner of radio station WFMD, Frederick, Md., in celebration of signing of a new five-year contract and an increase of operating hours granted by the Federal Communications Commission.

SPECIAL CLEARANCE SYSTEM FOR CHICAGO UNDER CONSENT DECREE

B. & K. Decree To Be Altered to Conform with New York Settlement; Kirsch Predicts Changes Under Arbitration

Complete revision of the long-troublesome clearance operations in Chicago is expected as a result of the consent decree signed in New York on November 20th by Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard, according to Jack Kirsch, president of Allied Theatres of Illinois.

The way was prepared Tuesday for taking up the question of clearance of Chicago when the Balaban and Katz decree violation suit was dismissed and an order was given to prepare a new decree. Story on page 11.

Definition of "Independent" Revised

Section X of the New York consent decree defines an indepenedent exhibitor as "one wholly independent of any circuit of more than five theatres and not affiliated either by stock ownership, common ownership, common buying or otherwise with a circuit of more than five theatres and whose film licenses are not negotiated by a buying combine or common buying agent negotiating for more than five theatres." However for the Chicago territory certain modifications of this definition have been made in the revised 1932 consent decree signed by Balaban and Katz Corporation, B. and K. Management Corporation, Barney Balaban and the major film companies, with the exception of Columbia.

In the Chicago Loop area the independent "rule of five" theatres will be suspended and in the rest of the city it will apply for first and second neighborhood runs only. In other areas serviced by the Chicago exchanges the rule will apply to all but first run houses in the respective districts.

Under the decree an independent operator will have the right to come before the arbitration board and demand to be heard on a complaint of unfair clearance. Thus it is highly probable that the entire clearance situation in Chicago may be questioned in the first case before the arbitration board. Hearings will be open to the public.

Circuits Have Film Choice

The first arbitration hearings will probably automatically bring the entire clearance situation into the open, a move which has been opposed up to now by a majority of the film companies and exhibitors.

"Chicago has a situation that is probably unparalleled in any other city", Mr. Kirsch said. "Balaban and Katz, with 48 or more theatres in and around Chicago, are the recipients of preferred playing dates.

"In some sections of Chicago the independent exhibitor has a house that is the equal of the Balaban and Katz theatre, and in some instances the independent's house is even better. But because of the clearance situation in Chicago he is unable to get product for his house but must wait until such time as the B. and K. house has played the picture," Mr. Kirsch said while discussing the matter.

He continued, "Under the terms of the Chicago consent decree, which has been modified to conform substantially with the decree signed by Judge Goddard, there is a good chance that we may see an entirely different situation with respect to clearance when the decree becomes effective."

"If", Mr. Kirsch added, "an independent exhibitor in the outlying district feels that his theatre is being discriminated against because of the B. and K. circuit operating a theatre in close proximity to the independent's house, he can, under the terms of the decree, ask for arbitration in an effort to clear up a situation that has long been, in my opinion, entirely unfair to independents in Chicago."

From the heads of circuits in Chicago no information could be obtained as to future plans, but a majority pointed out that sections of the decree do not go into effect until September 1, 1941. But it was learned that several discussions have been held in which the entire situation was thoroughly reviewed and the terms of the consent decree carefully studied.

Chicago Changes Forecast to demand arbitration in an effort to upset the present clearance arrangements would probably be a member of the Allied theatre group.

Another important factor that may alter the Chicago clearance situation according to Mr. Kirsch is the elimination of block booking and trade showings of product.

Mr. Kirsch said, "If some of the bigger circuits decide after looking at a picture that it is unsuitable for one of their theatres, perhaps the independent in that neighborhood will then be able to get the product before the circuit plays it at their theatre."

That there will be some drastic changes in the present Chicago situation was also forecast by various exchange managers in Chicago.

Just what action will be taken was problematical but plans for an arbitration plea are expected to be prepared within the next few weeks by some of the Allied members, according to information obtained at the association's offices.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE TO APPROVE FILMS

The Milwaukee school board has referred to its instruction committee and to the city's superintendent of schools a common council resolution requiring the superintendent's staff to approve films shown in visual education classes and high school assemblies. The action results from protests after showing a film furnished by the Chicago office of the German Railways Information Service.

Shumow Named Sales Head

Jack Shumow, who recently joined Warner's Chicago exchange, after 15 years with MGM, has been appointed sales manager under Sidney Rose, exchange manager, who was recently transferred from Omaha.

Exhibitor Group Has Radio Debate

A round table discussion from the radio staiton KOMA, Oklahoma City, is to be broadcast, Sunday, with the following participants: Ed Kuykendall, national Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America president; Morris Loewenstein, president of the Theatre Owners of Oklahoma, Inc., and national secretary of the MPTOA, and Neal Barrett, manager of the radio station.

The broadcast is to be held the day before the annual convention of the Oklahoma Theatre Owners, Inc., which will convene in the Hotel Skirvin, in Oklahoma City, on December 16th, The round-table discussion will center around the problems of the industry and will familiarize the public with the consent decree and other matters of interest to the radio audience. Radio station executive invited the exhibitors to participate in the broadcast, it was said.

Hold Joint Meeting

A joint meeting of the Connecticut Motion Picture Theatre Owners and the Allied Theatre Owners of Connecticut, was held, Tuesday, at New Haven, to discuss legislative problems which may arise at the coming session of the legislature. Presiding were Irving C. Jacocks, Jr., vice-president of the MPTO, and A. M. Schuman, president of the Allied unit. The consent decree also was discussed.

On the same day, a meeting of exhibitors, exchangemen and representatives of allied industries was held at the Twentieth Century-Fox projection room to discuss formation of a statewide film bowling league.

The South Dakota Exhibitors Association, at its annual meeting, recently, in Sioux Falls, announced that its members are unworried over the effects of the consent decree. The statement was made following a study of the document and its probable effects upon members. A committee will be appointed to handle complaints or difficulties which may arise under the decree.

The SDEA voted its opposition to a boost in Federal taxes on lower admissions and to legislation restricting or taxing amusements further. Dues were reduced from three cents to two cents a seat. Officers elected were:

Dean Nash, president; John Anderson, vice-president; A. P. Sorensen, secretary-treasurer; Charles Hyde, E. G. Sorensen and Bert Johnson, directors.

RKO was represented by S. M. Fitch; Paramount, by Gil Sessler; Minnesota Amusement Company, by Ralph Phillips. Joseph Powers of National Screen, spoke on advertising.

Virginia MPTO Meet

A special meeting of directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia was held, recently, to discuss the consent decree and to formulate plans for the mid-Winter convention which will be held at the Shoreham Hotel, Washington, February 2nd and 3rd.

Exhibitors who attended included: Ben Pitts, John C. Caldwell, William F. Crockett, Charles Roth, Dan Weinberg, F. Aleshire, J. R. Loth, Allen Sparrow, Morton G. Thalheimer, Sam Bendheim, Jr., Harold Wood and Colonel Robert Barton, counsel.

MAJORS WARN SALES STAFFS TO BE CAUTIOUS ON DEALS UNDER DECREE

Sales and Production Personnel Confer on Operation Under New Order of Distribution; RKO Sets Sales Campaign

The major motion picture companies which signed the consent decree ending the Government's key New York anti-trust suit against them continued this week the special conferences of sales and production forces called to explain the new order of distribution.

Twentieth Century-Fox announced a series of meetings at exchanges in a bulletin in which Sidney R. Kent, president, emphasized that all deals which might lead to arbitration must be avoided in the 1941-42 season.

Last week Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announced changes in its sales department organization and United Artists, Paramount and RKO were also considering the effects of the decree. See page 22 of the HERALD for December 7th.)

"Scrupulous Observance" Ordered

Felix A. Jenkins, general counsel of Twentieth Century-Fox, acting at the suggestion of Mr. Kent, has prepared a letter to the sales force following and re-emphasizing the position first outlined by Mr. Kent. The company's policy will be to "scrupulously" observe all provisions of the decree so that no exhibitor will have cause to demand an arbitration hearing. The plan is to avoid trouble by avoiding all occasions which might lead to disputes.

The company's branches will be visited by Mr. Jenkins, Percy Heiliger and Norman Steinberg, of the legal staff, and the decree will be explained in round table discussions in each key city beginning Friday at the New York exchange, which is headed by Harry Buxbaum. Mr. Jenkins will personally visit 12 exchanges.

In his letter on the decree Mr. Jenkins said: "You cannot force the news, shorts or reissues with your features. This principle is no longer merely a matter of company policy; it is a part of the decree."

Clearance Question Discussed

On the question of clearance he said:

"Selling clearance is a part of selling pictures. An exhibitor's complaint that his clearance is unreasonable is subject to arbitration; if our job of selling is properly done the clearance we sell should never have to be arbitrated.

"At the last sales convention we asked you to prevent or settle disputes at the source and thereby put a stop to a great deal of expensive litigation. Arbitration proceedings will also be expensive and take up valuable time. Mr. Kent asks me to impress upon you that it is extremely important that you so conduct our business that we will not be drawn into arbitration," he concluded.

Mr. Jenkins will visit the following branches: Los Angeles, January 3rd; San Francisco, January 6th; Portland, January 9th; Seattle, January 13th; Salt Lake City, January 16th; Denver, January 20th; Omaha, January 22nd; Kansas City, January 24th; Des Moines, January 27th; Minneapolis, January 29th; Milwaukee, January 31st, and Chicago, February 3rd. Mr. Heiliger will go to Albany, New Haven, Boston, St. Louis, Oklahoma City, Dallas, Memphis, New Orleans, Atlanta, Charlotte, Washington and Philadelphia. Mr. Steinberg is to cover Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Buffalo.

In January Mr. Kent will preside at a studio conference at which production under the decree will be considered.

Balaban Repeats Explanation

Clearing up a misinterpretation caused by the misunderstanding of a phrase, Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, last week, in New York, reiterated a recent declaration that the company would release their blocks of pictures in the order of completion. Mr. Balaban issued the communique in reply to Northwest Allied's protest against reports that Paramount would sell blocks of pictures "only in order."

Fred Strom, executive secretary of Northwest Allied, had written to Mr. Balaban stating that under their interpretation, Paramount's policy would be contrary to the spirit and letter of the consent decree, which provides that licensing or offer for one block of pictures shall not be considered upon the licensing of another feature or group of features.

Mr. Balaban had been quoted, originally, as having announced that his company would not offer for licensing any block of five pictures in a given territory under consent decree provisions until previous groups have been licensed and booked. It was the misunderstanding of this statement which roused Northwest Allied's dander. Mr. Balaban's most recent statement claimed that the exhibitors' fears, therefore, were unwarranted.

The final meeting of Twentieth Century-Fox's Kent Sales Campaign was held on Monday at the New York exchange, with Herman Wobber, general manager of distribution; M. A. Levy, Minneapolis branch manager and drive leader, and William Sussman, Eastern sales manager in attendance. The 18-week drive ended this week and winners will be announced in January.

Others who attended the concluding session were: Harry Buxbaum, New York branch manager; Joseph J. Lee, sales manager at the exchange; Moe Sanders, office manager; William Clark, short subject sales manager; Roger Ferri, editor of the company's house organ, Dynamo; Jack Sichelman, Joseph Bloom, Clarence A. Hill; E. H. Collins, Martin Moskowitz and others. Mr. Levy was to return to Minneapolis late this week.

Mr. Wobber, Mr. Sussman and Mr. Levy attended a similar meeting in Boston last Saturday, December 7th, where the Albany and New Haven forces were represented. Having

RKO Sales Campaign Set

RKO's 1941 billing campaign will extend from January 25th to May 9th, a period of 25 weeks, and will bear the name of Ned E. Depinet, vice-president of the company. Captain of the Depinet Drive will be Leo Devaney, Canadian division manager, who is now at the home office formulating plans. Walter Branson, Midwestern district manager, previous drive captain, is conferring in New York with Mr. Devaney on plans for the campaign.

Mr. Devaney will conduct meetings at various branches to outline plans for the drive, prior to the launching of the campaign. During the drive, some of the company's top productions are slated for release. Among them are: "No, No, Nanette," "Kitty Foyle," "Mr. and Mrs. Smith," "Citizen Kane," "A Girl, a Guy and a Gob," "The Devil and Mrs. Jones," "Tom, Dick and Harry," "They Met in Argentina."

They were invited to the Seminar on Legal Problems by Professors Richard R. Powell and Francis Deák of the law faculty, who participated in the discussions.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Finding each new problem a challenge, F. F. McHenry, manager of the Texas Drive-In Theatre at Houston, points out that it's the unexpected that makes life interesting.

The first difficulty after McHenry took over the drive-in theatre a few months ago was when a fog rolled in and obscured the screen.

He figured his patrons had paid to see a show and they ought to see one, so he cut in with the public address system and announced he would issue fog tickets so those who wanted to could come back and see the show again. He had makeshift tickets then, but now "fog checks" are a part of the regular equipment. These tickets are dated and are good for any show within 30 days after they are issued. Rain interference is included in the bargain.

And speaking about rain, moisture does fall heavy down in the Gulf area. Recently, when a two and one-half-inch rain downpour hit the area, another problem arose.

The operator's booth is partly underground and McHenry was told when he took over the theatre that it was equipped with an automatic pump to keep it dry. But he was so busy he didn't check up on that factor. One night the watchman found tht projection booth so flooded it took hours to bail out.

Ed May, manager of Schine's Paris, Paris, Ky., in a letter to our Round Table Dept., swears that "A couple of 'boys,' about 50 years old, from outside town wandered up to the boxoffice and wanted to know what time the burlesque show went on. The cashier tried to explain that there was no burlesque show. Whereupon the 'boys' wanted to know why we advertised 'Cherokee Strip'."

FASHION NOTES:—

Paramount in New York announces that in its new production of "Moon Over Burma," Dorothy Lamour "positively does not wear a sarong or any variation of it."

"ERROL FLYNN GIVES SHIRT FOR BRITAIN," reads a Warner home office publicity statement, advising the press and the nation that the Warner star has contributed "one of his colorful shirts" to the British at war, for auction, Saturday, at the British War Relief Society, New York.

To the same British war relief, Universal Pictures announces, Marlene Dietrich has given that "come-hither" black chiffon parasol she carries in "Seven Sinners." Also, Dorothy Lamour has donated five sarongs and Vivien Leigh has given some Scarlett O'Hara "Gone with the Wind" items.

Elsewhere in New York, Hollywood clothes auctions were being held for other reasons. The Imperial Art Galleries, Ltd., sold a chinchilla coat insured for $55,000, several ermine coats, a $15,000 pewiski sport coat—also a Chinese temple vase of imperial jade, milk clear, said to be worth as much as the Jonkers diamond, and a piano of inlaid king and tulip woods, with gold-plated legs, which originally cost 1,000,000 francs—all reputedly ordered sold by Edmund Lowe, the property of his late wife, Lilyan Tashman.

Mexico Notes

The Mexico City treasury department is looking to film exhibitors again for more urgently needed money. This is demonstrated by the department's request to the federal congress that the present cinema taxation system be scrapped and the old method revived.

The present film exhibitors' taxation system is both long and elaborate: the civic treasurer checks the box office returns of all cinemas during the last quarter of the year to find an average that will be the basis for taxes during the next year. Exhibitors have repeatedly denied reports that they screen only poor and mediocre pictures during this check-up quarter, in order to show the year's lowest income, to serve as the basis for tax payments during the rest of the year.

Fernando Fernandez, one of Mexico's "ace" radio singers, is recovering in a Mexico City hospital from a queer wound he suffered during his debut as a film actor. Fernando was shot in the stomach by his brother, Emilio, during a screen tussle. The property man made a mistake and provided a real instead of a blank cartridge.

The property man is A. Granjean whom Emilio wounded last year during a studio squabble. He and Emilio convinced the police that the Fernando shooting was just an accident.

Death seems to be the fate of composers who accept the assignment to write music for the new Mexican picture, "Ay, Que Tiempos, Señor Don Simon" ("What Days Those Were, Don Simon"). Manuel Castro Padilla, a successful song writer, died a few days after he got the "What" assignment. The next writer, Silvestre Revueltas, died when he had just started his score.

Raul Lavista, a young writer, is now doing the music. He says the music of this film is to feature a beautiful can-can and be released early next year.

Several Mexico City radio stations are working a "novelty" in the way of reducing operating expenses. They are deducting five per cent from their artists' salaries "to pay for the use of the studios and the microphone."

Hollywood stars will be whiffing oxygen every day at 4 P. M., if Director Clarence Brown has his way.

An aviation enthusiast and a licensed transport pilot, Mr. Brown says the value to fliers of an oxygen cocktail when fighting fatigue or high altitude, is great.

Brown, now directing "Come Live With Me," for MGM, believes that 4 o'clock fatigue often becomes discernible in players' work and that if a tank of oxygen were kept on the set, everybody would be better off after a 'snifter' (of oxygen) at the tag end of the day. Reports have indicated an oversupply of air in Hollywood for years.

Whether the Cincinnati area is developing a class of cynics, pessimists and futilists, deponent sayeth not, but E. H. Mayer, our correspondent in that sector, reports that motion picture theatre owners thereabouts are receiving the following message, in the mails, anonymously:

"Youth is not a time of life—it is a state of mind. It is not a matter of ripe cheeks, red lips and supple knees; it is a temper of the will, a quality of the imagination, a vigor of the emotions; it is a freshness of the deep springs of life.

"Youth means a temperamental predominance of courage over timidity, of the appetite for adventure over love of ease.

"Nobody grows old by merely living a number of years; people grow old only by deserting their ideals. Years wrinkle the skin, but to give up enthusiasm wrinkles the soul. Worry, doubt, self-distrust, fear and despair—these are the burdens that bow the head and turn the growing spirit back to dust.

"Whether seventy or sixteen, there is in every being's heart the love of wonder, the sweet amazement at the stars and the starlike things and thoughts, the undaunted challenge of events, the unfailing childlike appetite for what next, and the joy and game of life.

"You are as old as your doubt; as young as your self-confidence, as old as your fear; as young as your hope; as old as your despair.

"In the central place of your heart there is a wireless station; so long as it receives messages of beauty, hope, cheer, courage, grandeur and power from the earth and from men—so long are you young.

"When all the wires are down and all the central place of your heart is covered with the snows of pessimism and the ice of cynicism, then are you growing old indeed."

The following wire was received at the Paramount home office from Bob Coyle, owner of the Coyle theatre, Charleroi, Penn.:

"'North West Mounted Police' broke all house records in twelve years here. Paid admissions at advanced prices were 13,693."

CANADA OWNERS LOOK FOR DECREE BENEFITS

Independent Unit's Publication Urges Trade Practice Reform; Clearance Board in Ontario

American film companies may have to extend to Canada the benfits of the consent decree arrived at in the U. S. Government's New York anti-trust action, if the apparent sentiments of a portion of that country's exhibitors are to be heeded.

Through its organization publication, The Canadian Motion Picture Exhibitor, the Independent Theatres Association of Canada has asked, inferentially, that the decree's provisions be applied by American companies in Canada. Said the article, in part:

"The time limit for reform is strictly limited, after which comes trouble. The whole world is learning that lesson now, the hard way. Will the heads of the Canadian and American film industry miss the chance of applying the lesson to the situation in Canada, when their troubles are so heavily upon them in the U. S.?"

Meanwhile, as opinions on the U. S. decree began crystallizing in Canadian film circles, an Ontario clearance board was to be formed this week, to be a pattern for other provincial clearance boards, and perhaps for a national board; theatre and exchange business, and theatre construction are reported improved in Canada; it is reported from the eastern provinces that only U. S. and Canadian money is being accepted by theatres; and a battle for Sunday shows is raging in Halifax, great eastern port of the country.

Decree Seen as "Reform"

The comment on the consent decree, by the Canadian exhibitors' organ, was at length. It characterized the decree as a "reformed system in motion picture practices, carrying benefits to the small exhibitors," and added that, because this was so, "it is not in the cards that the Canadian exhibitors of that category will be satisfied to sit in the cinders, and play stepchild for very long."

The publication took issue with statements attributed to distributor sources, that the decree would not be followed in Canada. It said that Canada was regarded as part of the American companies' domestic market, and asserted it therefore would not remain a "stepchild."

However, it admitted that the decree was entirely an American legal matter, putting the responsibility for action upon the major distributors.

Noting that the film industry in Canada has been attempting to solve its problems, and establish fair trade practices by clearance and concilition systems, the article added that, nevertheless, clearance boards were only now forming, and might never extend beyond one province, Ontario; that the conciliation committee was favorable to distributors; and that the Canadian contracts were too harsh.

"It is inconceivable that they (American distributors) would be so short-sighted. . . . Grievances and resentments untreated invariably result in upheaval," it concluded.

There will be no national clearance board in Canada for some while, the motion picture branch of the Toronto Board of Trade decided, at a recent meeting. To be organized this week, however, is a clearance board for Ontario, to consist of three representatives of the affiliated circuits, a like number from the unaffiliated theatres, and two representatives of the distributors. Operations of this board will provide a pattern for other provincial boards, and determine the practicability of a national board, it is felt.

The Canadian Motion Picture Distributors, the group which some while ago broke contacts with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, will elect a president soon, it is expected. The unit will probably, it is felt, elect a major company's Canadian manager. In the interval, Colonel John Cooper has been executive secretary.

Better Canadian Business

Increased Canadian theatre and exchange earnings were reported this week, in New York, by Leo Devaney, RKO's manager of Canadian operations. Mr. Devaney conferred with executives at the company's home offices.

The better business has been evident for the past nine months, and particularly in the past 13 weeks, he said. Also, he added, there is more theatre construction. Government spending, and the proximity to theatres of enlisted or conscripted men, were reasons for better grosses, Mr. Devaney reported. Some theatres located near draftee training centers are doing remarkably well, he said.

Between 20,000 and 30,000 men undergo a month's military training, he explained. Business apart from theatres is better, also he declared. Unemployment is at a low in Canada.

Halifax Seeks Sunday Shows

On Thursday, the Halifax City Council was to discuss Sunday film showings. G. S. Kinley, alderman, has asserted he will move to keep the city's theatres open at stated hours, for the war's duration. The Halifax Ministerial Association is opposing the move.

Sunday showings in the great eastern port of Canada are being pleaded as a means to entertain soldiers and sailors. The ban on Sunday showings stems from the country's Lord's Day Act. It is felt there are only certain ways to nullify the Act, and these are: provincial legislation; an agreement between the provincial government and theatre operators, to avoid prosecution, such an agreement now obtaining in Quebec; amendment of the Act, by the Federal Government; and provision for Sunday shows under the War Measures Act.

Money Difficulties

From the country's eastern provinces come reports that most theatres are now refusing British as well as French money. The latter was acceptable until the collapse of France.

Naval and merchant sailors of Britain, of whom there are many in some of the ports of Canada's eastern territories, now find it necessary to exchange their money for Canadian currency at local banks, before going to theatres.

U. S. money is now the only foreign accepted by the houses. For it, a premium of ten per cent, fixed by the Dominion Foreign Exchange Board, is paid at the theatres.

Local exhibitor organizations, to especially handle community patriotic and charitable campaigns, are a prospect in Canada, following the success of the recently formed Theatre Managers Association, of London, Ontario. The units would function under the auspices of the Canadian Motion Picture War Service, of which the general chairman is N. L. Nathanson, of Toronto.

Cooperative Books RKO

The 81 theatres of the Cooperative Circuit of Michigan will play RKO's 1940-41 product, the Walt Disney Festival show, and "The Ramparts We Watch."

New Independent Unit In Canada

Seven Canadian theatre managers of the London, Ontario, have organized the London Theatre Managers Association to create new interests in motion pictures and to be in a position to give the Motion Picture War Service Committee concentrated cooperation in their war activities.

The members of the association are as follows: W. K. Trudell, Capitol and Grand Theatres, chairman; Jack Whitehouse, Centre theatre, secretary; T. H. McKnight, Patricia theatre; P. J. Simmons, Palace theatre; F. B. Jackson, Loew's theatre; David Ziff, Elmwood theatre, and Ernest Parker, Rex theatre.

The Association was organized on September 6, 1940, and has received the full cooperation of the London Free Press, which devoted a three-column announcement of organizing activities with pictures of the members, and now runs a full page of motion picture news and advertisements in the regular news sections of the paper and away from the obituary and classified advertising sections where the film section was once placed.

In connection with the rodeo recently held in Toronto the association raised $611.00 for the Lord Mayors' Fund for the British War Relief. This was accomplished through a concert held at the Loew theatre and through punch boards and private collections.

Paramount Sales Meet Slated for Panama

A sales meeting of Paramount representatives in Mexico, Central America and all of South America, except Argentina and Brazil, will be conducted at Panama on February 5th, by John W. Hicks, vice president and foreign manager.

Arthur Pratchett, the company's Central American manager is expected in New York from Mexico within the next few days for home office conferences. Other Paramount managers from the Latin-American territory will arrive in New York in the next few weeks to view current product and will return with Mrs. Hicks next month.

Chemical Snow Remover Eliminates Shoveling

Calcium chloride crystals especially prepared for keeping sidewalks free of snow are announced by the Solvay Sales Corporation in the accompanying issue of Better Theatres. Said to be inexpensive, these crystals are sprinkled over sidewalks or roofs when snow begins to fall and all snow reaching the treated surface turns to water. There is no residue to be tracked in and the chemical itself is harmless to rubber mats, carpets, etc.

Warner Brothers theatre circuit will build a 700 seat house in the Delaware Avenue section of Albany, according to announcement last week from Moe Silver, Warner state zone manager. It will be finished by Spring, he added. Architects are Blatner and Van Der Bogert, of Albany.

Meanwhile, MGM prepared exploitation angles for the "hemispheric opening" next Tuesday of its "Flight Command" in Washington, Mexico City, Havana, and Toronto, the occasion being Pan-American Aviation Day; Dick Condon, publicity director, and Frank Braden, publicity agent of Walt Disney Productions, left New York for an extensive national tour in behalf of "Fantasia"; MGM's "Gone With The Wind" had its "general release world premiere" in Atlanta Thurday evening on the date on which, last year, in the same city, same house, it had its world premiere; the world opening of MGM's "Philadelphia Story" was set for that city on December 27th; United Artists continued setting openings and terms for its "The Great Dictator" overseas, and the same company's "Cheers for Miss Bishop" was announced as opening in Lincoln, Nebraska, on January 7th.

"Santa Fe" at Santa Fe

Amidst a three-day celebration, entitled "Santa Fe Trail Days" by New Mexico Governor John E. Miles, Warner Brothers' "Santa Fe Trail" was to open Saturday evening in three theatres of that city, the Lensic, Burro Alley, and Paris. The local celebration, at which 65,000 persons were expected, began on Friday, with participation by Warner Brothers' stars from Hollywood, and several thousand period-costumed Indians, who were to give the "Friday the 13th Fandango" at the La Fonda Hotel. The stars and political and newspaper figures were to watch the ceremonial from the hotel balcony and the Governor's Palacio.

The Saturday celebration was to begin with a reception by Governor Miles and governors from other states at the Capitol Building. After that, there was to be a Santa Fe Trail Days Parade, in which were to participate the Hollywood personalities, local residents, and the Indians. The three theatre premiere was to follow the parade, and to be followed in turn by a Santa Fe Trail Days Ball and pageant in Seth Hall.

U. S. on "Flight Command"

A special banquet at Washington's Hotel Carlton, expected to bring together many of America's foremost notables, is to be the prelude to the opening on the evening of next Tuesday, at Loew's Capitol Theatre, that city, of MGM's "Flight Command," which to open simultaneously (making it a "hemispheric opening") in Havana, Mexico City, and Toronto. The day was chosen for the opening because it is Pan-American Aviation Day. The Washington banquet is to begin at 6:50, and to end in time for the noted guests to be taken to the Capitol for the premiere. Similar distinguished persons will gather in the other cities on the same night, preparatory to seeing the film. For the Washington banquet and opening, sponsored by the National Aeronautical Association and MGM, invitations have been extended to a long list of notables headed by the President and including diplomatic, congressional and Cabinet officers.

There are to be brief talks by representatives of the State and Navy departments, by President Gill Robb Wilson, of the association, by the dean of the diplomatic corps in Washington, and by aviation leaders.

The picture was made with the cooperation of the U. S. Navy, and has been passed by that group's board of review, "liaison" officer between the Navy and MGM for the production of the film was Commander Harvey Haislip, U.S.N., retired.

Hostess at the banquet, at the premiere, and at a special broadcast being arranged for the opening night, and to link the four capitals, will be a "Miss Flight Command" to be chosen from among the airlines' hostesses.

Richard Condon, Walt Disney Productions publicity director, and Frank Braden, publicist, are on an extensive national tour of key cities months in advance of the showing, in those cities, of the latest Disney product, the musical feature, "Fantasia."

With a special exploitation campaign, Mr. Condon and Mr. Braden are to visit 30 cities. Contacts will be established with local units of the Music Federation, the Academy of Science, public schools, art groups, newspapers and magazines, radio stations, and the like.

Itinerary of the tour is: Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Indianapolis, Chicago, Des Moines, Minneapolis, Detroit, Toronto, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Salt Lake City, Denver, Dallas, New Orleans, Atlanta, Montreal, Pittsburgh, Columbus, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Buffalo, Kansas City, St. Louis, Omaha, Spokane, Vancouver, Fort Worth, and Memphis.

The tour will take three months. "Fantasia" is now playing at the Broadway Theatre, New York, only.

"GWTW" Returns to Atlanta

Vivien Leigh, Lawrence Olivier, Alfred Hitchcock and other screen, stage, political, newspaper, and social luminaries were to be at the "general release world premiere," Thursday night, at Loew's Theatre, Atlanta, of MGM's "Gone With the Wind." Proceeds of this sec-

PRESS PREVIEWS ONLY IN PROJECTION ROOMS

Trade press, fan magazine, newspaper persons, and others who also review films in Hollywood, will, after Sunday, review them in projection rooms, not in theatres. This is the result of a ruling by the Motion Picture Producers Association, disclosed on Tuesday by Y. Frank Freeman, president. Commercial previews at theatres are not affected by the decision, which was said to be from the producers' desire that reviewers see films under the "best" circumstances.

'Wind' to Have Second Opening

ond "opening," on the date it had its world premiere last year, went to the British War Relief Fund.

In charge of the exploitation incident to this opening was William Ferguson, head of that department for MGM. The festivities and the local celebration were high-lighted by a "Miss Gone With the Wind Anniversary" contest, held by the noted newspaper, the Atlanta Constitution. A camera crew and a motion picture director early this week were interviewing applicants. Master of ceremonies at the affair was Clark Howell, publisher of the newspaper. There also was an on-stage birthday celebration, the birthday being the picture's, during which Mr. Hitchcock was to direct a scene in which Miss Leigh was to cut a birthday cake. The first nighters, many of them prominent in society, were filmed also, as part of the recording of the film's anniversary.

More "Dictator" Deals

Walter Gould, foreign sales head of United Artists, said last week that cash guaranties, in addition to terms of 70 per cent of the gross, have been given his company, in two more foreign deals for "The Great Dictator." The company closed with Bernardo Glucksmann, of Uruguay, for premiere of the film at the Trocadero, Montivideo, and for two subsequent run houses there; and with John Duell, for a three-theatre opening in Batavia, Java. Theatres in the latter city are the Deca, Astoria, and Cinema.

The premiere of the Richard Rowland-United Artists release, "Cheers for Miss Bishop" is to be held on January 7th in Lincoln, Nebraska, home of Bess Streeter Aldrich, the author. Also a factor for choice of the city for the opening is the filming of many scenes at the University of Nebraska.

United Artists' "The Thief of Bagdad" is expected to open in Chicago Christmas week. Approximately 5,000 square feet of the Boston store, of that city, is being used for a display on this film, entitled "Magic City of Bagdad," and for which admission of 10 cents for adults and five for children is charged.

Harris, O'Donnell Guests Of Indianapolis Variety

Guests of honor at the annual installation-of-officers banquet of the Indianapolis Variety Club Friday night were to be John H. Harris of Pittsburgh, national chief barker, and Robert O'Donnell, of Dallas, assistant national chief barker.

They were to speak. Other speakers were to be Henry F. Schricker, governor-elect of the state; Reginald H. Sullivan, mayor of Indianapolis; Samuel Jackson, state attorney-general; and Colonel Roscoe Turner.

New officers are Ken Collins, manager of the Indiana Theatre, and chief barker of the local tent; Arthur Landes, assistant chief barker; Albert Blocher, treasurer; and Fred Greenberg, secretary. Retiring chief barker is Marc J. Wolf.

Toastmaster was to be Carl J. Niesse, former chief barker.

Richards Circuit Meeting

With E. V. Richards, president of the circuit, as honored guest at the closing day banquet, approximately 60 managers of the Paramount-Richards Theatres, Inc., met last week for two days at Gulfport, Mississippi. The managers came from Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, and Florida.

HERE'S ANSWER TO EXHIBITOR PRAYERS

Older children in Public School 76, Indianapolis, have established ten rules to promote "Better Behavior in the Movies". As transmitted by Betty Wrege, seventh grade pupil and chairman of the publicity committee of the school's Movie Club, the rules are:

1. You can build up or break down the good name of your family and your school by your actions in the theatre.
2. Courteous people do not show their approval or disapproval in a loud, boisterous way.
3. There are others in the theatre who have paid to see and hear the show in peace and quiet.
4. You can best show your disapproval of the unruly behavior of other children by refusing to join them.
5. Treat the furniture and equipment in the theatre as you wish to have yours treated by visitors in your home.
6. Self-control is of the greatest importance in case of fire or accident.
7. After you leave the theatre, express your opinion of the pictures as intelligently as you can.
8. Listen courteously to the opinion of others.
9. Speaking or writing to the manager about the picture is better than causing a disturbance in the theatre.
10. Following these rules is one way of being a good American.

The rules were printed and distributed throughout the school, with this preface: "When you go to the theatre, people judge you by your behavior. Their judgment depends on you."

Philadelphia Rules Quiz Games Legal

Cash prizes for theatre games were approved in a decision handed down Tuesday, by Judge Howard A. Davis of the Philadelphia Court of Quarter Sessions, providing they conform to one condition—that they are games in which luck plays no part and where only skill counts. The decision is the first that motion picture theatre owners have won in the Philadelphia Courts, which hitherto have banned virtually every game devised to boost box office revenue.

The ruling was on "Cash Quiz," and "Zingo." After having them tested out in his private chambers, following a hearing, last week, Judge Davis ruled that they contained no element of chance and thus were not barred by anti-lottery legislation, finding they demonstrate, "superior knowledge, skill and close attention."

In "Cash Quiz," questions are flashed on the screen and the movie patron punches out the answer on a card. Cash awards are decided on the basis of the most nearly accurate card, with duplicate cash awards going to players tying.

School Film Group Formed

The New England Educational Film Association, representing a pooling of the resources of three privately endowed colleges, two state universities, the CCC of the First Corps Area and the Massachusetts Department of Education has taken a unique step in promoting the use of motion pictures as teaching aids. The colleges and universities involved in this co-operative, non-profit undertaking are Harvard, Boston University and Dartmouth College and the state universities of Maine and New Hampshire. R. Haven Falconer, director of Dartmouth College Films is serving as chairman of the board of directors for the Association.

Clearing House for Information

The association serves as a clearing house for film information, co-operates in previewing, selecting and evaluating films and makes available a large library of films to schools and other organizations by means of a standardized distribution system and at lower, uniform fees.

A co-ordinated catalogue of all the films available has been printed which groups the extensive material under four main headings: Social Science, History and Travel, the Arts and Science. Members have access to a tremendously enlarged film library on an exchange basis and the reels of all are available to any outside institutions through any one of the co-operating agencies.

The association was launched last Spring at a meeting of the New England section of the National Education Association. At that session, Dartmouth and New Hampshire described their joint program to make educational films available to the State of New Hampshire and the suggestion that a larger co-operative program be undertaken was made. The new plan would embrace New England's leading educational film services and would help schools, colleges and other organizations throughout the entire area.

Each member carries on its own film service while joining the association's plan. Under Mr. Falconer, Dartmouth College Films this year is continuing its two fold program of making educational films available in Hanover and of producing films of Dartmouth life for distribution among alumni, schools and other organizations. Three new releases are planned this year and two are expected to be in sound and color. It recently sponsored the world premiere in Hanover of "Music of the Masters", new 16 mm sound films produced in Hollywood and showing the technique of the leading concert artists. Another distinction this Fall was its ability to provide news reel companies with films of the disputed and now historic "fifth down" squabble in the football game between Dartmouth and Cornell.

Renovate Pa. House

Mark Rubinsky has renovated the firehouse in Newmanstown, Pennsylvania. It is now the Lyric Theatre, the first film house in the town's history. Mr. Rubinsky also operates theatres in St. Clair, New Philadelphia, Williamstown, Dallastown, and McClure.

Resumes Former Policy

The 2,150-seat Shubert theatre in Cincinnati, which last year, played a combination policy of stage shows and pictures, will resume the same policy December 27th. This year, it had been used as a moveover house for pictures.

CHICAGO GROUPS AIM TO ABOLISH CENSORS

City Council Opens Hearings on Repeal of Ordinance Setting Up Police Board

Public hearings on an ordinance to abolish the Chicago police censor board were begun in that city this week by the judiciary committee of the city council. The police censor board has the power to determine what may or may not be viewed by Chicagoans on the screens of motion picture theatres. The first hearing, held in the council chambers of the City Hall, was attended by more than 100 representatives of various civic organizations, some of whom have long and unsuccessfully fought for abolition of the censor board on the ground that it constitutes a violation of civil rights.

Dr. John A. Lapp, president of the Chicago Civil Liberties League, assailed the censor board's operations as a "censorship of democracy. The movies have become educators of the public," he said, "and therefore have become educators of democracy. To interfere with the motion pictures is to interfere with the processes of democracy; it is, in effect, to set up a censorship of democracy."

Dr. Lapp further charged that under the police censor board pictures have been rejected not on moral grounds, but merely because the political or economic ideas expressed were unacceptable to the board.

The new ordinance submitted by Alderman Earl B. Dickerson, seeks to eliminate censorship of movies intended only for adults. In place of the present police censor board it would substitute a board of five persons to be drafted from a list of psycologists and educators, who would pass judgement on what films could be shown to minors.

Miss Jessie Benford, head of the Juvenile Protective Association, defended the present censor board. She declared that if an ordinance were passed which prohibited children from seeing certain movies, it would necessitate placing policemen at the doors of every theatre and demanding the birth record of each person who did not appear to have reached his maturity.

Began in 1907

The present censor board came into being in 1907 when an ordinance was passed prohibiting the showing of motion pictures without a permit from the commissioner of police, which is still the law in this city. Later, a board of movie censors was established by the commissioner of police to act for him.

The members of the censor board are civil service employees and can only be removed by formal trial procedure before the Civil Service Commission. Four of the present board, which consists of four policewomen and one policeman, have served more than twenty years.

The municipal code also provides for appeals to the mayor, whose decision shall be final, if the action of the police commissioner is unsatisfactory. The ordinance provides that the commissioner can refuse to issue a permit, if in his or the board's opinion the picture would tend to create "a harmful impression on the minds of children." However if such a tendency did not exist for an adult audience, the police commissioner could then grant a permit for showing to adults only.

"The James Boys" and "Night Riders," though based on American history were banned by the censor in 1909. An appeal was taken to the Supreme Court, which upheld the power of the city to censor movies under the 1907 ordinance and held that the historical aspect of the picture did not preclude their being immoral.

1917 Case Cited

In 1917 the censor banned "The Spy." The reasons given were that the picture contained scenes of torture being inflicted on the hero and his ultimate shooting by a firing squad.

The Fox Film Corporation asked for an injunction restraining the city from refusing a permit, and the federal court granted it on the grounds that the picture was neither immoral nor obscene nor otherwise objectionable under the city ordinance. The city then took the case to court, refusing to grant a blanket permit, but offering to give an "adults only" permit. The court ruled that the section of the city ordinance providing for such special permit applied to those pictures likely to create a harmful impression on the minds of children only through those objectionable features (obscenity, criminality, etc.) specified in the ordinance.

Mayor Orders Deletions

The court stated that "if the glycerine tears and beads of sweat of motion picture technique were too horrifying for children, it is not for the administrator of the ordinance to say so; that it must first be so declared by the lawmakers." The order enjoining the city from banning the picture was affirmed.

Other films banned on some pretext or other were, "Chickie" in 1926 and "Alibi" a few years later.

Mayor Edward J. Kelly in 1934 ordered the Crime Prevention Division, of which the censor board is a part, to notify film companies that mob scenes must be deleted. Mayor Kelly reasoned that "mob violence is not educational, and it has a decidedly bad effect upon immature minds." Following this order from the Mayor, Lieut. Harry M. Costello, commanding officer of the division, ordered the cutting of riot scenes from a newsreel of Socialist and Heimwehr battles in Vienna.

Citizens Protest Bannings

With the storm of criticism that arose after the Mayor's order had been issued came a slight letdown in rigid enforcement. But the present censor board has reached perhaps its most publicized action with the banning of anti-fascist films. On January 18, 1938, the March of Time production "Inside Nazi Germany" was banned by the censor board. The storm of protest from the daily newspapers and citizens reached such proportions that on January 20th, Police Commissioner Allman personally viewed the film and overruled the decision of the censor board and the newsreel was given general showing.

"Professor Mamlock" was banned in November 1938 but with protests again pouring into the Police Commissioner's and Mayor's office the film ban was lifted and a permit issued for a general showing, with but a few small cuts.

In February 1939, "I Was a Captive in Nazi Germany" was banned but once again the censor's order was overruled and a permit issued.

Other Films Banned

Other films banned included "Concentration Camp," March 14th, 1939, permit refused; on March 21, 1939, permit for showing issued. In June, 1939, the "Oppenheim Family" was banned, but Commissioner Allman issued a permit after a protest by various organizations had been made. "Beast of Berlin" was banned in November, 1939. Even though the picture was being shown in cities throughout the country, and had been passed by the National Board of Review and the Hays organization, the local board turned it down. Just a few weeks ago, after a number of cuts had been made, the permit for the showing was issued. "Pastor Hall" also felt the displeasure of the censor board but the ban was quickly lifted after protests by the Chicago Civil Liberties League, daily newspapers and various civic groups.

"After Mein Kampf" an English anti-Nazi film passed by the United States Customs service, the New York State Censor Board and the Hays organization was banned in Chicago. Ten days later after the picture had been viewed by newspaper reporters and citizens at private showings, Commissioner Allman again overruled the censor's order and issued a permit for the showing of the picture.

On May 20th, 1940, "The Fight for Life" the United States Film Service documentary film dealing with the famous Chicago Maternity Center on Maxwell Street was viewed by the censors and banned. The picture had been showing in New York since March, 1940. As in the case of "The Birth of a Baby" the censor based its action on the 1907 ordinance banning, "pregnancy, labor pains and childbirth as unfit for exhibition in public theatres, for entertainment." In spite of the protests of civic organizations, women's clubs and members of the American Medical Association, the film has not been ticketed with an "approved" label for showing in Chicago. The only concession made was permission to have the film shown before private audiences for educational purposes.

Film Seizure Illegal

Permitting contempt of court proceedings to be brought against five Birmingham city officials, the Alabama Supreme Court has ruled that the Birmingham ordinance which permits police to ban a film deemed indecent, does not also permit seizure of the print or locking the doors of the theatre where it is being shown.

The suit is the outcome of the seizure of a film from the Galax Theatre which was attempting to show "French Girls Club." The theatre obtained a temporary injunction against the police, who went ahead anyhow, seized the film and closed the house temporarily. The theatre thereupon filed contempt proceedings which the city attempted to block by a writ of prohibition.

Ohio censors in Columbus, ordered 23 eliminations from an aggregate of 497 reels reviewed last month, compared with 30 elisions from 510 reels in October. In November, 1939, there were 36 eliminations ordered from 680 reels.

One short subject was completed and two started.

Down to Earth

Paramount, in films recently completed and currently rolling, is leading the way with a return to true rather than cast names when the occasion warrants.

Thus, Jack Benny and Fred Allen appears as themselves in the forthcoming "Love Thy Neighbor." The rash of pictures featuring band leaders, not by any means confined to Paramount, has also helped the trend, with Bob Crosby appearing as himself for RKO, as does Kay Kyser, and Artie Shaw, Orrin Tucker, and Tommy Dorsey doing likewise for the former studio.

Deems Taylor is seen as himself in the Susanna Foster film, "The Hard Boiled Canary," as is Earl Carroll in "A Night at Earl Carroll's." And while Oscar Levant assumed the name of "Starbuck" in the recent "Rhythm on the River," the role, in the words of Paramount's own publicity department, was "pungently reminiscent of Levant, himself."

"THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOLLYWOOD"

Unionists of any city might picket a place of business six months without causing anything to happen beyond wear and tear on shoes. Mayhap unionists in a number of cities might picket as long a place of business in which no strike has occurred or impends, which describes the situation static on the corner of Sunset and Vine where NBC broadcasts are born. And there may be spots on the map where pickets so engaged would bear placards edged with Neon piping fed by pocket battery, but only in Hollywood would traffic flow past the spectacle oblivious.

Boom at Two

Production at two of the more widely separated studio lots, that of Twentieth Century-Fox in Westwood and of Warners in Burbank, is currently straining present facilities, with the former using its old Western Avenue lot in Hollywood extensively.

At Warners, eight pictures are now in production and five more are set to go during the month. Shooting now are "She Stayed Kissed," directed by Lew Seiler, with Dennis Morgan and Jane Wyatt; "Footsteps in the Dark," directed by Lloyd Bacon and starring Errol Flynn with Brenda Marshall; "The Strawberry Blonde," directed by Raoul Walsh and starring James Cagney and Olivia de Havilland, with Rita Hayworth and Jack Carson; "The Great Lie," directed by Edmund Goulding and starring Bette Davis with George Brent and Mary Astor; "The Sea Wolf," directed by Michael Cartiz, with Edward G. Robinson, Ida Lnpino and John Garfield; "Knockout," directed by William Clemens, with Arthur Kennedy, Olympe Bradna and Virginia Field; "Here Comes Happiness," directed by Noel Smith, with Edward Norris and Mildred Coles, and "Stuff of Heroes," with Eddie Albert and Joan Leslie.

Scheduled to go before the cameras during the month are "Bad Men of Missouri," "Winged Victory," "Fiesta in Manhattan," "Sergeant York" and "Jinx Woman." The schedule has 14 of the studio's 18 stars and every one of its 13 directors working or preparing.

Latest addition to the Twentieth-Fox lot are "Tobacco Road," which John Ford is directing, and "Uncensored," which features John Loder, Nancy Kelly and Edmund Gwenn.

Also in work are "Western Union," "The Road to Rio," co-starring Alice Faye, Don Ameche and Carmen Miranda, done in technicolor; "Sleepers West," "Tall, Dark and Handsome," and "Murder Among Friends."

Assignments

Three films in top categories were blocked out this week by as many studios. Scheduled to go before cameras late this month is Ginger Rogers' next RKO starring vehicle, "Tom, Dick and Harry."

Robert Sisk and Garson Kanin have been assigned, respectively, to produce and direct the picture, made from a Paul Jarrico original. Meessrs. Sisk and Kanin were associated together on the latter's first directorial effort, "A Man to Remember." The new story chronicles the romantic adventures of a girl who can't decide whether to accept an ambitious salesman, a rich young business man or an easy going gas station attendant as her husband.

Although actual production is not scheduled to start until next fall on Paramount's still untitled Bing Crosby-Mary Martin film, the studio has announced that it will be produced and directed by Mark Sandrich, and have music and lyrics written by Irving Berlin, who will also collaborate with Mr. Sandwich on production. Currently occupied with the final editing of "Love Thy Neighbor," forthcoming Jack Benny-Fred Allen musical, Mr. Sandrich will begin preliminary work on the other picture within the next two months.

Robert Montgomery, who recently completed "Mr. and Mrs. Smith" with Carole Lombard at RKO, will be co-starred at MGM with Ingrid Bergman, loaned by David Selznick, in "Rage in Heaven," James Hilton novel. The story is the psychological story of a weakling married to a beautiful girl, whose jealousy drives him to attempt the perfect crime. Robert Sinclair will direct and Gottfried Reinhardt produce.

Marx Funfest

From the opening sequence which has Groucho cheated by his other blood relatives, to the close, a race between train and horse in the Sennett tradition, laughter greeted this latest offering of the Marx brothers at its press preview in the college town of Westwood. In the Marx tradition, the film as directed by Edward Buzzell from an Irving Brecher screenplay, had Harpo play the harp and never talk, Chico play the piano and Groucho play blondes and himself.

The story serves as a framework for the individual Marx talents and is in essence a burlesque of the usual western theme, with the starring trio finally successful in restoring property to an old prospector, enabling his granddaughter to marry her young man and end a feud of long standing between the families. Typical of the humor involved in the proceedings was the remark made by Groucho when momentarily taking the handkerchief out of the mouth of an engineer he had tied up, to the effect that "this is the best gag in the picture," the statement being made in strictest confidence out of the corner of the Marx mouth and directed to the audience.

While to a great degree monopolized by the Marxes, individually and collectively, the picture's cast includes John Carroll, as the young man in the case; Diana Lewis as the girl, and Walter Woolf King and Robert Barrat as the villains of the piece. Three songs were written for the film by Bronislau Kaper and Gus Kahn, and Charles Wakefield Cadman's "From the Land of the Sky Blue Water" is also heard. Jack Cummings produced.

Circus Life in 1840

As written and produced by Nunnally Johnson, who wrote and produced John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath," Walter D. Edmonds' Saturday Evening Post story, "Red Wheels Rolling," tells in Technicolor, which dramatizes its trappings, the tale of a bumpkin's adventures with a circus touring New York State in 1840. His experiences range from battling roustabouts on lot and highway to sharing a bedroom in a hostelry with an equestrienne whose impulses confuse him. Parades, drives by night and performances under the big top, impart to the whole the glamour of the tanbark.

Henry Fonda plays the bumpkin in the monotone of his "Grapes of Wrath" portrayal. Dorothy Lamour enacts the equestrienne who fascinates him, costuming and uncostuming the part in the mode of 1840 and the manner of the ages. Linda Darnell is the wife he loves without knowing it, and Guy Kibbee the owner of the circus beset by troubles stemming from within and without. Jane Darwell, John Carradine and Roscoe Ates head support which includes many types.

Directed by Henry King, the picture excels in the realism with which it reproduces the place and period of the narrative and in the conciseness of its dialogue. Sequence of events follows the rhythm of the circus' travels.

Let's Make Music

(RKO Radio)

Chopin to Crosby

Marking the cinematic debut of Bob Crosby, brother of Bing, "Let's Make Music" features the former's band and vocalists, dubbed "The Bobolinks." Seen with Mr. Crosby are Jean Rogers, Elisabeth Risdon, Joseph Buloff, Joyce Compton, Benny Bartlett, Benny Rubin, Grant Withers, 12-year-old Donna Jean Dolfer and 11-year-old Jacqueline Nash, the former a pianist and the latter a singer, both showing promise.

The Nathanael West screen play, based on a magazine story not listed among the credits, concerns a school teacher whose efforts to rouse her pupils' interests fails, their concern being with "swing." By chance, the school song she writes, which they scorn, is considered "corny" enough to do as a novelty for the Crosby band, which starts a train of circumstances eventually ending in the teacher's return to her classroom in a burst of glory.

Play Girl

(RKO Radio)

It's the Man Who Pays

Invitations to the preview of this Cliff Reid production described it with accuracy as "starring Kay Francis in a return to her former glamour role." It is the story, by Jerry Cady, of a woman past thirty who, having prospered in terms of diamonds, furs and checks collected throughout youth from men of wealth she has fascinated, yet given nothing in return save company, finds the pickings thinning and takes in hand a girl of nineteen to carry on the work under her tutelage. How her plans are frustrated by the girl's emotion for a cowboy with eleven million dollars, although she discovers a happiness for herself she hasn't expected, makes up a picture that its audience approved without stint.

Miss Francis' portrayal of the glamourite is one for the books. Margaret Hamilton as the maid and Nigel Bruce as the gentleman of means who pays, as do others, for the privilege of being treated as younger than his years distinguish the support, Mildred Coles and James Ellison supplying the romance that wrecks the lady's schemes.

It's what's called a dress-picture both as to costuming and setting, and direction by Frank Woodruff is to the manner born.

Old Bill and Son

(Legeran-General Film Distributors)

War Comedy

"Old Bill"—Bruce Bairnsfather's cartoon creation of that other war to save democracy—was something more than a caricaturist's jest, he was a national symbol, epitomizing that imperturbable good humour and ready wit which enabled the Britisher to survive and end victoriously four years of trial and tribulation. One immediate asset this newest British wartime comedy possesses is that "Old Bill" and the British good humour are still alive.

There is a father and son idea behind the story with Old Bill joining the pioneers, to meet his wayward son in France. There is a French girl for the son's roving eye, and a girl in khaki from home, officer buddies from the last war and a Patron du Café ditto, all mixed into an exhilirating pattern of comedy. There is a serious note underlying and at times the British case against Hitler is pleaded, but it is honest and unexaggerated. The ending—the capture of some Nazis—and a running commentary on the British soldier's viewpoint is abrupt, but it is pardonable for the entertainment which has gone before.

Ian Dalyrymple has done a sterling job in direction so that the film is at one and the same time a comedy and a document. The technical qualities are excellent, George Perinal's camerawork being particularly notable.

Morland Graham's "Old Bill" is a gem of Cockney characterization but John Mills' "Young Bill" is no less convincing and attractive. Janine Darcey as the Madamoiselle, Mary Clare as Maggie—Mrs. Bill—Rene Ray as the girl friend, and Roland Culver, are others outstanding in an excellent and enthusiastic cast.

For American audiences "Old Bill and Son" has limits on its appeal—its essentially native flavour and humours and accents. As a contemporary comedy document it may appeal to those audiences who are interested in our states of mind.

Trail of the Vigilantes

(Universal)

Western, with Comedy

A rare combination of action and comedy, Universal's "Trail of the Vigilantes" is keyed to attract attention because of its mixture of virility and humor. In a sense, it is a parody of westerns, but it maintains the vim and the vigor that western fans seek, and the originality and the freshness that other film fans want.

For marquee names, it has Franchot Tone, Warren William, Broderick Crawford, Andy Devine, Mischa Auer, Porter Hall. The love interest, in a minor key, is supplied by Peggy Moran, while Samuel S. Hinds, Charles Trowbridge, Paul Fix, Harry Cording and Max Wagner complete the cast.

Harold Shumate's original screenplay is designed to garner the maximum of laughs from the situations and dialogue, and to carry the story.

Allan Dwan, who directed, kept both elements moving at its most rapid pace. The story set before the turn of the century, concerns an investigator sent out West to probe cattle rustling. He becomes a friend of the leader of a group of cowpunchers, and through his own deductions and their help, captures the rustlers' chief.

The dialogue, while at times anachronistic, is what is called "snappy" and the action, brisk. There is no lagging minute in the film's 75 minutes' running time. The cast, most of whom who have appeared in Universal's "Destry Rides Again" or "Seven Sinners" or both, give performances which the audience at the preview enjoyed.

Sample of the "joshing" of western action films is the following: "Kansas" asks the rancher whose daughter inadvertently is in the buggy of the fleeing criminal: "Does Dawson have a mortgage on your ranch?" Receiving a negative reply, "Kansas" says: "Well, that's the only thing he missed."

Behind the News

(Republic)

Newspaper Story

"Behind the News" is the story, marked with familiarity, of a cub reporter, a star reporter and a girl, the former devoted to his newly found work, the second blase in his daily routine and the latter, a woman with ideas of matrimony with the second. Frank Albertson, Lloyd Nolan and Doris Davenport play the respective roles, the first outranking the others in thespic achievement.

Others in the case include Robert Armstrong, as the managing editor; Paul Harvey, as the district attorney, Charles Halton, Eddie Conrad and Harry Tyler.

Gist of the tale deals with the cub's insistence upon folllowing certain clues which incriminate the prosecutor in the escape of a gangster and his subsequent murder, the arrest and conviction of a presumably innocent man, and the attempted erasure of an accomplice.

Isabel Dawn and Boyce DeGaw, who adapted the original story by Dore Schary and Allen Rivkin, mixed humor with action in the script. Some of the lines, however, created unrest in the audience.

Joseph Santley directed, with Robert North as associate producer.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

[These notes were mailed from London November 22nd.]

"Love on the Dole" In Work at the Elstree

Into production at the Rock Studios, Elstree, has gone "Love on the Dole," screen version of Walter Greenwood's immensely successful play of working class life in the North. The picture is sponsored by British National, and is being directed by John Baxter from a script upon which the author himself, Greenwood, has worked. Greenwood will be associated with the production the whole time it is on the floor.

It may be necessary to take over studio space at Denham in order to facilitate the production processes of the picture.

The cast of the film includes Deborah Kerr, as Sally, Clifford Evans, Frank Cellino, Edward Chapman and Maire O'Neill.

British National have an ambitious production programme which they hope to be able to sustain if sufficient studio space is available. They will make "Mr. Pimpernel Smith," the Leslie Howard subject which he will produce and direct, and in which he will star, at Denham.

John Baxter also directs "Old Mother Riley on the Farm," further contribution to the screen achievements of Lucan & McShane, comedy team rapidly rising to box office heights in picture going Britain.

On these pictures, and on "This England" which has just been finished, British National will probably spend £150,000.

Next year they intend to make eight films with, probably, the story of The Red Cross, with Robert Donat as the star.

Managing Director of British National is George Parish.

"Kipps" Production Eight Weeks in Work

Working from eight o'clock in the morning until half past five each day, the Twentieth Century unit at Shepherd's Bush, with Carol Reed directing, have now, up to the time of writing, put eight weeks of "Kipps" into the developing machines. Careful use of the "Spotter" system has enabled work to proceed with scarcely any appreciable loss of time.

A fortnight's work has been devoted to one set alone, that of Shalford's drapery store in Folkestone, aetat 1906, a set which has given the prop men and art direction staff a full time job. From this, work has now been transferred to another major set, that of the opulent and ornate Folkestone mansion which is bequeathed to shop assistant "Kipps" in Wells' story.

Employed to add to the realism of the Edwardian settings, local Shepherds Bush tradesman Walter Rush donated his window dressing experience to the unit and working from faded photographs of his parents' shop in Kent in the early part of the century, dressed the studio set in appropriate period style.

Michael Redgrave is, of course, playing in the title role, with Diana Wynyard in the feminine lead.

Meanwhile Twentieth Century announce further points on their ambitious £500,000 British film programme.

This side of Christmas Gordon Harker and Sidney Howard, the Cockney and Yorkshireman, comedians both, will go to work on "Once a Crook," from the London stage play by Evadne Price.

Harker has the role of a released convict turned publican seeking to tread the straight and narrow path.

THE WAR'S EFFECT ON BRITISH HOUSES

The effects of the war on the British theatre field are reflected in the annual meetings of British theatre companies recently held. General Theatres Corporation, a Gaumont British affiliate, reported an increase in the annual profits figure of 25,484 (101,936) over the previous 12 months. The net profit reached £338,010.

Another GB company, Associated Provincial Picture Houses, meeting at Exeter, Devon, their evacuation headquarters, estimate a considerable drop in revenue for the year ended October last with little prospect of improvement. Many of the company's houses have been bombed.

Oscar Deutsch, chief of the Odeon circuit, recording a decrease in profits of £36,509 ($146,036) for the year, takes a more or less rosy view of trade prospects. He estimates that the public, thanks to increased spending capacity, has £500,000,000 more than it had previously, to spend and want to spend much of it in theatres.

Some of the Odeon houses have been bombed and the company has spent more than £12,333 ($49,332) on structural work. Much money besides has been expended on protecting the patrons and staffs.

During the year, they had spent £91,245 in additions to theatres and equipment, and had invested a further £163,229 in subsidiary companies. As a result of this and other items, the company had to take over £300,000 ($1,200,000) from resources.

Theatre profits and income at £473,482 ($1,893,928) showed a decrease of £36,509 ($146,036) compared with the previous year.

January Holiday For Ealing Studios

A month's production holiday is planned for Ealing by managing director Reginald Baker, who declares that he will suspend all activity during the month of January. Before the studio closes down it is hoped to have finished the new George Formby comedy at present untitled, but based upon the West End stage play "As You Are." With the February reopening studio work will commence upon Roy Kellino's picture of the Fleet Air Arm, for which exteriors have already been taken.

Mr. Baker states that one of the reasons inspiring this move is the danger of an influenza epidemic, which in the past two years has made January a difficult month for film producers.

Talent Scarce, Sistrom Finds

Casting difficulties are pleaded by RKO-Radio producer William Sistrom, who protests that it is difficult to develop a production programme because it is difficult to get hold of the right artistes, many of them being in the Services. Mr. Sistrom intends, however, to make "A Gift to His Majesty" and may possibly give the leading role to Robert Newton. The subject is based upon one of Peter B. Kyne's novels.

Meanwhile on the floor at Denham under Mr. Sistrom's eye is another "Saint" subject, in which Hugh Sinclair has the title role under the directorial eye of actor-producer Leslie Fenton, Englishman who initially came back to this country in order to join one of the Services, and who has accepted this directorial commission pending his call-up.

"Ghost Train" at Shepherds Bush

In another part of Shepherds Bush Studios, but under the Gaumont-British-Gainsborough wing, four weeks of work have been recorded on the Arthur Askey comedy thriller "The Ghost Train," in which Askey and his comedy partner, "Stinker" Murdoch, have Carole Lynne as their female partner.

Script is by Val Guest and Marriott Edgar, who having worked with and invented gags for The Crazy Gang and Will Hay, now have a new comedy inspiration for their material in "Big Hearted" Arthur.

Walter Forde is directing.

Also in the cast is Morland Graham, who has scored a pronounced hit in the elder title role of "Old Bill and Son."

"London's Got Grit" is the title of a two-reeler made by Widgey Newman and for distribution in the U. S. The picture aims to tell of London's war effort and the story of its resistance to Hitler's hordes.

TRADE IN BRITAIN HARRIED BY SUNDAY CLOSING, ARMY COMPETITION, QUOTA

Exhibitors Unite, Between Bombs, in Move for Government Concessions on Three Problems Affecting Attendance

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Though outside observers might conclude that the British exhibitor, along with his fellow countrymen, would have all his work cut out to fight the bigger battle on the international war front, circumstances have compelled him to arm for other and not too easy fights on exclusively trade territory. His very livelihood depends upon these wars within a war.

Three sectors of the line of battle find him most heavily engaged—those of Sunday opening, of government competition and of quota. On all these three the CEA has decided, in order to preserve the livelihood of its members, to engage its heaviest artillery.

A national campaign is to be undertaken to secure the abolition of the present still cumbersome machinery under which Sunday opening of cinemas is permitted and the exhibitor charity-taxed for the privilege, a campaign which aims at turning the whole business the other way round, letting the exhibitor close if he wants to, and cutting out a tax which has been described pointedly more than once as "ethical blackmail."

Opposition both actual and potential from Government departments and from the services is being watched. The Ministry of Information's mobile cinemas and film library scheme is being closely watched and a particular eye kept on certain dangerous loopholes. The Army Council's films for troops scheme is no less bitterly opposed and any co-operation refused under present circumstances.

Not least anxiously of all does the CEA General Staff regard the quota situation, conscious of the grave dangers of a shortage of product which may leave many exhibitors high and dry, a shortage likely to be aggravated by the decreasing amount of studio space available for production. Here again approach is being made to the Government with the idea of enlightening them as to the exhibitors' difficulties in meeting his quota commitments.

Production Decreasing

This last sector of the trade battlefront is not likely to be the easiest for those fighting there. There would appear to be little doubt that numerically the forthcoming year is likely to be one of the lowest on production record. The decrease also in imported product has already caused great concern, is currently provoking widespread trade difficulties.

Many exhibitors in Great Britain have this last year past just managed to meet their quota. Many have fallen far short. The current 17½ per cent is not likely to be reached by all British exhibitors, for the simple reason that there are not likely to be enough films to be distributed to English cinemas.

Raised in more than one CEA group the quota has this month been discussed at the General Council where it was decided, following the lead of the Scottish branch, to lay the exhibitors' case before the Board of Trade. Though there were differences of opinion voiced at the General Council, the feeling of uneasiness would seem to be general. George Singleton's expose was representative of exhibitor attitudes. He contended that already in competitive areas bookings had been made for the first half of the new quota year and exhibitors knew all too well what sort of difficulty was facing them. Films from British studios were limited and many of the American companies were meeting their quota by large scale subjects on a multiple quota basis.

Studio Space Requisitioned

Producers no less than exhibitors would like something concrete done to stimulate production. Greatest snag at present is the decreasing amount of studio space available. The vast majority of British studios have been requisitioned by the Government. Even those still free have been surveyed by the appropriate State department. There is the likelihood that some of these may go, too. Facing this, British producers have appealed to the Board of Trade to take safeguarding action, contending that few though the films in prospect may be, there may not be the studios available wherein to make them.

Board of Trade officials, helpful and sympathetic, are, however, answerable to other industries and war purposes than merely the film industry, and have done little concrete. It is on record that one producer, pointing out his program and protesting the potential impracticability of achieving it was politely advised to curtail it and makes less films. It is on record, too, that, in a sincere mood to do something helpful, the board propounded the idea of concentrating all British production in the mighty Denham Studios, and guaranteeing adequate space to the companies. Other studios naturally opposed the scheme, producers complained centralization was an impracticable ideal.

Crisis is an extreme word, but it is increasingly believed that if something swift and emphatic is not done by the Board of Trade something like a crisis will face the industry here.

Army Exhibition Opposed

Meanwhile the activities of Government and Service film units is causing increasing annoyance in exhibitor circles here and with trade difficulties already acute the latter contend they can be pardoned for being both adamantine and pugnacious in their attitude.

After long and repeated discussion with the KRS, the CEA remain inflexibly opposed to the Army Council's mobile film scheme, no less inflexible in spite of the emphatic and sustained dissentience of circuit leader, Oscar Deutsch. Mr. Deutsch continues to dissociate himself from the association (and the society) in their refusal to collaborate with the Army, has written to military chiefs Lord Gort and Sir John Dill saying so. "Humiliated" by the "unfortunate statements, of CEA President Harry Mears, Mr. Deutsch wrote to the former gentlemen in protesting and apologetic terms. Only effect so far upon the CEA has been to provoke a sharp rap on the Deutsch knuckles for unconstitutional conduct and to reindorse the association's attitude and its complete accord with the KRS. All the trade army being out of step except Oscar, they continue marching together with the protest that the arrangements—with NAAFI—already in existence were made at the request of the War Office, that there is no reason to believe they have not proven satisfactory and that the Army Council has been totally misinformed and ill advised from sources within the War Office. In future, they suggest, if the War Office has anything to submit it should submit it to the trade associations and not buttonhole individual members.

A like critical eye is being kept on the Ministry of Information whose mobile cinemas, free films, and free projectors scheme has already been reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD. The association insists on an unequivocal guarantee that the activities of the Ministry shall not trespass on the commercial or entertainment field. They have obtained guarantees that no entertainment films will be used, that even the documentaries distributed or shown will be so done only after they have been withdrawn from trade distribution. The tenacity with which the CEA have stuck to this point of principle is reflected in the way, spotting a loophole in the Ministry's free projector scheme, they saw a possibility that such projectors, loaned to libraries or institutions, might be used to show entertainment films. The Films Division chief, Jack Beddington, has promised reservations to educationals.

ATTACK POLICY OF BRITISH MINISTRY

The Ealing Studios on Tuesday launched a sharp attack on the operations of the Films Division of the British Ministry of Information, and said it had no intention of making any more propaganda films for that department.

The Ealing statement said the studio is disillusioned and exasperated by the manner in which the Films Division functions. The studio plans to produce propaganda films on its own, financing them privately, with an immediate budget of about $140,000 set.

Ealing accuses the division of extravagance, citing one case of 1,000 prints made for a five minute subject; opposes the Government's free distribution, and deplores the setting up of a production body in competition with the established industry.

COAST PLAYERS ATTACK REFERENDUM BY GUILD

Extras Question Vote Results on Abolition of Council; Cameramen Near Showdown

The advanced players and extra players of the Screen Actors Guild are still fighting, this week, in Hollywood. War by ballot having ended, war by words continues; and the latest development is the appearance of petitions among extras, charging that the recent referendum abolishing the Class B council, extra players' Guild governing body, was irregular.

Leaders of the extras claim they have secured 1,500 signatures, affirming that that number voted for continuance of the Council. A Guild auditors' report had said only 507 voted for continuance.

The same spokesmen for the extras charge the Guild's board of directors refused to allow Council checkers or observers at the counting of ballots, and that the Council was not allowed to participate in the wording of the ballot question.

Morgan Addresses Publicists

Meanwhile, support by the Guild for the eastern unit of the Screen Publicists Guild was expected to be voiced Thursday night, in New York, by Ralph Morgan. Mr. Morgan was to speak at that time to a meeting of the unit, which was also to nominate officers for the coming year.

The eastern unit is seeking recognition as the bargaining agent for publicity and advertising workers in the New York home offices of the majors, and has petitions for certification as such filed with the National Labor Relations Board.

A showdown over jurisdiction for Hollywood motion picture cameramen, was expected on Wednesday, at which time James Roosevelt's "Pot O' Gold" was to start production. Hal Mohr, former officer of Photographers' Local 659, is the head cameraman. He has been suspended by the American Society of Cinematographers, for non-payment of dues. Photographers Local 659 is a unit of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, which several weeks ago empowered it to declare absolute jurisdiction over all Hollywood cameramen, thus attempting to alter a situation under which the ASC governed first cameramen, and it the rest. A producers' agreement with the ASC provides for employment of only ASC men as first cameramen.

Screen Credit Plan Set

On Wednesday night, in Hollywood, the Screen Writers Guild is expected to approve a compromise plan for adjudication of screen credits.

Attorneys for the guild and for the producers have been conferring on the alternative agreement. The Guild several weeks ago warned its members not to sign agreements with producers, which would allow the latter to be sole arbiters of credits after the expiration of the bargaining agreement.

Conferences on reclassification of extra players and adjusted wage scales for such were to begin next week in Hollywood between representatives of the producers and those of the Screen Actors Guild. It is hoped by the Guild men that they can obtain more extra calls paying above $5.50 per day.

Conferees were to be, for the Guild, Edward Arnold, president; Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary; Walter Abel, Edward Stanley, John Dales, Jr., and Lawrence Beilenson; for the producers, Y. Frank Freeman, president of the Motion Picture Producers Association; E. J. Mannix, Herbert Freston, and Mendel B. Silberberg.

In Scranton, Pennsylvania, this week the IATSE lost a battle for its operators' unit, in Lackawanna County Court. Judge Will Leach refused to lift a non-picketing injunction, in the case of the Bulls Head theatre, owned by R. A. Lesauis. In addition, the Judge castigated unions which "oppress other people."

He said the injunction preventing the IATSE projectionists from picketing the theatre was valid because the theatre was not involved in a labor dispute, the picketing being the result of a CIO-AFL jurisdictional argument. The Judge, in his remarks, referred to the organization of some labor unions and corporations as "hocus-pocus."

George E. Browne, president of the IATSE, is to move, by January 1st, to the Steuben Building, Chicago. Offices of the organization will also be there.

New president of the Theatre Employees Local B-8 96 of the IATSE, Wilkes-Barre, is Ruth Martin. Elections were held last week. Other officers are John Demody, vice-president; Eugene Carroll, recording secretary; Karl R. Thomas, financial secretary; William Tosline, business agent.

On the executive board are Harry Jones, Robert McWilliams, Tina Morgan, and Mary Jones. Trustees are Dorothy Peters, Marion O'Neill, Daisy Mills. Delegates to the Central Labor Union are Miss Martin and Loretta Stewart.

The Hazelton unit, Local 152, has elected Vincent McKelvey president. John Gallagher is vice-president; William Boyle, business agent; Anthony De Cosmo, secretary-treasurer; Henry Krissinger, recording secretary.

Technicians Seek New Contract

In New York, the Laboratory Technicians, Local 702, has opened new contract negotiations. They ask wage increases, a 35 hour week, two weeks' vacation with pay, all holidays with pay, and a minimum work guarantee of four days per week. The present contracts with the Eastern labs, centered in New York, expire December 31st.

The union also seeks uniform contracts. It now has 17 contracts. John Rugge, its president, is heading the negotiations.

Peter J. Christmas is the new president of the Omaha musicians Local 70. Other officers are Ernest Nordin, vice-president; H. E. Pace, recording secretary; Mike Chaloupka, financial secretary and treasurer; and Fred Berghoff, sergeant at arms. Directors are Emil Hoppe, Arthur Randall, Leonard Gamet, Marvin George, and Frank Elias.

Reelected president of the Philadelphia musicians' local, 77, is Frank Liuzzi. He won, in elections last week, over Charles McConnell, by 829 to 646. Other officers are Romeo Cella, vice-president; A. Rex Riccardi, secretary; Harry Kammerer, assistant secretary; Joseph Bossle, treasurer, and James Perri, sergeant at arms.

In the same city, Jack W. Miller, national representative of the American Guild of Variety Artists, has taken over supervision of the local unit, following the ouster of Tom Kelly, who was executive secretary. Mr. Kelly is proposing an actors' union apart from the AGVA. He is now executive secretary of the independent United Entertainers Association, of Philadelphia. His proposal was received last week, in New York, by the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, parent actors' union.

Frank Walker is Honored by 1,000 At Variety Club

One of the biggest gatherings of industry personalities in the history of the Philadelphia Variety Club was present at the sixth annual banquet held Thursday evening at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel. Postmaster General Frank C. Walker was the principal guest of honor.

Almost 1,000 taxed the capacity of the ballroom to such an extent that it was necessary to dispense with the traditional tent covering this year. Instead, cellophane made the decorative motif, with 35 silver and gold spots playing on the cellophane strips to create a modernistic effect. Being held for the first time away from a Sunday on a weekday night, there was the biggest representation in years of New York industry figures and other out-of-towners.

A double dais was set up to provide for 50 outstanding personalities in the world of entertainment and in city, State and national affairs.

Program advertising exceeded the totals of other years, all banquet proceeds going toward the club's infantile paralysis fund. Testimonial dinners were given this week for Robert H. Dunbar and "Dinty" Moore, in Pittsburgh, and for William James, in Columbus, Ohio, with many from the film industry in attendance.

Two hundred exchangemen and exhibitors of Pittsburgh attended the dinner Monday night, at the William Penn Hotel, for Mr. Dunbar and Mr. Moore. Mr. Dunbar is the Warner office manager and city salesman there, who had been promoted to manager in Cincinnati. Mr. Moore is his successor in Pittsburgh.

Variety Honors James

William James, who operated one of the first picture theatres in Columbus, was given a testimonial dinner by the city's Variety Club. In New York, an industry committee, meeting at the Hotel Astor Tuesday, drew plans for a testimonial dinner to E. K. "Ted" O'Shea, and Jack Bowen. TERMS OF COPYRIGHTS NOT AFFECTED BY DECREE

Annual Report of Protection Bureau Points Out Rules Governing Licensed Bookings

The consent decree does not affect any of the problems involved in the effort by the major distributing companies to prevent unauthorized extensions of run and bicycling of pictures which are subject to the U. S. Copyright Act, according to the annual report of their Copyright Protection Bureau, made public in New York, Tuesday.

Violations Decrease

Jack H. Levin, director of the Bureau, reported that violations were found in 26 per cent of theatres in 32 states investigated upon exhibitor or distributor complaints, as compared with 28 per cent in similar investigations during the previous year.

For each single theatre found to be involved in unauthorized extensions of run or so-called "hold overs," there were seven theatres found to be involved in bicycling, said the Bureau. On the other hand, where general territorial investigations, not based upon specific complaints, were made of the theatres in a number of selected distribution territories, it was found that six theatres were involved in the hold-over type to only one engaged in bicycling.

Discussing cases of exhibitors found to have appropriated unlicensed extra days' use at the same or another theatre, the report stressed the fundamental copyright basis of the distribution system of the industry, namely, that only those exhibitions booked in advance of the play date, as confirmed in writing in the regular course by the distributors for specified dates at a designated theatre, are considered licensed exhibitions. This basic principle, states the report, is unaffected by the consent decree, whether pictures are marketed singly or in blocks of any number.

Investigations of stolen, duped and bootlegged prints became a regular department of the Bureau's acticities during the current year, in line with the growing practice. This activity, according to Mr. Levin, took the Bureau into 12 states, and resulted in the recovery and the return to major distributors of the whole or portions of the prints of 91 separately copyrighted subjects belonging to them.

Bureau Recovers Stolen Prints

The investigations ranged from the recovery of duped and stolen prints from the bootleg distributors to locating their sources of supply. The Bureau also obtained certain deletions of infringing sequences from 35mm. and 16mm. negative and positive films.

On the basis of evidence submitted by Harold L. Groves, in charge of field investigations for the Bureau, Chicago police apprehended a former theatre employee who had stolen certain film as well as a bootleg distributor to whom he had sold such film. Both were criminally presecuted and convicted.

The accompanying report of Edward A. Sargoy, special counsel for the distributing companies in these types of copyright matters, stated:

"Coincidentally with the judicial development of an exclusive right to control exhibition under the copyright secured in a motion picture film under the present copyright statute, it was brought home to the motion picture industry the now accepted fact that the unauthorized exhibition must be considered an infringing appropriation of the property in the copyright. Further, the exhibitors of the industry were made 'copyright conscious' by the knowledge that the various distributing companies were viligantly investigating, through their Copyright Protection Bureau, unauthorized uses of their copyrighted prints for exhibition purposes, and taking legal action against offenders through counsel under their respective copyrights.

"The goal constantly in mind was as complete a deterrence as possible of pirated exhibitions, to the end that: all existing playing time in the United States would be available for normal licensing in advance of the use by any distributor with whom an acceptable contractual bargain could be made; the valuable prints belonging to the various distributors could at all times be subject to the complete control of their respective branch offices; the honest exhibitor-customers of the industry protected against possible miss-outs or violations of contracted rights to priority of run, and against the unfair competition of local pirated uses; and a distributor-exhibitor contract morale based upon the industry's licensing system of distribution under copyright preserved and strengthened."

Auction Sale Held For British Relief

The blue scarf, silver lorgnette and bonnet worn by Vivien Leigh in the forthcoming United Artists picture, "Lady Hamilton," are among the Hollywood objects to be auctioned off by the Old New York Chapter of the British War Relief Society on Saturday, December 14th, in New York.

Among other gifts donated to the auction by the various Hollywood studios are five of Dorothy Lamour's sarongs, one of the colorful shirts worn by Errol Flynn in "Sante Fe Trail," the black parasol used by Marlene Dietrich in "Seven Sinners,," a dress worn by Deanna Durbin in "Spring Parade," Loretta Young's amethyst clip from "He Stayed for Breakfast," Penny Singleton's crystal clip from "Blondie Has Servant Trouble," two signed original isney drawings, and others.

Also to aid the British War Relief plans are being pushed forward by New York branch managers at the suggestion of Major Albert Warner, vice-president of Warner Brothers. . .

Harry H. Buxbaum, 20th Century-Fox branch manager, who is chairman of the film exchange's committee for the New York and Brooklyn Federations of Jewish Charities is directing the organization plans.

Fay's Theatre Robbed

Two armed bandits escaped Monday with $3,100, the weekend receipts of the Majestic and Fay's theatres in Providence, R. I., owned and operated by Edward M. Fay, when Albert J. Clarke, manager of the Majestic, was forced into an automobile along with John Sergey, an usher from the theatre, as they were taking the money to the bank. The loss was insured.

Receives MGM Button

An MGM Honor Roll Button has been awarded to W. T. Studebaker, manager of the Logan Theatre, Logansport, Ind., for his exploitation campaign on "Hullabaloo."

OPERA HOUSE TO BE SOLD

The Metropolitan Opera House, Philadelphia, is for sale, having been virtually dark for the past seven years. Once, it was the showplace of the city. The Stanley-Warner Company operated it for a while as a motion picture theatre. It has played everything from legitimate productions to boxing matches. It has 4,000 seats.

Leonard, Hyland In Mills Group

Arthur Leonard and Dick Hyland have been signed as eastern production unit to make "soundies" for the Jimmy Roosevelt-Mills automatic motion picture machines.

Cinemasters, Inc., the Leonard-Hyland organization, produces at Fox-Movietone Studios in New York. Bands, singers and specialties are being signed by Cinemasters, and production on the first series will start Monday. The contract is said to contain a clause "assuring production standards which will pass censorship in any situation."

Both Leonard and Hyland are alumni of Warner Brothers, the former at one time as casting director under Lee Stewart at Vitaphone Studios, and Hyland recently in charge of Warner's publicity and exploitation in the South. Following a number of features independently produced and directed by Leonard, Hyland resigned from Warners to form Cinemasters with him for the production of industrial and theatrical films. Current output includes the Columbia-released Hobby Lobby, featuring Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt first in a series based on the Dave Elman radio program.

Other New Units

The Midwest Specialties Company, of Cleveland, has been formed by Urban Anderson, Sam Brodella and George Ulcigan, to handle distribution of Panoram "soundies," throughout the northern Ohio territory. Having leased offices in the Film Building, they expect to be in operation by next week. Mr. Anderson resigned as manager of the Capitol Theatre, an Associated Theatres Circuit house, to become connected with the new company.

Nickel Talkies, Inc., has been formed by Frank Albertson and Jerry Colonna, actors; Harold Schuster and Thornton Freeland, directors, and Bruce Knox and Donavin Miller, in charge of sales. The company has been organized to compete with the dime-in-the-slot machines. Projectors, made by Bell & Howell, and used by the company, will retail at $750 apiece. Prices would be less for ten or more. The company will produce its own films.

A. F. Rickerfor and associates will handle distribution of Phonovision in the New Orleans area, following a trade showing of the machine at the Roosevelt Hotel in that city. Delivery dates are reported to be uncertain. Mr. Rickerfor operates restaurants and a well-known billiard hall, among other enterprises, in New Orleans.

Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago stated recently that "juke boxes" would be legalized soon. The announcement follows cessation of a drive by police against the nickel-in-the-slot devices.

Army Seeking More Film Men

The United States Civil Service Commission in Washington, D. C., early this week invited more applications from persons for employment with the War Department as associate animation directors.

The commission announced that applications would be received until January 3rd (January 6th for West Coast states) for the $3,200 a year position. Applicants must have had considerable experience in directing, planning and writing in the motion picture field, including familiarity with the technic of animated motion pictures.

To The Colors

R. B. Lord, laboratory superintendent at Erpi's Hollywood plant, has been called for a year's active service with the army. Mr. Lord will report within a few days for duties as a first lieutenant.

Joe Novack of the Capitol theatre in Scranton, Pa., has joined the 109th Infantry which will leave for a year's encampment after the first of the year.

George Lofing, Universal booker at Des Moines, Ia., has been called into the Naval service, in which he is a reserve officer.

The entire six-man staff of the Hollywood theatre in Sioux Falls, S. D., has been affected by the draft or war department orders. Two are in the National Guard and have been called while the rest will be called early in the draft.

Captain Stodter to Hollywood

Capt. Charles Stodter of the United States Army Signal Corps has arrived from Washington, D. C., to be liaison officer between the Army and the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Research Council in the production of Army training films.

In New York, according to a ruling recently made by a local draft board, actors appearing in Broadway productions will be temporarily deferred until the finish of an engagement if one case is to be taken as a precedent for future rulings.

It is understood that theatrical productions are classed as temporary employment and in such instances draftees are not supposed to be called until out of work. The same ruling is expected to apply to vaudeville, night club and radio engagements.

The film industry's permanent Charities Committee, headed by Samuel Goldwyn, has advised Harold S. Vanderbilt, national honorary chairman of the Greek War Relief Association, Inc., that it has heartily endorsed and approved all possible aid to the association's drive. The Association's appeal passed the $151,000 mark with much of the fund contributed by film executives and workers.

Spyros Skouras has also announced that a large number of artists from stage, screen and radio will participate in the shows to be held in key cities for the benefit of Greek war relief funds.

Price Reduction on Marquee Letters

Substantial reductions in the price of embossed attraction board letters of silhouette type have been announced by the Artkraft Sign Company of Lima, Ohio. The letter is described and new literature is offered in the accompanying issue of Better Theatres. The letters are die embossed from 18-gauge steel and have black baked wrinkle finish.

LOEW'S, PARAMOUNT TO BACK BROADWAY PLAYS

Financial Arrangements Under New Agreement Reported as Warners Withdraws Support

With Warners withdrawing their financial support of "Hot Nocturne," because of alleged inability to make a satisfactory financial deal under the new Dramatists Guild pact; and Loew's and Paramount this week prepared to back Broadway plays, in the wake of the signing of the accord between the League of New York Theatres and the Dramatists on November 15th, permitting film companies to purchase film rights before Broadway openings.

Warners' withdrawal of financial backing from the Ed Gilbert play, the first under the new arrangement, came as a surprise in view of the fact that the film company had been represented on the committee which drew up the document and appeared to be satisfied with it, when the accord was signed. The Group Theatre, nominal sponsors of the play are reported seeking another backer.

Loew's To Back Play

Meanwhile, it became known that pending settlement of certain disagreements on the part of film companies over the phraseology of the pact, Hollywood would mark time in financing plays under the accord. Paramount, it was reported, had only a one-third interest in "Lady in the Dark," new musical-drama by Moss Hart and Kurt Weill, and was not operating under terms of the pact.

Loew's was said to be going ahead with its backing of "Mr. and Mrs. North," Owen Davis melodrama, while certain of its objections to the wording of the pact are being ironed out. A meeting of representatives of the film companies was to be held, this week, with Sidney Fleischer, Guild attorney, at which the film companies' complaints will be discussed and effort made to remedy them.

Warner's chief complaint aganist the pact was reported to be in connection with the split of profits with the authors after the ceiling payment of $200,000 has been made by the film company.

Meanwhile, it was reported that Carl Laemmle, Jr.., was backing "Retreat to Pleasure," which the Group Theatre plans to present at the Belasco Theatre, New York.

First appointment to the Permanent Board, designed to settle disputes under the pact, is Warren P. Munsell, Jr., business manager of the Theatre Guild and a member of the committee which drafted the accord, who will represent the League of New York Theatres. Brock Pemberton has been designated as alternate.

It was reported that Edward Childs Carpenter, chairman of the Dramatists' Guild Board, would be appointed representative of the playwrights. The film companies will name their representative later. John Byram, of Paramount; Jacob Wilk, of Warners and Sidney Phillips of MGM, have been mentioned as possible candidates for the film companies' representative.

Sunday Shows Continue

The experiment of Sunday shows is continuing ir New York, with unabated success rewarding the efforts of managers and the Actors' Equity, responsible for the test. One of eight theatres participating in the experiment, the Mansfield, on December 1st, went a step further by putting on a Sunday matinee of "Horse Fever," said to be the first Sunday matinee in the history of the New York legitimate theatre. None of the other managers adopted the Sunday matinee idea, however.

Among the productions presenting Sunday shows, "Hellzapoppin," and "Tobacco Road," reported an improvement in business as compared with the first Sunday shows. In all, nine shows are being presented on Sunday nights, including "It Happens on Ice," at the Centre Theatre, which presented Sunday shows prior to the launching of the Sabbath show experiment, since it opened on October 10th.

The latter is the national non-commercial organization whose plays, operas and ballets for children, enacted by adult professionals, reached nearly a million last season, at admissions averaging 25 cents or less.

BOOK REVIEW

BEST BROADCASTS OF 1939-40. Selected and edited by Max Wylie. Whittlesey House, McGraw-Hill Book Company, Inc., New York. 368 pages. $3.00.

Max Wylie, director of scripts and continuity for the Columbia Broadcasting System, here presents his second annual collection of "best broadcasts". In the first paragraph of the preface Mr. Wylie points out, "Some of the pieces reprinted are very good from every standard, and some of them are very bad from every standard except radio's." That remark anticipates much criticism.

The selection of original material for radio includes six plays, five "best comedies", six "best news reporting" as well as a number of programs separately classified. Each of the continuities chosen is preceded by a few introductory words by Mr. Wylie.

The programs have been reprinted just as they were broadcast and the reader finds the commercial announcements even more annoying in print than on the air. Shakespeare himself probably would not be able to write a radio play which would not suffer, to some extent, on account of the advertising interludes.

The book tends to emphasize the differences between program material for radio and story material for motion pictures. Even the "best scripts," and some of them are good from any viewpoint, are really but a specialized form of one act play and by nature usually without sufficient body for screen purposes.

The first three scripts, "My Client, Curley," by Norman Corwin and Lucille Fletcher; "In the Fog" by Milton Geiger and "The Dark Valley" by W. H. Auden, make excellent reading. Unfortunately that level is not maintained and perhaps cannot be if a representative group of broadcasts are reprinted. Radio comedies, with the exception of a few lines, no matter how funny over the air are rather flat in print.

Of the news broadcasts selected that by William L. Shirer from Compiègne, France, on June 21, 1940 is by far the most significant. The signing of the German-French armistice, ending the war of 1939-40 in the very same railroad car and on the same spot as the war of 1914-18 was concluded, but with the sides reversed, was described by a commentator who saw it all happen.

"Best Broadcasts of 1939-40" has a number of selections of interest to all and the whole is of great value for all those who wish to learn more about radio and what it does to win audiences.—M. Q., Jr.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

HE STAYED FOR BREAKFAST: Loretta Young, Melvyn Douglas—A very fine show; no dull spots in this wonderful picture. A very good cast. And did good business. Running time, 88 minutes. Played November 27-28.—Harry Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

ISLAND OF DOOMED MEN: Peter Lorre, Rochelle Hudson, Robert Wilcox—This is the most horrible picture probably that any crew ever put together. Everybody connected with it, including the salesman who sold it, ought to be shot in the early morning or late in the evening or any other time, just so they be shot. Played November 20-21.—Joseph Gray, Gray Theatre, Spangler, Pa. General patronage.

First National

ANGEL FROM TEXAS, AN: Eddie Albert, Rosemary Lane, Wayne Morris, Ronald Reagan, Jane Wyman—A nice comedy, although Morris does not fit in here. Albert and Lane hit the spot. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 18-19.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

NO TIME FOR COMEDY: James Stewart, Rosalind Russell, Charles Ruggles, Genevieve Tobin, Allyn Jolsyn, Louise Beavers—An exceedingly clever picture and Miss Russell was very clever, yes, very clever, and the support, Genevieve Tobin, Allyn Joslyn and Charles Ruggles, played their several parts, which pleased all of the patrons. It was hard for a neglected wife to come back and into her own but Miss Russell did that very thing. It is believed that all seeing "No Time for Comedy" will be well repaid for time and money spent. Running time, 96 minutes. Played November 28-December 4.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

NO TIME FOR COMEDY: James Stewart, Rosalind Russell—A big disappointment. Two grand stars in a picture that lacked something. It starts out good and then quits. Box office very poor on this one. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 27-28.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

THEY DRIVE BY NIGHT: George Raft, Ann Sheridan, Ida Lupino, Humphrey Bogart, Gale Page—Not only packed with action about truck drivers but also a first class performance from the entire cast. The most impressionistic action comes from Ida Lupino. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 22-24.—John Grabenstein, Liberty Theatre, Eustis, Neb. Rural and small town patronage.

TORRID ZONE: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Andy Devine, Helen Vinson—Had a commercial tieup so went to town on this in spite of a raging blizzard.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TORRID ZONE: James Cagney, Ann Sheridan, Pat O'Brien, Andy Devine, Helen Vinson—Cagney and Sheridan were very good in this. If Cagney would talk a little louder and O'Brien only half as loud, this would have been twice as good a picture. Running time, 88 minutes. Played November 8-9.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

TUGBOAT ANNIE SAILS AGAIN: Marjorie Rambeau, Alan Hale, Ronald Reagan, Jane Wyman—Fairly good comedy but don't compare it with the first one. Box office draw only fair but seemed to please. It's different at any rate from most of them. Running time, 77 minutes. Played November 28-29.—Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BITTER SWEET: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Rather than marry a man she doesn't love, Miss MacDonald dashes off to gay Vienna with her singing teacher (Nelson Eddy). Her husband is killed in a duel with swords and her husband in life becomes her guardian angel in death and his unseen presence to others but real to her helps her to reach highest triumphs in her chosen musical career. While not a "Naughty Marietta," her first and best, yet the picture clicks and should make an excellent box office attraction. Running time, 94 minutes. Played November 28-December 4.—William Noble, Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

BOOM TOWN: Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert, Hedy Lamarr, Frank Morgan—It is more or less silly to write anything on this film. It is very good cast acting in a very good picture and the drawing power is amazing. My second night was hurt badly by a great deal of snow but we still did extremely well. The story moves right along from beginning to end with plenty of action, comedy and drama. Running time, 120 minutes. Played November 29-30.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

DR. KILDARE GOES HOME: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—I am very much afraid that these are going the way of all series of pictures, the Motos, etc. Certainly the play on them is getting less each time. We note that they are not holding on the second day of the run as they formerly did. They are cut overmuch to same pattern. Each one does not differ from the rest that have come before to any great extent.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

EARL OF CHICAGO: Robert Montgomery, Edward Arnold—Excellent. A far better picture than it was a book. B. O. improved each day. Probably appeal to British audiences more than American. Title is against it.—G. G. Baiss, Capitol Theatre, Duncan, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

FORTY LITTLE MOTHERS: Eddie Cantor, Rita Johnson, Bonita Granville, Judith Anderson, Baby Quintanilla—This was a last minute substitute for "Haunted Honeymoon" and it wasn't bad either. Baby Quintanilla was the main attraction. The audience loved the child. Eddie Cantor was better because he played a more saner and dramatic role. It gives entertainment, although we won't make a fortune. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 29-30.—John Grabenstein, Liberty Theatre, Eustis, Neb. Rural and small town patronage.

GREAT WALTZ, THE: Miliza Korjus, Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet—Did better on repeat after one year than first time. The public began to realize it is the most beautiful musical yet made. Good love story, class and again class.—G. G. Baiss, Capitol Theatre, Duncan, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

HAUNTED HONEYMOON: Robert Montgomery, Constance Cummings—Unless you love to have a "Haunted" conscience, otherwise for the sake of your self respect and dignity of your quality of entertainment, don't play this. Made in London with an English cast, unknown to Americans, and a despairingly slow paced story hurt us financially and morally—so to speak. We pulled it after the first showing and substituted another feature. Don't be fooled; don't play it. Running time, 83 minutes. Played November 28.—John Grabenstein, Liberty Theatre, Eustis, Neb. Rural and small town patronage.

I LOVE YOU AGAIN: Myrna Loy, William Powell, Frank McHugh, Edmund Lowe—Very good and thoroughly enjoyed by a less than average attendance. We saw a good many men read the title, snort and pass on. These two stars never disappoint and this picture was very clever. We all liked it. Played November 17-18.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

I TAKE THIS WOMAN: Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr—Much better than reports led me to expect. I have heard that Hedy Lamarr cannot act. She certainly gives a fine imitation of acting in this anyway and looked, of course, beautiful.—G. G. Baiss, Capitol Theatre, Duncan, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
Rockefeller Center, New York
MOTION PICTURE HERALD

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER, THE: Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan, James Stewart—MGM never made a sweeter "B" picture. Did not draw but splendid entertainment.—G. G. Baiss, Capitol Theatre, Duncan, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

WYOMING: Wallace Beery, Ann Rutherford, Leo Carrillo—Good old Wallace Beery. He is No. 1 star with our patrons and he never lets them down. Plenty of gun play and lots of the kind of comedy they like. And the lady blacksmith wasn't so bad either. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 24-25.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

Monogram

IRISH LUCK: Frankie Darro, Dick Purcell—Being Irish, I hate to pan this picture but, really, brethren of the exhibitors guild, take a tip and double bill or shelve it. We played to 10 people the second night.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Paramount

ARISE, MY LOVE: Ray Milland, Claudette Colbert—Now here's a picture that's geared for first class entertainment. It has just about everything a good picture needs, comedy, romance and action and everybody liked it. We have been a little disappointed with Paramount product so far this year but this one helped out. Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 10-11.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

BUCK BENNY RIDES AGAIN: Jack Benny, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Andy Devine, Ellen Drew—This is a natural in any spot. Really made a little money on this one. Best Benny picture to date. "Rochester" is at least one-half the show. Running time, 85 minutes. Played October 11-12.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

CHRISTMAS IN JULY: Dick Powell, Ellen Drew—Good picture; good business. Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 26.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CHRISTMAS IN JULY: Dick Powell, Ellen Drew Very mild little romantic comedy that was poor at the box office. Our patrons got little out of it and we fail to understand where the good reviews came from. Good for cash night or family night but not for preferred playing time. Gave us the smallest Thanksgiving receipts we have ever had. The reviews fooled us. Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 20-21.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

DANCING ON A DIME: Grace MacDonald, Robert Paige—A very good light musical comedy that is good for any day of the week, although it lacks "names" to bring them in on Sunday. All those who came enjoyed it. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 23-25.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

I WANT A DIVORCE: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—Good picture and well liked by all. Comments were all good for this feature and everybody seemed to enjoy it, but the draw was poor. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 3-4.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

QUARTERBACK, THE: Wayne Morris, Virginia Dale, Edgar Kennedy—No business on this one. It's just another football picture with Edgar Kennedy furnishing a few laughs. Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 23-25.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

RANGERS OF FORTUNE: Fred MacMurray, Patricia Morison, Albert Dekker, Betty Brewer—We were a little disappointed with this feature as the reviews had been good but we found it only average. Seemed just a bit slow but the customers did not complain. In fact, the comments were generally good but it was allocated too high. Running time, 74 minutes. Played November 1-2.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

REMEMBER THE NIGHT: Barbara Stanwyck, Fred MacMurray, Beulah Bondi—A very fine picture; pleased almost everyone. Running time, 90 minutes.

Played November 1-2.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RIVER: Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Basil Rathbone, Oscar Levant—Just a fair picture. Crosby seems to loaf through it but Mary Martin does her best to pep it up. Crosby needs a good comedian like Bob Hope to spark his pictures for him. Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 13-14.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RIVER: Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Basil Rathbone, Oscar Levant—We did remarkably well with this musical attraction. Part of the draw was due to the fact that Oscar Levant is in the cast and my customers like him in "Information, Please." There is a clever story, good comedy, nice music, and nothing to worry about. That's what my crowd wants, so keep them coming. Running time, 92 minutes. Played November 28.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RIVER: Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Oscar Levant, Basil Rathbone—A nice picture but seemed to lack the draw we had expected. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 22-23.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

SILVER ON THE SAGE: William Boyd, George Hayes, Russell Hayden—We had to substitute this one for "Society Smugglers" with Preston Foster and Irene Hervey because of its reference to modern gangsterism. This western picture went over very well but was the usual shooting and riding type of "Cassidy" picture and it went over all right. Popeye, the Sailor, in "Hello, How Am I" and RKO Newsreel completed the program. Running time, 82 minutes. Played November 30-December 1.—W. J. Overstreet, Prison Theatre, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

STAGECOACH WAR: William Boyd, Russell Hayden—This Autry boy has the oomph for westerns. Boyd slipping. Better get "Windy" back.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THREE MEN FROM TEXAS: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Andy Clyde—A very good western with an added comedy star. Just the punch that Boyd westerns need. Above the average for Westerns. Running time, 75 minutes.—Harry Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

UNTAMED: Patricia Morison, Ray Milland, Akim Tamiroff—Positively the best thing Paramount has turned out since "Union Pacific." Fine draw on Sunday but nothing after that as we had the worst November storm in history on Monday and Tuesday. Drew more good comments than anything we have run for months. Here is one to go back and pick up if you haven't played it. The trailer (color) will bring them in.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

Republic

EARL OF PUDDLESTONE: James, Lucile, Russell Gleason—The best of the Higgins family pictures so far. Although this series cannot be compared with others, it does have a following. Business was good and all enjoyed it. Running time, 67 minutes. Played November 26.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

FRIENDLY NEIGHBORS: Weaver Brothers and Elviry—Good picture and good business. Running time, 67 minutes. Played November 29-30.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN RANGERS: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Raymond Hatton, Duncan Renaldo)—Average western to average business. Our customers like the Three Mesquiteers. Running time, 58 minutes. Played November 23.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

SCATTERBRAIN: Judy Canova, Ruth Donnelly, Alan Mowbray—For some reason this did not click with us or the cash customers. There are a couple of laughs in it but it is mostly too silly. Drew fairly well on election night. Probably would have done better on Saturday night. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 5-6.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BACHELOR MOTHER: Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Charles Coburn—Traded a new one for this and it was a good trade. A wonderful picture with Ginger Rogers at her best. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 15-16.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

GIRL FROM MEXICO, THE: Lupe Velez, Donald Woods, Leon Errol—Just the type for our patronage. Everybody seemed to enjoy it. This girl Lupe puts the old action into this picture. Very good supporting cast. Good show any day. Running time, 71 minutes. Played December 1.—Joseph Gray, Gray Theatre, Spangler, Pa. General patronage.

NEW AND PRODIGAL CONTRIBUTORS

One new and one prodigal contributor this week sent reports to the What the Picture Did for Me department. The new member is:

JOSEPH GRAY, Gray Theatre, Spangler, Pa.

The prodigal contributor whose reports resume after a lapse of several months is:

G. G. Baiss, Capitol Theatre, Duncan, B. C., Canada.

Read the reports of these and other contributors in the adjoining columns.

PINOCCHIO: Disney Feature Cartoon—A wonderful picture but we played it after everyone had seen it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 25-26.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

THAT'S RIGHT, YOU'RE WRONG: Kay Kyser and His Orchestra, Ginny Simms, Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Edward Everett Horton, Lucille Ball—Without a doubt this was by far the best picture that we have shown here this year. Although we had only time to show this feature picture, it was sufficient and everyone was well pleased. Comments are still coming in about it and we recommend it very highly tor any and all types of patronage. Running time, 91 minutes. Played November 28.—W. J. Overstreet, Prison Theatre, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

WILDCAT BUS: Fay Wray, Charles Lang—Very amateurish, although the idea for it was good. Running time, 62 minutes. Played November 26-27.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CITY IN DARKNESS: Sidney Toler, Lynn Bari—The usual Chan stuff which does not go over here. We always run these at a loss, although some of them are very good. Running time, 74 minutes. Played November 21-23.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland, Canada. Small town patronage.

DOWN ARGENTINE WAY: Don Ameche, Betty Grable, Carmen Miranda—Good picture; good business. Color is beautiful. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 27-28.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Claudette Colbert, Henry Fonda, Edna May Oliver, Eddie Collins—This frontier drama of Revolutionary Days compares favorably with "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" insofar as color is concerned, and certainly that can be considered a credit to any picture. While many in our audience were inclined to rate the beauty of the color photography, above the story, it cannot be denied that that picture does possess thrilling moments of danger and tragedy, not to forget the comedy that is supplied by Edna May Oliver, who appears as a tender-hearted toughie of the backwoods days. Fans who like the best in color and panoramic beauty, bloodcurdling war whoops and suspense, will undoubtedly enjoy "Drums Along the Mohawk." Running time, 103 minutes. Played November 23.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

FOUR SONS: Don Ameche, Eugenie Leontovich, Mary Beth Hughes—A very timely picture well received by all. Running time, 88 minutes. Played October 4-5.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

GAY CABALLERO, THE: Cesar Romero, Sheila Ryan—A very good picture. Did fair on this new western. But not as much as expected. Running time, 61 minutes. Played November 26.—Harry Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

HE MARRIED HIS WIFE: Joel McCrea, Nancy Kelly, Roland Young, Mary Boland, Cesar Romero—Doubled with "Edge of the World." Good Fox comedy.—G. G. Baiss, Capitol Theatre, Duncan, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

LILLIAN RUSSELL: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Henry Fonda, Edward Arnold, Leo Carrillo, Weber and Fields—Miscast but she does her best. A tedious subject well done.—G. G. Baiss, Capitol Theatre, Duncan, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

LITTLE OLD NEW YORK: Alice Faye, Richard Greene, Fred MacMurray, Brenda Joyce—A wonderful show that is bound to please everybody. It has everything including plenty of action, romance and comedy. Nobody should be afraid of this one, even though it is old. Running time, 100 minutes. Played November 18-20.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland, Canada. Small town patronage.

MARYLAND: Walter Brennan, Fay Bainter, Brenda Joyce, John Payne, Charlie Ruggles, Hattie McDaniel—We played this with "I Married Adventure" and, though everyone here leaves town on Thanksgiving week-end, we had a fairly good crowd. Therefore, it must have very good drawing power. The color is excellent, the story interesting and the negroes in the cast completely steal the picture away from some very competent acting by the rest of the cast. It has what it takes for small towns especially. Running time, 92 minutes. Played November 23.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

PACK UP YOUR TROUBLES: Jane Withers, Ritz Brothers—A well-liked picture. Really enjoyed by all. Jane was at her best in this picture. This one will go anywhere. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 16-17.—W. J. Overstreet, Prison Theatre, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

YESTERDAY'S HEROES: Jean Rogers, Robert Sterling—Blocks of five next year and what is going to happen if the exhibitor gets five in the block like this one, and it all came about by a theorist in Washington that apparently didn't have the foggiest notion of what makes the wheels go round in this great industry. I can see critical days ahead for both exhibitor and producer alike in this unfair handicap it has put on both distribution and exhibition. So be it, but I hope it works better than some of the other experiments that have come in the last seven years.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

YOUNG PEOPLE: Shirley Temple, Jack Oakie, Charlotte Greenwood—A fair picture but does very little business. Must say that I am glad that this one is her last for awhile. Fairly good cast. Running time, 76 minutes. Played November 24-25.—Harry Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

United Artists

ETERNALLY YOURS: Loretta Young, David Niven, Hugh Herbert, Billie Burke, Zasu Pitts—Bad business on account of icy roads and mean weather. Not helped any by the picture. Patrons didn't care for it. Mushy story; soft as melted butter. Several suggestive scenes pulled in by the horns unnecessarily. Can't give this picture much. Not helped any for our patronage by English tone. Played November 27-28.—Joseph Gray, Gray Theatre, Spangler, Pa. General patronage.

HOUSE ACROSS THE BAY, THE: George Raft, Joan Bennett, Lloyd Nolan, Walter Pidgeon, Gladys George—A good show that stood up very well for three days. Raft is well liked here. Everybody that came to see it passed favorable comments. Running time, 88 minutes. Played November 14-16.—Fred Basha, Palace Theatre, Corner Brook, Newfoundland, Canada. Small town patronage.

THEY SHALL HAVE MUSIC: Jascha Heifetz, Joel McCrea, Andrea Leeds—Indeed a music lovers holiday. We have many who are partial to this kind of music but, of course, there were many who could not get much out of this one. However, generally speaking, it pelased all. Running time, 101 minutes. Played November 23-24.—W. J. Overstreet, Prison Theatre, Florida State Prison, Railford, Fla. Prison patronage.

Warner Brothers

DISPATCH FROM REUTER'S, A: Edward G. Robinson, Edna Best, Otto Kruger, Eddie Albert—I liked it but the customers said it was boring and many walked out. They want Edward G. Robinson as a gangster. A few more like "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" and Robinson will be washed up. Running time, 90 minutes. Played December 1-2.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DISPATCH FROM REUTER'S, A: Edward G. Robinson, Edna Best, Otto Kruger, Eddie Albert—No business on this one, although everyone said it was better than they thought it would be. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 23-25.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

VIRGINIA CITY: Errol Flynn, Miriam Hopkins, Randolph Scott, Alan Hale, Humphrey Bogart, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams—Action-romance of the old west in Civil War days ably presented. Erroll Flynn and Randolph Scott excellent and well liked here. Alan Hale and "Big Boy" Williams pleased greatly. There's not a dull moment. Running time, 120 minutes. Played November 15-17.—John Grabenstein, Liberty Theatre, Eustis, Neb. Rural and small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

CONVOY: Clive Brook, John Clements—Based on British convoy system and Nazi attack and sacrifice of the "Jervis Bay" cruiser. Excellent, topical with British Navy cooperation.—G. G. Baiss, Capitol Theatre, Duncan, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

EDGE OF THE WORLD: Niall Macguiness—One of the most beautiful and artistic pictures I've ever seen. Slow moving, well acted, unusual, good story.

Deval Adapting Wilder's "Bridge" for Weissman

Jacques Deval, author of "Tovarich," Broadway hit of several seasons ago, which Warner made into a film starring Claudette Colbert and Charles Boyer, is working on the screen treatment of Thornton Wilder's "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," in collaboration with Mr. Wilder, Henry Weissman, producer, announced this week, in his newly-established offices in the RKO Building, New York. Mr. Weissman plans to produce a new screen version of the book, which was filmed, without sound, some years ago by M-G-M.

The adaptation will be ready in a week, Mr. Weissman anticipates, whereupon he will proceed to Hollywood to engage a director, cast and production personnel, and secure a studio. He has not yet made plans for distribution of the film, he said.

Mr. Weissman is the son of C. H. Weissman, early European film distributor, producer, financier and dominant factor in Europe's film industry until Hitler's accession to power. He came to the United States two years ago from Zurich, Switzerland where his father's main offices were located.

Looking At It From This Corner

DECEMBER is humming. The members say so with a barrage of reports that reach this desk with every mail. There seems agreement that the opposition of Christmas can be met, and with profit, by those who would bestir themselves in throwing every competitive weapon into the battle.

It is now time to recognize that December is just another month in the year. If December proves tougher to lick, then let there be bigger guns brought to bear in licking it. These are not brave words offered only to whip up lagging spirits. They are passed on as torches held high by those who refuse to allow the holiday month to interfere with the steady and forward course of their boxoffice operations.

ACCOMPLISHMENTS of the London, Ont., Theatre Managers' Association are detailed in the news section of this issue. Organized in September by the seven theatres representing different circuits in the city, these theatremen have already done a job in the interests of, and for the profit of all.

Local charities have been the immediate beneficiaries of the association. More important is the success the members have had in securing daily theatre pages in the hitherto hard-to-crack newspapers. Secretary-treasurer Jack Whitehouse, and manager of the Centre theatre, is willing to inform theatremen in other sectors on the benefits to be had from such cooperation.

THE consistency with which Ev Callow reports those outstanding Philadelphia Warner Theatres campaigns backs up the sweat and brain-racking that go into the conception and execution of ticket-selling promotions brought to life by the division ad head and his forces.

The post occupied by Callow has a long tradition of effectiveness signalized by the doings of such stalwarts as Harry Goldberg and Jules Seltzer. Ev is carrying on.

THOSE of us who know him from the old days will be bending the traditional elbow in the direction of George Hoover, recently appointed by Stephen A. Lynch, president of Paramount Enterprises in Miami to City Manager of the circuit's 15 houses. Hoover has been doing a job of work at the helm of the swanky Sheridan, in Miami Beach. He will continue to do a job of work in the newer and more responsible situation.

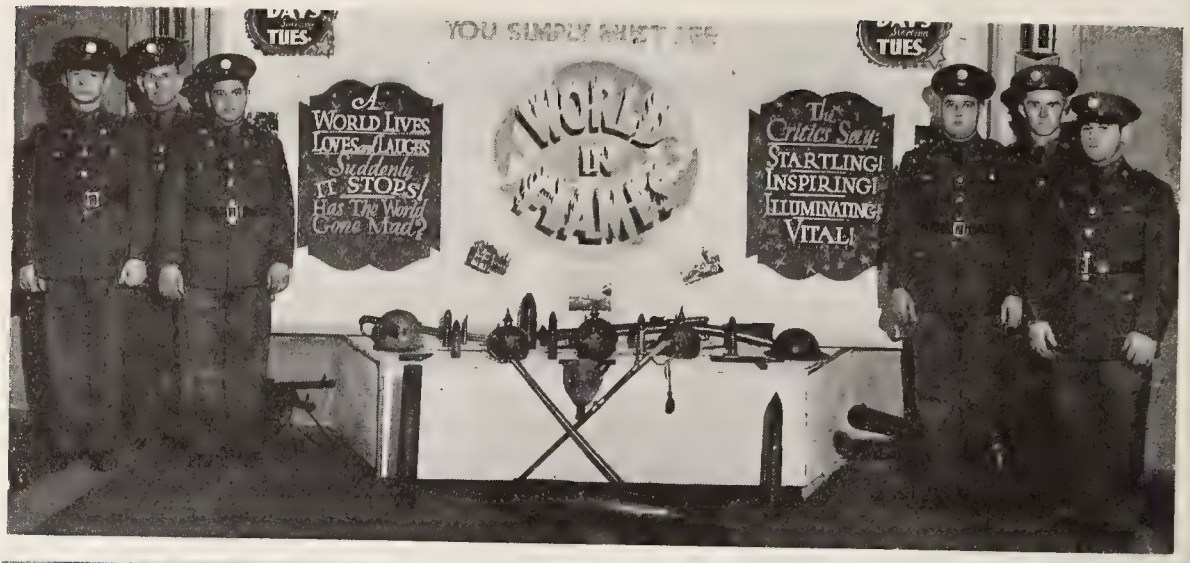
PEARCE PARKHURST is going places. The Round Tabler's potent activities have long been noted in these pages. Now, taking over the managership of E. M. Loew's Larcum, in Beverly, Mass., Parkhurst introduces himself to the community via a herald-questionnaire that carries his picture, his theatre credo. To those answering all the queries in the questionnaire, a "let's-get-acquainted" pass will be forwarded.

The answers from the public will undoubtedly aid Pearce in determining a profitable boxoffice policy. The personal introduction should do a quicker job of bringing the theatreman to an enviable face-to-face with the cash customers.

This is what happened:

Some months back, these pages featured a very smart cow-milking contest put on by Schiner Seymour Morris, in Lockport, N. Y. Recently, came RKO Radio's "Elsie the Cow" tiein for "Little Men". To help the campaign, the Morris promotion was offered. Theatre-trained ad director, S. Barret McCormick, seeing quick possibilities, passed the idea on to Terry Turner, field exploitation head. Equally impressed, Turner turned the suggestion into boxoffice.



As a result, comes immediate reports of the comprehensive cow-milking tiein for the world's premiere at the Orpheum, Denver, Colo., with the endorsement and support of Manager Mickey Gross. Over 300 entrants were had for the key city date.

The promotion is to be continued in other situations along the same elaborate line.

Round Table In Pictures

(Right) Using lobby side wall for background, on "Escape" at Loew's, Houston, Tex., Francis Deering had the title and slogan line painted across the face of it in water colors in giant lettering so, as Francis writes, the crowds could not "escape" seeing it.

Street Stunts Aid 'Bagdad' Opening

Following through on the publicity gained by the Djini float in the recent New York Macy Thanksgiving parade, United Artists used the same exploitation in the campaign for "Thief of Bagdad" at the Music Hall. Along the same lines, a huge elephant float was used as added ballyhoo.

For special newspaper attention, a screening plus laugh contest was held at Bellevue Hospital for juvenile patients. Prizes were given to children whose laughter was of the longest duration and greatest intensity. The laughter was measured by an acoustics machine. The newspapers were also aimed for a tiein with the Rockefeller Center Skating Rink, where an exhibition was put on by expert skaters in the original costumes from the picture.

Professional tumbling acts were also sent around town for another ballyhoo. Dressed in Arabian costume and carrying carpet which was lettered with picture title, the tumblers would roll out the carpet on busy intersections and do their stuff. This was followed by a parade of sandwich men each carrying a placard with one letter from the title to spell out the name, theatre and dates.

Special mailing of over 30,000 names was covered and all units of the public school system contacted with special literature and posters. In addition to the numerous top Fifth Avenue windows obtained, and previously reported, showings were promoted in chain florist shops, Broadway and Rockefeller Center stores. Special 15-minute radio broadcasts featuring Lowell Thomas were planted with local stations.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Bovim Hooks "Bitter Sweet" To Nelson Eddy Fan Club

A comprehensive tie-up with the local Nelson Eddy Fan Club provided one of the highlights of the "Bitter Sweet" campaign put over by Russell A. Bovim, Ohio Theatre, Columbus. The club furnished a choice mailing list and sent out heralds to its members. The organization's president and secretary were interviewed via several different radio programs. Members used the chain telephone stunt, reaching about 5,000.

Music from the picture was widely plugged over the air. The six-part pictorial strip was planted in the local Journal. The Sunday Dispatch theatre section devoted four columns to the tradepaper caricature of Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Sobottka's Kyser Hook-In

Herb Sobottka of the Paramount Theatre, Seattle, has used a seasonal greeting theme for excellent tie-in for Kay Kyser's "You'll Find Out." The hook-in was made with H. L. Green Co., which company, under a heading in color "Season's Greetings," publicized their piano school, records and songs on a music wrapper. On the reverse side of the piece was carried a list of song hit tunes from the Kyser mystery show and copy urging purchase of them at Green's. Five thousand units were distributed.

Soriero Stages Fur Fashion Show In Lobby, Mezzanine and On Stage

To give Los Angelenos a peek in advance of the 1941 fur fashions, Tom Soriero recently tied in one of the city's leading furriers for a reported $100,000 fur show at the United Artists, said to be one of the most elaborate held in that sector. Some 35 models took part in displaying new fur styles, the showings changed at each performance. All costs were assumed by the sponsor, including armed guards to protect the furs at the theatre. Police escort was provided in transporting furs from the store.

Show was started each evening at seven, models promenading in formation in the lobby and mezzanine until nine when they appeared on stage, as shown above. Master of ceremonies described each fur as mannequins stepped out to the orchestra lift. Furrier publicized showing through mailing list and during run, Soriero had the usherettes distribute heralds on the busiest downtown corners. Elaborate windows were obtained and publicity planted in the downtown and neighborhood papers.

"Strike Up the Band" Bows to Local Charity

Promotion for "Strike Up the Band" which opened recently at the Alabama, in Birmingham, consisted of tieup with the Auburn-Howard freshman football game, all proceeds going to local charity. Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland, stars in the picture, bought block of tickets to the show. Baton used by Mickey in the picture was presented to the drum major of the high school band winning the championship in a contest in connection with the game. In addition, the theatre furnished the booths, with appropriate advertising, from which tickets were sold in downtown stores for the charity game.

KIDS' ACTING SCHOOL CLICKS FOR GATES

As a twist away from the conventional dancing tiein, Arnold Gates has organized a juvenile acting school for Saturday morning tieins at Loew's Park, Cleveland. Classes are free to youngsters paying the regular kid admission, registrations being made in the lobby.

For advance, Gates covered grade schools with letters to grade school teachers and personal visits. Announcements were made by many of the teachers, as a result. Additional publicity was had from newspaper columnists and news stories.

Boyd Invites Patrons To Stay for Breakfast

A three-way tieup was arranged by Boyd Scott of the Strand in Uvalde, Texas, in connection with "He Stayed For Breakfast." Utilities company supplied a stove which was placed in front of theatre, grocer furnished ingredients and an attendant to make biscuits, and the theatreman distributed heralds informing folks that they could come and get it. Entire cost to Boyd was cost of paper napkins which were imprinted appropriately.

So impressed was Scott with the message contained in "A Plea for National Unity" which he played recently, that before each showing, the theatreman closed the curtain and made a special announcement regarding the film.

"PHILADELPHIA STORY" OPENED BY LOEWMEN

Exploitations in Rochester and Providence Highlight Dates With Smart Contest Coverage

Pre-release dates on "Philadelphia Story" which opened in a number of selected Loew spots on December 5th were given vigorous campaigns. The first to be reported here are those from Rochester and Providence, the highlights of which are detailed accordingly.

Comprehensive newspaper coverage in Rochester stressed the tiein by Les Pollock with the University of Rochester, wherein 12 campus leaders, girls and boys attended a private screening. The local Democrat-Chronicle co-operated on pictures of the students and feature story on what they thought of the present moral standards as stimulated by the theme of the picture. Editors of college papers were also invited to cover the screening from the collegiate angle. Interviews were also had with James Barrie, a local resident and brother of the author of the play, on his impressions of Katherine Hepburn in her performance in the play during the Rochester date as compared with her characterization in the picture. Pollock also dug up a feature slant for the Times Union which had to do with the city's commercial and cultural advantages in being selected for the pre-release date. Columnists also devoted space to comparisons of the Hepburn performance on stage and screen.

"Three No Crowd," Says Les

Contests were not neglected, the Loewman promoting a hundred-word newspaper tiein on the subject "Whom would you want Katherine Hepburn to choose, Cary Grant or Jimmy Stewart?", contest plugged with scene cuts and stories. Also based on the story was another stunt for the regular Saturday night late show and termed "Three's Not a Crowd Night." Trailer and newspaper copy invited local girls who had more than one boy friend to bring both of them to the special midnight showing. No concession in prices was made, Pollock depending upon the unusual slant to bring them in.

Merchants were tied in for a raft of generous size co-op ads featuring the stars and other members of the cast. The Loewman also notes tieup with Philadelphia cream cheese wherein delivery trucks were bannered and newspaper ads called attention to the socialite slant of the picture, hooking in the product as being accepted by all classes included those in the story.

Listed by Pollock for credits in the campaign were G. McGunnigle, assistant manager; A. Leonard, student assistant manager; L. Edwards, artist and J. Gilmore, MGM representative.

Providence Girl Gets "Day"

For publicity sharpening on the opening at Loew's State, in Providence, Ed McBride arranged a "Millionaire's Daughter for a Day" hookup, wherein sales girl from one of the department stores was outfitted completely by the store which took large newspaper ads to tiein with the premiere. It was then arranged that local boy resembling Carey Grant closest, escort the "daughter" to the theatre where both were interviewed in the lobby by WPRO.

Personal star stuff was had in a three-way phone hookup between Katherine Hepburn, local movie critic, and the Rochester papers, which through Pollock were also tied in. The local girl angle was used with Ruth Hussey, who appears in the picture, a former resident. Arrangements were set to have the star's parents interviewed at the opening and Miss Hussey herself to write to six former school chums inviting them to attend the premiere.

The part that Miss Hussey plays in the picture was also seized upon for a street stunt wherein two girl with cameras covered the downtown section taking crowd shots. Cards were distributed with copy to the effect: "Your picture has just been taken by the 'Philadelphia Story' photographer. Upon identification of your picture posted on the easel in Loew's State Theatre lobby you will be admitted" etc.

Collegians Tied to Date

Local colleges here were also tapped for extra space by inviting leading boy and girl students to review the picture for their college papers, answering definite questions having to do with the background and players. The students also participated in an open radio forum discussion on the picture. The college papers were further employed to handle the "How to Turn Down a Man" contest.

The chain telephone stunt tiein with the Rhode Island Women's Clubs was also used, the members phoning five others about the date and asking that the message be relayed to five others, etc. The premiere was planned along Hollywood lines with special invitations to the city's notables and broadcasts from the lobby, introductions, etc., being transcribed for rebroadcast the following day.

Cooperating with McBride on plans for the campaign were Charlie Kurtzman, division manager; Bert McKenzie, MGM exploiteer, and staff members, Vaughan O'Neil, Harold Mortin, Edward Wisewell and Al Longo.

COLLEGIANS COOPERATE ON UNIVERSITY SHOW

With a Missouri University stage show scheduled at the St. Louis Fox for a five-day run before Christmas, Les Kaufman, local Fanchon & Marco ad head, has enlisted the aid of the university's journalism school to exploit the attraction.

Two students, selected to work in St. Louis with Kaufman as publicists and exploiteers for the date, are being put on the payroll for the period. Same arrangement is made for coverage on the campus.

Klingler Campaign Greets 'Premiere'

Since "Hullabaloo" was announced as the first world premiere ever shown in Lewiston, Pa., Paul O. Klingler of the Rialto, where the picture opened with the assistance of Charlie Barron, MGM exploiteer, spread the news far and wide, especially in the newspapers which carried series of page one breaks and features of the unusual event. Papers in the trading area were also covered and numerous co-op ads promoted.

For outside ballyhoo, Klingler entered a special float in the annual Halloween parade sponsored by the Lions Club. This was followed by a steam caliope, all appropriately bannered and framed by a number of boys in costume parading alongside. At the theatre, the front was colorfully decorated with giant banner swung from roof to marquee featuring the word "premiere."

For the opening, Klingler promoted fire trucks for lobby lighting and the 60-piece high school band was on hand out front for special concert. Reserved section was set apart for invited guests comprising city's leading citizens. As they entered the theatre, each was invited to say something about the picture over the house p.a. system. Chrysanthemums were promoted for the ladies at the first performance and distributed by usherettes decorated with banners reading: "Leo bids you welcome."

The special lobby featured a battery of 40 by 60's, cutouts and added frames carrying production stills. Fashions, male and female, were stressed through elaborate tie-in windows and extra billing used throughout the drawing area as well as in the city.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Wide Coverage Gained By Boyle on "Bitter Sweet"

Highly effective was the "Bitter Sweet" campaign put over by Joe Boyle, assistant manager of Loew's, Syracuse. In conjunction with department store he arranged a Treasure Hunt contest, with the store using 10 mounted stills and distributing 5,000 contest blanks. Boyle also made a tie-up with a prominent florist whereby the latter furnished enough bitter sweet to attach to cards which were distributed throughout office buildings in the downtown section. In addition, the florist displayed a full window trim of bitter sweet as well as a 22 x 28 card crediting the theatre, cast and playdate. Two of the leading dining places sold "Bitter Sweet Cocktails." Bitter sweet candy tablets were distributed in hotels and restaurants. The local Post-Standard used a three-day coloring contest.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Robertson Queries Students

A tie-in between Manager Robertson of the State Theatre, State College, Pa., and The Daily Collegian, published by the students of the Pennsylvania State College, netted several columns of publicity for "Too Many Girls." First a letter was published in the Collegian alleging that there were too many girls at Penn State. Then additional letters followed and while the controversy waxed warm, along came the announcement of playdate backed by advertising copy.

DECEMBER "JUST ANOTHER MONTH", THEATREMEN SAY WITH CAMPAIGNS

Campaigns Already Set Provide Managers with Plans; Events to Cover Pre-Holiday Period

Among the plans submitted to bolster December grosses, Dick Wright, Ohio Warner district head announces annual charity shows in all the houses and from December 15 on, bookings will lean to action shows found to bring the best results in this period.

Wright also outlines arrangements for the eighth annual benefit shows put on by Managers Julius Lamm and Lou Milder at the Uptown and Variety theatres in Cleveland. The show will be held about a week before with the cooperation of local service club, which participates in box office and advance ticket sale. A table is set up in the lobby one week in advance of the benefit and patrons solicited to buy tickets.

The combination of stage and screen will be for one night with the Round Tablers promoting stage bands and talent from night clubs. There is to be no advance in admission. Heralds and window cards are used two weeks ahead and publicity carried in the papers which are set with stories. Promoted prizes are awarded to the members of the theatre staffs and the cooperating Club for greatest number of tickets sold individually.

Needy Families Aided

Returns from the sale of tickets are to be used to purchase baskets of food for needy families in the neighborhood, committee designating those to be aided. In this direction, newspapers and screen trailers request names and in addition, at the Uptown, the local fire department will aid in distributing gifts and food baskets.

Beside the charity show, Lamm and Milder have made a special tieup with the Wurlitzer Company of Cleveland through which both theatres get musical instruments to be given away two Saturdays before Christmas. Each theatre has a Santa Claus matinee for which prizes have been promoted.

Kal Kalberer Reports

Last moment reports on December activities from Kal Kalberer in Washington, Ind., detail a two day benefit project put on at the Indiana with the Band Boosters Club, the organization selling tickets on the outside and receiving 35 per cent of these sales. Featuring the performance was the local high school band of 80 pieces widely known in that area and appearing on the stage for two nights in full parade dress. Band presented a 40 minute concert. Outside billing included work of the high school art class which made up special window cards, free of charge.

For December 18 and 19, Kalberer has a kiddie revue set, wherein the first and second grade pupils will appear with a rhythm band of some 50 pieces, all in special red and white costumes. Performances will be held for two nights, in exchange for which the theatre has donated twenty-five dollars for the band fund. Publicity on this is comprehensive and the presentation will have a special set built by the theatre staff, with falling snow and other special effects.

MARTIN'S GIFT TICKET POSTER

For December 21 to 23 inclusive, the Round Tabler has arranged for a church boys' choir of 25 to sing Christmas carols from a special stage built over the marquee on the designated nights. Merchants are sponsoring the event and pay all costs, theatre cooperating with a free show for the youngsters. Extra business is being promoted from the members of the church.

Windup on the morning of the 24th includes a free show for underprivileged children in conjunction with the American Legion and one of the local papers. Kalberer writes that this annual affair is breaking page one consistently, everything being donated including pictures, time of the staff, advertising, etc.

Brown Ties to Community Drive

In the citywide parade that launches the Christmas season shopping in Circleville, Ohio, Manager Harry Brown, Jr., at the Chakeres Grand tied the theatre prominently for his coming toy matinee sponsored by the Firemen's Toy Fund. For this purpose, Brown was able to promote the use of bannered fire trucks for added publicity which, of course, was mentioned prominently in front-page stories.

Browns holiday campaign includes gift ticket books which are being sold all over the circuit for Chakeres houses. He also is staging a car giveaway sponsored by 15 local merchants in which coupons are being given for all purchases up to the time of the drawing. The prize car was used in the shopping parade appropriately bannered and carrying local beauties for extra attention.

From the Lakewood section of Cleveland, Johnny Newkirk of Loew's Granada reports his annual toy drive in conjunction with the local newspaper and fire department. Fire department has arranged to collect and distribute toys and food baskets for the underprivileged children. Also included are used toys which are repaired by the firefighters.

Tying up local merchants in Sharon, Pa., Manager Pat Notaro at the Columbia and John Schultz at the Liberty are working on a car giveaway for the week before Christmas. Cooperating merchants distribute coupons with each purchase of 25 cents and over, theatres giving them with each admission. Winner must be present in either house night of giveaway. The car is on display at the Columbia with appropriate data on the tieup, while trailers at each theatre and signs in the windows of each merchant plug the event.

Script Ticket Sale Stressed

At the Fox Granada, in Inglewood, Cal., Dave Martin is making much of tickets for Christmas gifts, called "Employees Xmas Club Goodwill Tickets" for "psychologically saleable reasons," writes the Round Tabler. The script-ticket idea is being pushed vigorously with various devices, and emphatically in the lobby through posters. Featured is a blowup of the gift ticket plus a cutout Santy in full color with lettering "Buy Now and Save." Another display, reproduced above, shows two of Martin's usherettes around an easel board, the "key" copy tied to a number of keys from the lost and found department. Aiding Dave and prominently, was his assistant, Bill Erickson, who carried through.

For his Christmas Day matinee, Ed May is working on a Christmas Doll Parade, for girls, 12 years or under, at Schine's New Paris, Paris, Ky. The event, to be held on the stage, will offer promoted gifts for the largest, smallest, most unusual, most original dolls, etc. The deal is set for the tiein with the local J. J. Newberry chain store, and May expects much of it.

Black's Fabian Talent Quest

Following up on last December's activities, which Ed Goth reports resulted in higher grosses than the month before, Harry Black's division of Staten Island Fabian theatremen are at it currently with a lineup of profit promotions topped by such giveaways as a promoted new Pontiac car, high cash awards and expensive merchandise.

Exploitations which already have clicked include the division's second annual Talent Quest wherein local entertainers competed in the preliminaries at different theatres, for representation in the finals on the stage of the St. George. Cash prizes were the big inducement. Another attractor put on last week was a "Mrs. Staten Island" contest to select the Island's most beautiful married woman.

Next week's program features a table tennis exhibition and tournament on the stage of the St. George. Through the local association, some of the national champions and other outstanding players will compete and since the game is widely popular in that sector, the event is expected to be an excellent gross builder.

"Have Drink on Me", Says McGinty, On Wheeler's Tieup with Brewery

Guests at night clubs and cafes in South Bend, Ind., for four nights were intrigued by a man dressed as "Great McGinty" who stopped at various tables dropping personal cards. Signed "McGinty", copy read: "Have a bottle of Drewry's on me; I'm not fooling" and on each of the cards were pasted a genuine dime and a genuine nickel. Reverse side carried theatre copy. When the guests realized that the money was legitimate, there was plenty of excitement, with calls for "McGinty" to supply more of the cards. In some of the spots, the visitor was introduced and the picture given a plug.

The tiein was a part of Roy Wheeler's campaign for the date at the Granada, the cooperating brewery paying for everything, including 500 of the cards. In addition, Roy promoted the use of a regulation voting booth for lobby display with "vote for" copy and tiein stills. Election headquarters, profusely bannered with "McGinty for Governor" copy, were established in a vacant downtown store. At night, red flares were lighted and heralds distributed. Calling cards were placed under every apartment door in town, and all kinds of "McGinty" drinks, hard and soft, advertised widely by leading emporiums.

Keeney Goes for Schools On "You'll Find Out" Date

C. G. Keeney of the Park Theatre, Reading, Pa., for his campaign on Kay Kyser's "You'll Find Out" used a trolley car ballyhoo. The car was placarded on both sides with 24-sheets and it made complete tours of the city and suburbs commencing a week in advance of playdate. Keeney also arranged for the distribution of bulletins which were given to passengers on buses and street cars. Twenty-five thousand were used.

The campaign in schools included a review and photographic reproductions in the Reading High School "Red and Black," the school bulletin with a circulation of 4,200, and announcements on bulletin boards. Announcements were also posted on Albright College bulletin boards and copy was carried in the football program for the Albright-Bucknell football game.

The radio announcements over Station WRAW consisted of six one-minute spots daily for five days preceding the opening and a one-minute announcement daily at 6:15 P. M., just after the news of the day broadcast. Window store tie-ups included Wittich, Richards, Zeswitz, Grant Store and McCrorys. There were displays of records and music from the production.

CHANGE HOLDER PLUGS "HOWARDS OF VIRGINIA"

For advance on "Howards of Virginia", at the Chakeres' State, Springfield, Ohio, Manager Oliver S. Nicklas used imprinted cellophane holders in which were placed new $1.00 bills. When a $5.00 bill was presented at the boxoffice, one of the holders was offered, together with balance of the change Copy read, "Don't spend this dollar. Save it to see," etc.

Worked two weeks ahead, Nicklas found patrons returning the holders with the dollars intact for admissions.

Girl Cow Milking Contest Goes Big for Cameron

Recently held by George Cameron at the Schine Strand, in Seneca Falls, N. Y. was his girl cow milking contest, which he reports as placing business well above average. Promoting use of stanchions, George nailed them to the stage floor and cows were lined up and secured thereto. Each of the bossies wore cards numbered from one to six and girls carrying cards with corresponding numbers milked the cow with corresponding numeral. After one minute, they shifted until they had milked each bovine, girl having the most weight was pronounced winner. Promoted prizes were available to each.

Member of the staff acted as master of ceremonies and was dressed with chin whiskers, toupe, overhauls, red handkerchief and knee boots. Stage was dressed for the occasion with hay stacks, etc, handy man outfitted as farm hand with pitch fork adding further atmosphere. Through tieup with local dairy, milk bar was planted in lobby at which free drinks were dispensed.

Silver Ties "Knute Rockne" To Theatre Anniversary

Celebrating the 23rd anniversary of the Strand, in Lowell, Mass., during the showing of "Knute Rockne," Nat Silver arranged for the distribution of imprinted megaphones at local games. For street bally two boys in football costume carrying banners tied to the anniversary celebration and picture covered main streets and schools. In advance of opening, Silver contacted several local football personalities who played college football for signed statements which were published in local sports page. Each day of the week was set aside for a different school, letters over the manager's signature having been written to heads of each, urging that students attend in a body on nights designated to their respective school.

Opening day the Junior Legion Drum Corps paraded to the theatre in full uniform with banners, photos were taken of the aggregation for the papers.

Among the comprehensive campaigns put behind reissue dates of Warners' "Here Comes the Navy" is the newspaper barrage by Howard Waugh for the engagement at Warners, Memphis, as illustrated by the four-column full here reproduced.

Door Knob Hanger Revamped by Laby

The reliable doorknob hanger stunt was given a different twist by George Laby on the occasion of a double-bill which coupled "No Time for Comedy" and "Haunted Honeymoon," at the Victory, Holyoke, Mass. On stiff white cardboard, size five inches wide by three and a half deep, the following copy had the folks talking;

"This Is No Time for Comedy, Do Not Disturb. We're On A 'Haunted Honeymoon.'"

Underneath, the names of the four stars in the two pictures were set down in script type and to make the eye-appeal stronger, Laby stapled thumb-nail face photo of Jimmy Stewart at the base. Theatre name was stamped on reverse side.

To make the hanger, the cards were punched at top and string inserted and the night before the entire service staff covered the town making hotel rooms, downtown offices, stores and homes. There were a few squawks, writes the Round Tabler, but in the main the reaction was favorable enough to fill the house within two hours after the opening.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Wide Newspaper Coverage Given to "Knute Rockne"

Starting practically five months ahead of opening of "Knute Rockne," Warner Cleveland ad man Manny Pearlstein and Manager Ed Miller at the Hipp, started planting art and publicity breaks. Three weeks ahead a special screening was given for the football coaches of local teams from which a wide word-of-mouth campaign was started. Serialization was planted and tiein with classified department brought a 600-line classified ad week ahead.

Department stores and radio shops were contacted for window displays in connection with a new portable machine, featured in all displays were stills of Pat O'Brien holding one of the new models. Contacting a local Notre Dame alumni member who was a personal friend of the great coach, large pictures of Knute and the Four Horsemen were promoted. This material along with a Notre Dame blanket were displayed in window of leading store together with a six-foot blowup of Rock.

Aiding in putting over the date was Dave Bachner, publicity representative for the Hippodrome.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Wilson's "Syracuse" Date

Street advertising on "Boys from Syracuse" as arranged by Keith Wilson at the Marks Theatre, in Oshawa, Ontario, consisted of two lads and lassies in Roman attire parading the streets ahead handing out calling cards with tiein copy. Special ballyhoo front was erected comprising cutouts of lithos and a number of production stills. Painted in bright, flashy colors with plenty of silver metallics on cutout letters the front attracted. Window coverage included music and record displays while two color newspaper ads were used to plug the attraction.

PAPER BAG CONTEST DRAWS FOR "SINNERS"

ACCORDING to Arnold Stoltz, there were "seven sinners" of history which the Utica, N. Y., Warnerman used on a paper bag contest for "Seven Sinners" at the Avon. The idea was hooked to one of the drug stores, this way: There were seven sets of imprinted bags, numbered from one to seven and used by the store to wrap packages. Copy for each set was different, and purchasers turning in the full set of "seven sinners" received the prizes, cosmetics for the women, shaving sets for the men.

Layout of all sets was the same and illustrated by the above on "Sinner No. 1." The closeup star shot was used throughout as was the line "you ain't seen nothin' 'til you see." Cartoon cuts at top were changed accordingly. Rest of the series starting with "No. 2," ran as follows:

"Lucretia Borgia . . . Claims fame because the Micky Finn bears her name.

"Helen of Troy . . . Loved her husband that Winter. . . . But it was Paris in the Spring.

"Madame du Barry . . . Was a dressmaker and How she could so and so.

"Marie Antoinette . . . The will of Louis XVI she could bend. But she lost her head in the end.

"Nero . . . Fiddled while Rome burned. Wasn't that a Duce of a thing to do.

"Hitler . . . Heiled, while Warsaw him start a blitzkrieg."

Mustache, Derby Still On the Job

Campaigns on "The Great Dictator" in the New England sector continue to lean profitably on the comic's costume and impersonators. In New Haven, for instance, Bob Russell at Loew's Poli had the ushers in derbies and mustaches the week ahead, following this with two others of the house staff in costume clowning around the Yale Bowl at one of the feature games. Another attractor proved to be talking dummy figure placed in front of the box office and on the main streets, dummy also was used on street bally. Newsboys and bootblacks gathered attention by wearing the bannered Chaplin hats. Russell's radio coverage was ample and publicity comprehensive, the latter sharpened by an editorial in the morning paper, a hard-to-get plant for theatre attractions in that situation.

For the second week move-over on the date at the Poli Elm Street, Manager J. N. Anstead picked up the campaign by arranging a parade of Liberty and Collier magazine delivery boys headed by American Legion Drum Corps. Hookup with Ford agency provided for bannered model "T" driven around town followed by one of the newest models. Anstead further spread the word by having drinks and sandwiches at leading spots named for the title and at popular drive-ins around town, promoted the girl waitresses to wear the bannered black derbies.

Ties Date to Hallowe'en

In Columbus, at the Broad, Joe Sloan hooked the date to the city's Hallowe'en Frolic by dropping imprinted holiday balloons to the crowds assembled for the community parade. Chaplin canes with imprinted pennants were also distributed among the merrymakers. Sloan's newspaper campaign was featured by editorials in three different papers.

Impersonators were also used by Joe Samartano in Meriden, Conn., at the Poli Palace and also in the community Hallowe'en parade in advance of the showing. Publicity here was pointed toward the theatre by offer of cash prize to the best amateur Chaplin impersonator in the parade.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

ASKS PATRONS VOTE ON REVIVAL DATES

Suggested by Pat McGee, district manager, Manager Frank Nolan is bringing back hit pictures to Schine's, Athena, Ohio, with what has been termed a "Proven Pictures" campaign, attractions booked with that in mind.

Patrons set down their choices on ballots distributed in lobby, the slips including space for names and addresses. When picture is booked, patron is informed a few days ahead. Campaign is being pushed in every way, with handbills and ballots distributed house-to-house.

FOUR MOTHERS (WB-FN)

Family Drama

Directed by William Keighley. Original screen play by Stephen Morehouse Avery. Suggested by the book, "Sister Act," by Fannie Hurst.

SYNOPSIS

Adam Lemp (Claude Rains) is in particularly high spirits when his family gathers about him for their reunion. There is his daughter Ann Dietz (Priscilla Lane), escorted by Felix (Jeffrey Lynn) "favorite boy friend" of the Lemp girl, and her tiny one-year old daughter Ellen. Emma (Gale Page) and her florist husband, Ernest Talbot (Dick Foran), arrive with adopted daughter Caroline, age 2.

Clint Forrest (Eddie Albert) young doctor husband of Kay Lemp, tells of his efforts to find the germ which is killing workmen at the plant where he is resident physician. Yet the star of this reunion is Ben Crowley (Frank McHugh), husband of Thea Lemp (Lola Lane). He's made a fortune with his Ocean Zephyrs real estate property, with the whole town buying lots and his family beaming at his success.

Amid the merry tranquility comes the devastating news that a hurricane has destroyed these same Ocean Zephyrs. Townspeople turn on Ben; even Adam feels Ben was responsible. But when the shareholders refuse to risk any more money, the family rallies around Ben in an effort to help him.

Then Adam loses his job as head of the Briarwood Music Foundation. Felix, Clint and Ernest plan sacrifices to save the day. Adam secretly arranges to raise cash by selling the old Lemp home. Felix takes a musical job in Chicago. Ernest abandons an "earthless flower pot" promotion scheme. Even Clint determines to give up his poorly-paid factory work to share his father's prosperous practice. This delights Kay who struggles to brave the poverty of the factory and Clint's neglect during his intense research.

The others carry through their projects, but at the last moment Clint finds it impossible. He suddenly discovers the cause of the factory disease and must stay to double-check his findings. More than she can stand, Kay leaves him and goes to Chicago. One lonely day she has a "date" with Felix. A carefree, breathless day ends in moonlight and embraces. Realizing their recklessness, they hastily leave each other and Kay rushes back to Clint.

After Adam sells the Lemp property, he moves to a small New York apartment, taking his faithful housekeeper, Aunt Etta (May Robson) along with him. Later he is invited to conduct at the International Beethoven Festival, one of the great honors of the musical world.

The success of this concert seems to revive the good fortune usually attached to the Lemps. Ben redeems himself, buys the old Lemp house and moves it to an even choicer location. The story ends with another family reunion—and a hint that Kay is to become the fourth mother in the Lemp family.

furs, but they manage to save a good deal of them and take ship to England. There Edward hopes to seek pardon from King Charles and organize a fur trading company.

Barbara is overjoyed to see him back, but tries to dissuade him from returning to Canada. The King forgives him when he hears of the wealth to be gained in furs.

Because Barbara's brother Gerald (Morton Lowry) is a drunken wastrel she insists that Edward take him with them on their next trip to Hudson's Bay.

At the fort, which is their jumping off place into the wilds, Gerald rebels against going further with them and elects to remain in the fort. Word soon comes to the three trappers that Gerald has been feeding liquor to the Indians and many are on the warpath.

Radisson, Gooseberry and Edward return in haste to the fort and find that a major Indian war is imminent. Having had a taste of liquor and promised more if they bring in furs, Gerald has incited them to kill each other to get furs. Radisson has Gerald shot to prevent war.

When the adventurers return to London and Barbara finds out that they had shot her brother she demands that they be hung for murder. They are arrested, but when King Charles learns all of the circumstances and particularly that his new fur business will be no good without these three men he sets them free. Barbara and Edward are reconciliated through the efforts of Nell Gwyn.

MARKET NOTES:

NEW DISPLAY GLASS

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made by Wagner Sign Service, Chicago, of the development for the exclusive use of this manufacturer of attraction advertising equipment, of a new type of flash opal glass. It is pointed out that the best flashed glass came from Europe and is not now procurable from that source. The Wagner attraction board panels will henceforth be of translucent opal glass (rather than opaque glass) flashed onto a clear crystal glass as developed in this country.

With translucent glass flashed onto crystal glass about 40 thousandths of an inch thick, it should be possible, the announcement points out, to reduce silhouette letter attraction board wattage without sacrificing brightness and clarity. These panels have been made available only to users of Wagner changeable letters.

CARPET CLEANER SALES

A LICENSING agreement has been completed between Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Company and the Von Schrader Manufacturing Company of Racine Wisconsin covering the manufacture and sale of Dri-Sorb-Ene carpet cleaner. The cleaner is intended particularly for use with hard-twist fabrics and for elimination of shrinkage, and was developed by the Bigelow-Sanford Company. Under the terms of the agreement, the Von Schrader Company will become manufacturers and sole selling agents for the compound.

EQUIPMENT BULLETINS

A SERIES of new bulletins describing projection and sound apparatus have been published by S.O.S. Cinema Supply Corporation of New York. The company's theatre amplifiers incorporating inverse feedback and their multi-cell horn systems are described in two of these bulletins. Others list Simplex replacement parts, Powers replacement parts, and describe the publisher's 16mm sound-on-film projectors.

NEW FLUORESCENT LAMPS

THREE NEW types of fluorescent lamps have been placed on the market by the General Electric lamp department at Nela Park, Cleveland. One adds a 5-foot length to the line of fluorescent lamps for general lighting (and as used today in many theatres). This is a 100-watt lamp.

Of the other two, one type provides a fluorescent lamp giving a white light of a particularly "soft" quality, and is highly suited to theatre interiors. It has been made available in 15, 20, 30 and 40-watt sizes, and in lengths of 18, 24, 36 and 48-inches. T-8 bulbs are used in the 15 and 30-watt lamps, and the T-12 type in the 20 and 40-watt units.

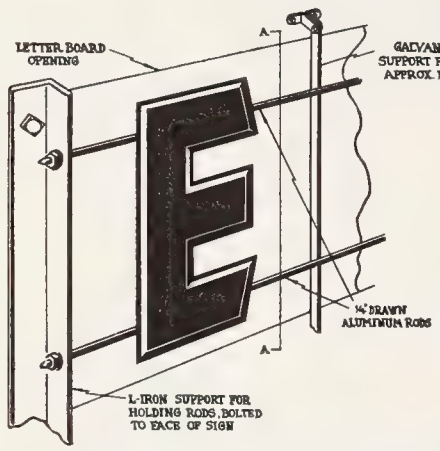
The third new lamp, which has no specific application to the theatre, is of "pencil" size, 9 inches long, utilizing a T-5 6-watt round bulb.

PLASTICS CATALOG

A NEW richly illustrated catalog dealing with plastic architectural and decorative materials has been issued by the Formica Insulation Company of Cincinnati. Color schemes and patterns of available materials are shown in full color and the various types of materials are described. Three pages are devoted to constructional details, showing methods of applying materials of this kind to walls, doors and furnishings.

The advantages and limitations of each type of material with reference to color possibilities, transparency, permanence of coloring in the different materials on exposure, and other pertinent information is treated at some length. Included are full-color illustrations of Realwoods in ten different natural grains.

GENERAL REGISTER EXPANDS



GENERAL Register Corporation will quadruple existing production facilities of their ticket machine factory in Brooklyn. Equipment formerly produced in England will also be made in the enlarged plant, according to an announcement by Bruce Johnson, president of the company.

SOUNDHEAD REFINEMENT

REDUCTION of lateral weaving of the film at the point of sound scanning, even under unfavorable operating conditions produced by presence of lint, dirt or film-coating material, is the object of a refinement which the Ballantyne Company of Omaha have recently incorporated in their theatre soundhead. The new device consists of a yoke with an accurate end play adjustment operating on the lateral guide roller. The roller is solid, rather than of the split variety which can be forced apart by dirt and may then permit film weave, and is further unusual in that it is provided with a felt surface.

TICKET MACHINE IMPROVED

IMPROVEMENTS have been added to the ticket dispenser manufactured by the GoldE Company of Chicago. All moving parts, including the nozzles through which tickets issue, are now precision-machined as further assurance of jam-proof operation under any circumstances. Spring clips transmit the proper ticket count to the cashier at all times.

Preparing Another Advance in the Art

THE MOTION picture now appears to be about ready to take another long and resolute stride ahead as a medium of entertainment. Disney's "Fantasia" has already brought a specialized expression of certain Hollywood goings-on during the past year or so. Warner Brothers have quickly followed with "Vitasound," which is more representative of Hollywood's aims. And there are other schemes similarly conceived for the important purpose of making the sound elements of motion pictures more flexible, more sensitive, more convincing dramatically and musically, to a degree likely to prove substantially stimulating to the box office.

Elsewhere in this issue (page 30) the trends in this technical throught are described. All contemplate use of multiple channels operated by a control track, a couple would introduce two sound tracks so as to achieve, at last in a practicable commercial way, the directional or "stereophonic" effect that the film's technical and creative workers have envisioned for a long time.

▶Whatever the method or methods ultimately adopted, the theatre operator is justified in expecting, first, sufficient print standardization, and second, convenient enough adaptation of existing equipment to make the improvement readily available to the public everywhere. Equipment on the market for a number of years readily lends itself to any really necessary modification of pickup provisions; the rest would consist in the addition of two more amplification and horn systems. Any modern sound system installed today would form an integral part, the very nucleus, of the system indicated for the new style of prints.

Another reassuring aspect of the development is found in the adaptability of product already made to either the single-track (like "Vitasound") or the two-track ("stereophonic") print. Musical recordings in general have separated vocal and orchestral elements for quite some time, while dialogue could be readily assigned to either of two tracks, as desired directionally at any point in the action. When one considers the great effectiveness of the three-channel method in getting the sound "off the screen" —"across the footlights," as stage folk say of parallel matters—the notion occurs to one that it might warrant dusting off many a film musical of the past.

Altogether, the discussion of these trends appearing elsewhere in this issue, presents material that points to another significant advance in the art. Radio has improved, is attracting new interest with frequency modulation . . . television still insists that it will be around—sometime. But the arts of the Theatre belong in the theatre, psychologically, technically. The motion picture has achieved voice, more natural color; and anyone who has seen all this happen finds it difficult to deny absolutely the possibility of a genuine effect of pictorial depth in a commercially practicable manner. The business follows its technical advances—and there's an important one now in preparation.

Dealer Group Headway

The latest attempt of independent theatre supply dealers to form a permanent organization for the protection of territorial rights in certain makes of equipment, concerted action in dealing with manufacturers, and so on, is gaining support among dealers not originally connected with the movement. This is reported by H. W Graham of Graham Brothers, Denver, who says that since the October meeting in Chicago, at which the Theatre Equipment Dealers Protective Association was formed, many inquiries concerning membership have been received. Mr. Graham is the principal officer of the new organization.

Dealers thus far admitted to membership (in addition to Graham Brothers), with their executive heads, are:

McArthur Theatre Equipment Company, Detroit—George McArthur; Exhibitors Theatre Supply Company, St. Louis—Ray Colvin; Southwestern Theatre Equipment, Houston, Tex.—A. Mortensen; Walter Preddy Company, San Francisco—Walter Preddy; Queen Feature Service, Birmingham—Miss Vivian Harwell; Guercio & Barthel, Chicago—Jim Guercio; Joe Hornstein, Inc., New York—Joe Hornstein; J. P. Filbert Theatre Supply Company, Los Angeles—J. P. Filbert; Oklahoma City Theatre Supply, Oklahoma City—J. Eldon Peek; the B. F. Shearer Company of Seattle, Portland, Los Angeles and San Francisco, headed by B. F. Shearer.

Others are Joe Goldberg, Chicago; Ray Smith Theatre Supply, Milwaukee; Western Theatre Supply, Omaha, headed by F. A. Van Husan; Louisiana Motion Picture Supply—W. H. Castay; Ger-Bar, Inc., Indianapolis—B. F. Hopkins; Western Theatrical Equipment, San Francisco—C. B. Paden; Capitol Theatre Supply Company, Boston—K. R. Douglas; Service Theatre Supply Company, Salt Lake City—Hazen & Thornburg; Superior Motion Picture Supply, Pittsburgh—A. F. Morrone; Missouri Theatre Supply Kansas City (also headed by J. Eldon Peek); United Projector & Film Company, Buffalo—G. W. Linden; and the Des Moines Theatre Supply, Des Moines, Ia., operated by A. E. Theile.

"The equipment dealers," Mr. Graham comments in a letter to BETTER THEATRES, "have many problems not evident to those not directly connected with the theatre supply business. The dealers are confronted from time to time with the problem of possible encroachment on their business. The membership of our organization does a large volume of business annually and has an investment running into a huge sum. Many manufacturers have indicated that they are in favor of such an organization."

Robot Revenue

One of the latest additions to the technology of automatic vending works as follows: You put a nickel in the slot, you hear a sizzling, a knife slits a bun, and out comes a hot-dog nestling inside a roll, seasoned and wrapped in paper napkin. All you have to do is eat it!

This may be another item for the motion picture theatre, wherein the vending of refreshments, solid and liquid, is becoming quite a business. Once theatre operators, by and large, frowned on such intrusions; for one thing, many said, they were messy, made a maintenance problem, and the revenue wasn't enough to warrant the bother. But it is different today, increasingly so, and more and more exhibitors are buying vending equipment outright to run this end of their business themselves instead of through a concession company on a percentage basis.

The public, too, has changed its attitude toward ware sold by means of machines. Automatic venders once tended to be associated with questionable quality—they were, ignominously, "slot machines." But automatic venders have been adopted in recent years for the dispensing of all sorts of advertised goods—leading brands of cigarettes, advertised candy bars, the famed cola drinks, and even razor blades, handkerchiefs, collars—and what have you? About 15% of the sales of popular-brand cigarettes are by automatic machines.

▶Fox-Intermountain Theatres have just begun their own operation of confectionery merchandising. Fox West Coast operates about 60% themselves, lease out 40%. Warner, RKO and Loew's so far work on the lease-percentage basis, but Paramount and some of its partners (the Balaban & Katz group in Chicago and Illinois, for example) took over this end of their business some time ago.

Wintertime Air-Conditioning

THE THEATRE'S NEED OF IT . . . AND ITS COST

By J. T. KNIGHT, JR.

THE MOTION picture theatre business involves the presentation of entertainment under the most favorable conditions possible so as to return the greatest financial profit. There are some who have spent many years in the business who might take exception to the brief frankness of the above statement, but down deep, underlying the whole gigantic structure, is that foundation.

It was not so many years ago, within the memory of many of us old-timers, that a large percentage of neighborhood and outlying theatres closed their doors with the schools in June and reopened about a week before school reopened. The carrying charges on such properties continued, which meant that during the winter months the theatre carried a double burden.

Then summer air-conditioning came along, and some pioneer exhibitors had the courage to risk large investments in equipment to fight the summer shut-down evil. Air-conditioning won. With the increased use of summer air-conditioning the cost of installation has been remarkably reduced. And now, in the light of the many summertime competing attractions, it is hard to see how the motion picture theare could ever have survived the summertime slump without air-conditioning.

It is still true that people want good pictures and real entertainment values for their money; air-conditioning alone won't satisfy them. But each year, with more and more theatres being air-conditioned for the warm months, we are educating people to be discriminating in respect to the condition of the air they breathe and that surrounds them during other seasons of the year. Consequently we now face the complete problem of air-conditioning, throughout the twelve months of the year.

To date the theatre men of the country do not give the same care and attention to the condition of the air in their theatres in winter as they do in the summer. Basically this is because a failure in the summer cooling system will, within the hour, bring complaints—and complaints indicate a possible loss of income. People are just now becoming aware of winter conditions and therefore are not yet so quick to complain.

Outside of the larger cities the theatres have less outside competition in the winter than in summer, consequently the people have less choice as to where they will spend their time. This condition will not remain long; bowling, athletic meets, stage dramas and musicals, private parties, organizational functions, boxing, wrestling and soft-ball are taking a greater share of the recreational allotment of time and money.

Winter air-conditioning will definitely contribute to greater comfort in any theatre. And if the theatre already has summer air-conditioning, the additional equipment necessary for the control of inside winter conditions does not involve a very great outlay of money. It is hard to understand how a theatre already equipped for conditioning during the warm months can afford not to equip for year-around conditions. In many cases, theatres without any air-conditioning can very economically equip for the winter conditioning of air.

What We Are After In Winter Air-Conditioning

Before going into the details of winter air-conditioning it is perhaps wise to review some of the basic human facts about air-conditioning. Humidity, moisture vapor in the air, and the control of it represents the prime problem in winter air-conditioning, just as it does in the summertime. The air in most of our homes, our theatres, stores, hotels and other places is very much over-heated and "under-moistured" in winter. Many investigations have been made which have indicated that the average wintertime inside relative humidity is about 20% while outside it is probably 60%. Twenty percent relative humidity is about as dry as the Sahara desert, whereas the 60% relative humidity is the moisture of the sea coast!

During winter months a man or woman leaves his or her home and visits stores, offices, hotels or theatres—and literally dozens of times during each day is whisked from the dryness of the dessert to the moisture of the Gulf Coast States. It is definitely believed by many medical authorities that this condition influences in great measure the prevalence of respiratory diseases during the winter months. It is very possible for people in a theatre heated to 78° Fahrenheit to be uncomfortably chilly, particularly so if there is no appreciable air motion, if the air is excessively dry; while there have been instances when theatre audiences have been perfectly comfortable when the temperature was 67° F., or 68° F., with 45% relative humidity.

There is however a critical point in the relationship between the wet-bulb (humidity) and the dry bulb (temperature) below which the dry atmosphere gives us a sense of greater warmth than humid air gives us. Many of us have experienced the wholesome feeling of the dry cold of the north, and also the penetrating uncomfortable damp cold of the Gulf Coast States, so there appears to be a limit to which we may go in adding humidity to the air in winter. Practical experience establishes this limit at about 45% relative humidity.

Besides the physiological effect above described, there is another condition which limits the amount of moisture to 45% relative humidity. In some instances, when more humidity was added to the air, sweating has taken place on the walls and frosting has appeared on the entrance doors. This is of course objectionable.

The clothing of the human being has much to do with winter air-conditioning of theatres. The human body, in order to withstand the lower temperatures of winter, must be provided with "heavier clothing." By heavier clothing we really mean clothing of greater insulating value, clothing which resists the passage of heat from the body to the atmosphere, clothing with a low coefficient of heat transfer. Not so many years ago people, both male and female, dressed in winter in much heavier clothing than we do today. Today most of us prefer to wear the greater portion of the extra clothing protection in the form of a coat, topcoat or overcoat, which we remove upon coming indoors. Women especially rely upon a coat almost exclusively for the extra winter warmth. This gradual discarding of the warmer "intimate" garments is one of the contributing reasons for greater attention given to winter air-conditioning.

Winter Air Control

Even so, scientific research indicates that human beings are more comfortable in generally colder conditions in the winter time than they could or would tolerate during the summertime. This fact may be attributed to either the clothing or the food (or both) that is consumed, which reacts upon the composition of the blood.

The relation between summer and winter conditions is confirmed by referring to an Effective Temp-Air-Ture Indicator by Bailey-Parsons. That chart indicates the most satisfactory winter condition as 70° Effective Temperature, while the most satisfactory summer condition is almost 76° Effective. The entire range of the winter

THE PIX THEATRE, ROCK HILL, S. C.

A Modern Neighborhood House With Functional Design Features

• Describing (including a four-page pictorial insert beginning on the opposite page) a playhouse planned to apply results of more recent studies in the functional basis of motion picture theatre architecture

THE NEW PIX theatre in Rock Hill, S. C., owned and operated by Robert E. Bryant, is located on a broad thoroughfare developing as a new business district in a residential area. With a population of about 15,000, Rock Hill is the seat of Winthrop College, a girls' school, which is located a short distance from the theatre. Also, there are large finishing and printing plants for cotton goods nearby. There are three theatres in the main business section; of these Mr. Bryant operates one, the Capitol.

The Pix theatre, designed by Ben Schlanger, New York theatre architect, is of complete fireproof construction. The structure is of skeleton steel with terra cotta block curtain walls having a cement finish on the exterior. All floor construction is of reinforced concrete. The roof consists of U. S. Gypsum "Gypsteel" plank, Celotex insulation board, and gravel roofing. The air space below the roof has at the bottom of it a Barrett Company rock wool insulation resting on the furred ceiling. The entire theatre, including land and equipment, cost approximately $75,000.

¶ THE FRONT

The front of the theatre is faced with blue cast stone blocks of a square ribbed pattern and a cream-colored stucco framework. The front, up to the marquee level and over the entire width of the lobby, is of clear glass. The doors are of the Pittsburgh "Herculite" glass type; the remainder, of clear plate glass, is set in straight and curved sections protected by steel members. Adjoining the lobby front is a large plate glass display window entered from the inside of the theatre. This display offers a flexible medium for advertising.

The marquee was made long and low rather than short and high to give scale and more prominence, as well as directional force, to the rest of the facade. The name sign has a corrugated metal face and is trimmed with yellow neon tubing. Blue neon tubing is used as a border at the bottom of Wagner silhouette changeable letters. The changeable letter light box is fitted with fluorescent tubes behind white opal glass. The marquee soffit has built-in reflector lights shining onto the sidewalk, the lamps used being of silvered type. The display window is lighted with fluorescent lamps, concealed all around.

¶ THE LOBBY

The lobby is completely enclosed behind the glass front. The ticket office is built-in behind an open counter on the wall opposite the glass front.

Entrance from the lobby to the theatre is so arranged as to avoid daylight spills into the auditorium. The three inner walls of the lobby are covered with Formica Realwood and mirrors. The doors to the foyer or promenade area are natural grained hardwood, flush type.

The Realwood is natural zebra wood protected by Formica finish. Satin bronze mouldings are used between the mirrors, base and ceiling. The entire floor of the lobby is of a buff tile in a variegated pattern.

Illumination of the lobby is by a continuous border of filament tubular lamps of a sidebase type allowing placement of lamps in line with socket interruption around the entire plastered ceiling. The lamps have a strength of 40 watts per foot.

All doors checks are of a type built into the top of the door, instead of the usual projecting type. The space entered from the lobby is a large L-shaped arrangement which serves as a foyer, passage to the auditorium, entry to the toilet rooms, and lounge space.

¶ LOUNGE AREAS

The lounge end of this area is uninterrupted by traffic lines and terminates with large window of Pittsburgh-Corning glass blocks. This entire area is covered with Bigelow-Sanford "Gropoint" weave broadloom in blue, while the plaster walls are painted old rose. The lounge furniture is fully upholstered, covered with a mohair similar to that used on the chairs in the auditorium. The lounge area is entirely illuminated by table and floor lamps, but the aisle passages and foyer area are lighted by a multiple system of small metal cones built flush into the ceiling. These cones each contain a 15-Watt lamp placed high enough so that it cannot be seen.

The women's lounge room is finished in hard plaster, painted in an old rose color. One entire wall, starting at a built-in cosmetic table, is covered with a mirror, at the top of which is located a continuous filament tubular lamp of the type used in the lobby. The floor is carpeted the same as the foyer and auditorium aisles—in blue "Gropoint" broadloom. Small upholstered seats are used at the cosmetic table.

¶ THE AUDITORIUM

The architectural form of the auditorium consists of numerous flat curves and slightly angular surfaces, designs primarily to provide for acoustical and lighting factors in the presentation of motion pictures. A decorative effect is obtained through architectural lines and directional forces of the forms employed. The aim of the designer here has been to effect the aesthetic quality by means of beauty of texture and basic form, to omit conspicuous decoration in order to provide a restful and neutral setting for the picture.

Film dumbwaiter built into the side of the Pix theatre adjoining front for delivery of reels to projection room without carrying them through theatre.

The auditorium walls and ceiling surfaces are made up partially of hard smooth plaster, partly of Keasbey & Mattison hard corrugated asbestos boards. The uniform corrugations appear to be like the folds of drapery, lending a feeling of softness to the surface. About 50% of the surfaces are of the corrugated asbestos board. The boards are fireproof and present an extremely tough surface capable of standing for more abuse than plastering can.

¶ ACOUSTICAL DESIGN

The walls and ceiling of the auditorium are especially shaped to diffuse sound reflections and to maintain the desired amount of liveness without excessive reverberation. Also, the cubic foot volume is so proportioned in relation to the seating that sound is controlled entirely through design. As previously pointed out, the corrugated asbestos board having a hard surface finish is used for both the control of light reflections and the control of sound.

This board is used for the construction of convexly curved walls at the front of the auditorium, for the forward ceiling splays, and for the high wainscot area along the side walls. In all of these locations the hard corrugated surface of the board acts to disperse high-frequency reflctions and thus helps to maintain brilliance and naturalness without distorting the reproduced sound.

The non-corrugated areas along the upper side walls consist of a series of especially designed back tilts which minimize cross-reflections and, it is important to note, also contribute to sound dispersion in the auditorium. The balcony rear wall surface, subject to direct sound incidence, is reduced in area by sloping the ceiling at the rear. The remaining area of the rear wall is designed with inward tilts of varying

TUBULAR LAMPS

—a new, more flexible lighting tool for the theatre

To light both lobby and auditorium of the interesting new Pix theatre, described in this issue, TUBULAR LAMPS were chosen—because they are highly efficient—provide attractive exposed light sources—fit any curve or angle. TUBULAR LAMPS require no transformers, no auxiliaries. Low surface brightness eliminates glare. They can be operated on dimmer circuits. Architectural tubes can be included in a modest appropriation.

PLANNING SERVICE

¶ Better Theatres is glad to answer the questions of exhibitors theatre planning.

¶ Better Theatres' Service Department annually deals with hundreds of inquiries from readers regarding planning problems, equipment and furnishings, operating methods and finance, maintenance, etc.

¶ This is strictly a service to readers for which there is no charge. Architects, however, sometimes make inquiry, or submit plans for criticism, without naming the client; and, when the architect is not a subscriber, it is requested that his client be named.

¶ In order that questions may be dealt with effectively, they should be specific, and all conditions bearing upon them should be clearly given. Often a rough sketch, with dimensions plainly indicated, is of help.

¶ It is of course to be understood that this service is in no way intended to supplant that of a theatre architect. Better Theatres cannot supply working plans, design sketches, etc., which must be procured from a licensed architect.

¶ Although Better Theatres' Service Department has leading specialists regularly available for consultation when and as an inquiry may advise this, all inquiries are answered by this department and should be addressed to it, as follows:

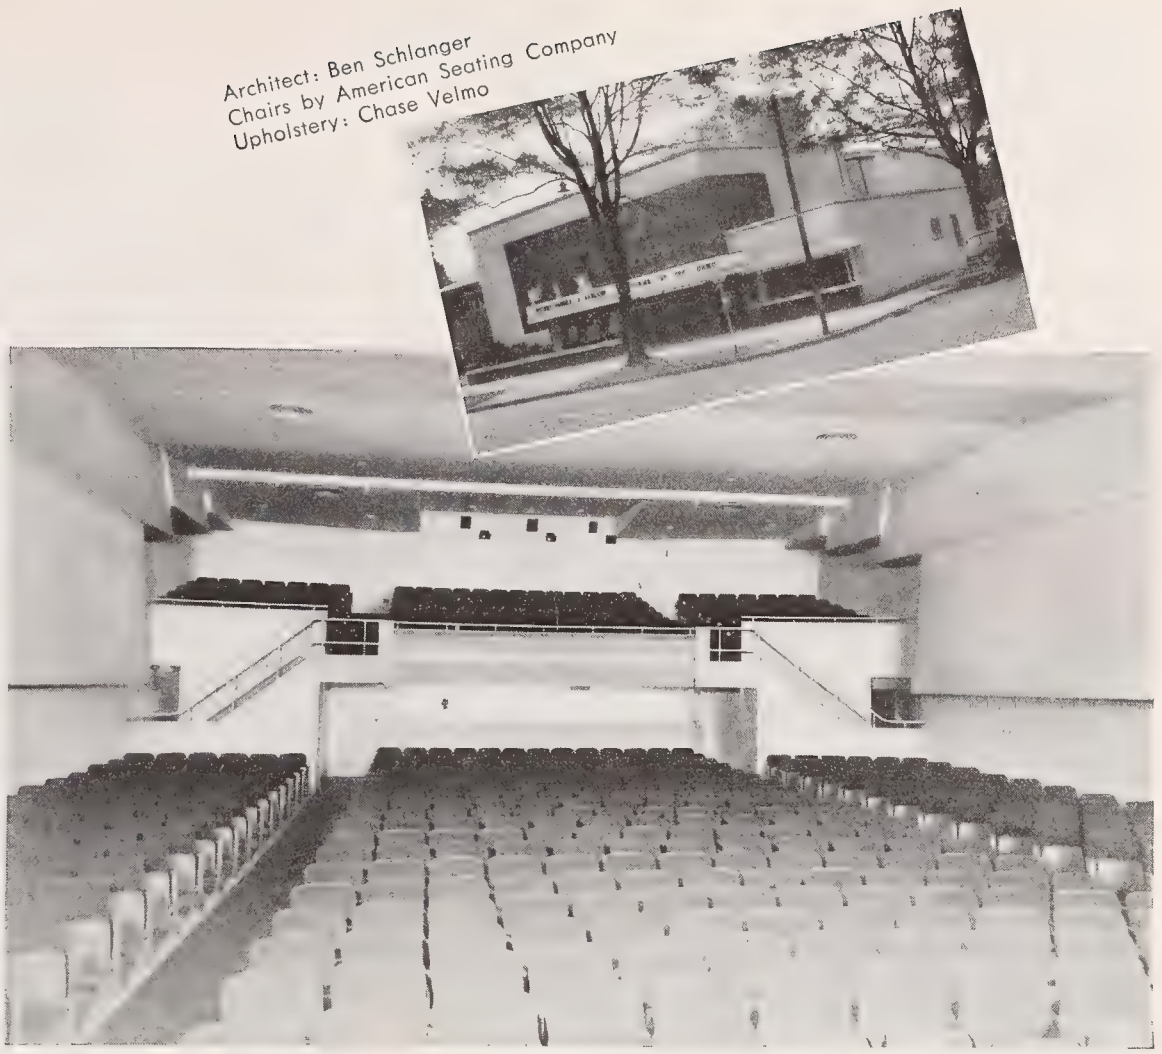
degrees, which scatter the oncoming sound waves in such a way that they may be absorbed quickly in the extreme rear sections of the seating area.

The balcony fascia, and the lower wall areas adjoining the stairways leading to the balcony, are also designed as corrugated and irregular surfaces to scatter sound reflections.

Altogether, the acoustical design is aimed at supporting the sound, rather than to absorb or destroy any part that would contribute to full quality and naturalness.

¶ AUDITORIUM LIGHTING



The entire auditorium is finished in a warm gray color of varying shades to contrast the blue mohair seat coverings and the blue carpet. The lighting of the auditorium is entirely by three continuous lines of filament tubular lamps. One line about 20 feet long is incorporated in the facia of the balcony, and the other two lines, each 12 feet long, flank the screen platform either side, over exit arches at a distance of approximately 20 feet from the screen. These lamps are turned on only when the picture is not being projected. Lighting during the picture projection period is achieved by small wattage lamps sunk into the ceiling of the balcony and main areas and at the balcony stairways.

The tubular lamp lighting is controlled by a Ward-Leonard motor-driven "Autrostat" dimmer operated in the projection room, with button switches placed near the projectors. These tubular lamps, of the same type noted in the lobby, are exposed to view, since the surface brightness is very low, there is no strain in looking directly at them, and greatest efficiency in lumen output is thereby achieved.

The corrugated asbestos board was also used because of the advantages gained in obtaining suitable projection period lighting of the auditorium. In using a corrugated surface, the architect explains, it becomes possible to employ comparatively light colors in the finish. Rereflected light from the screen, it is pointed out, becomes a useful means of projection period lighting instead of an objectionable annoyance to the viewers eyes, as would be the case if light finished walls of ordinary surface texture were used.

The curved formation, according to the method applied, of the corrugated surface provides reflection in multiple-planes which control light directions so that the light rays from them fall upon the top of the head or sides of the face of the viewer, rather than into the eyes. Thus, what would otherwise be annoying light becomes useful light for traffic and sense of safety during the projection period. The corrugations themselves are adjusted to certain planes, and are fixed at relative angles to the screen so as to make effective use of the screen light for running auditorium illumination.

The auditorium seats 725, with about 150 in the balcony. Rows are spaced 37 inches back-to-back. The chairs, of American "Bodiform" type, have backs covered with Chase ribbed mohair, deep blue in color, while the seats are covered with simulated leather, laid over U. S. Royalfoam latex cushions. Metal finish of the chairs is in a warm gray color.

General view of the Pix theatre projection room, equipped with Brenkert projectors. Strong intermediate high-intensity lamps, Goldberg reels, Golde rewinder, Neumade film cabinets, and Best port shutters. The sound system is RCA Photophone.

The floor slope is of a combination downward and upward pitch, with a very slight gradient either way (see longitudinal section on page 14; also see floor plan on page 11, for screen-row distances and seating area dimensions).

Standee walls and low stairway walls are finished in wood and metal with linoleum covering.

Green light is used behind all exit signs, instead of red, as proposed by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

PROJECTION; AIR SUPPLY

The projection room is 11 feet deep by 22 feet wide, with additional spaces for generator, and toilet and lockers. The walls and ceiling are finished in acoustical plaster. The screen image is about 17 feet wide, and the angle of projection is extremely small due to the relatively flat design of the main floor and low balcony pitches.

Equipment includes two Brenkert projectors equipped with Strong intermediate high-intensity lamps supplied by Hertner motor-generators. The sound system is RCA Photophone. Shutter equipment is by Best Devices; in case of fire in the projection room, ¼-inch steel drop plates held in channels and normally above the port openings, drop into position covering the port openings. These two channels, which support the drop plates are of formed steel, welded to 10-gauge back plates (no screws or fusible metals are used in the construction of these shutters).

Provisions for complete air-conditioning were incorporated in the design of the theatre, with downward distribution of air by Tuttle & Bailey "Aerofuse" diffusers. Space for fan and heating equipment (as well as that for compressors yet to be installed) is under small store area located at the outer corner of the building.

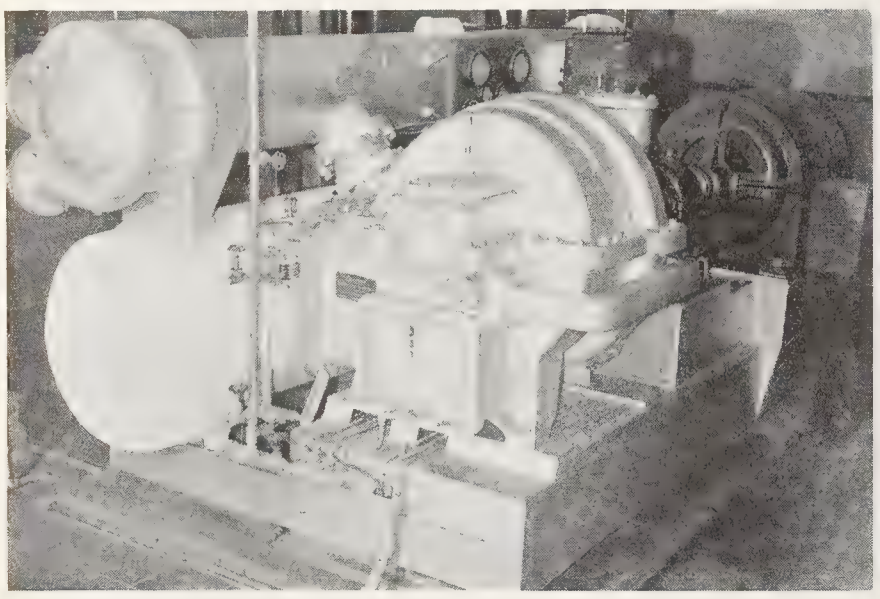
A Two-Theatre System Served By a Single Refrigeration Plant

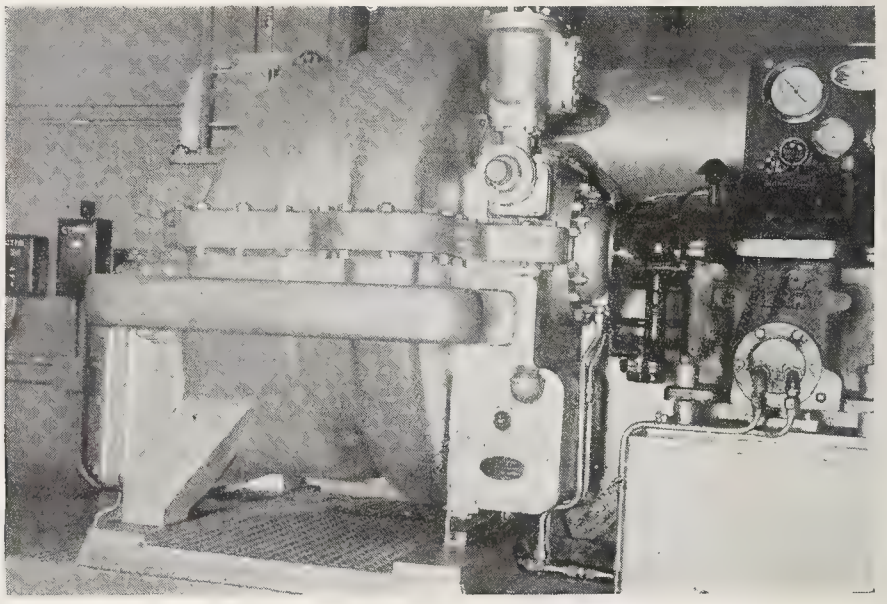
• The Riviera and Riverside theatres on upper Broadway, New York, adjoin each other and have a common owner. Here is the way each was successfully air-conditioned with cooling by the same equipment

By ROBERT HAMBURGER

WHEN TWO theatres are located in close proximity to each other, and either are owned by the same interests, or their owners could work out a satisfactory arrangement for joint operation of the system, a dual air-conditioning plant can be designed so as to effect substantial saving in cost. An excellent example is afforded by the air-conditioning of two New York City theatres operated by the Skouras circuit. With cooling supplied by a single refrigeration plant, these two systems were effectively and economically operated throughout the past summer.



These theatres are located on the west side of Broadway between 96th and 97th Street, each seating approximately 1,700 and separated by an open court 20 feet wide. The Riverside is the southernly one with its side on 96th Street, and its standee space is separated from the Broadway building line by a three-story building some 50 feet deep. The Riviera Theatre, with its north side on 97th Street, is also separated from Broadway by an office building seven stories high, but not as deep as that adjoining the Riverside. The roof of the Riviera theatre is at the height of the seven-story office building.



The total available refrigeration load for the two theatres combined is 200 tons. Arrangements had to contemplate, however, the possibility of one theatre being filled to capacity while the other was almost empty, so two separate assemblies are used.

It was difficult to find an advantageous location for the air conditioning assemblies, each of which consists of a large single inlet, single-width fan with two-speed motor, three six-row Aerofin continuous tube cooling coils, two Aerofin non-freeze heating coils, and filters. It was decided to use the space of the 20-foot court separating the two theatres, and a new fireproof enclosure about 20x20 foot in plan, by about 12 feet high, was built across the court, the floor and roof being of steel I-beams bearing on the existing theatre side walls on either side of the court, and the floor and roof slabs being 4-inch cinder-concrete arches reinforced with wire fabric.

Cooling Equipment

For refrigeration, a 200-ton Carrier centrifugal machine was selected. The space chosen for it is in a vacant basement room directly under the Riviera lobby. To rig the machine into place it was necessary to cut a hole about 6x8 feet in the lobby floor and lower the machine through it. This was accomplished, however, in a single night.

Condenser water requirements are taken care of by circulating 642 gallons of water per minute by a 20-horsepower pump through 6-inch pipe to a mechanical draft cooling tower located at the roof level of the Riverside theatre, approximately over the projection room and supported on steel beams spanning from the rear wall of the Riverside to the west wall of the three-story office building. These two walls are separated by an open court 12 feet wide.

Chilled water is circulated from the water cooler in the basement refrigeration room, to the two sets of chilled-water air cooling coils located in the rear court enclosure through 6-inch pipe mains. The quantity is 590 gallons per minute, and the chilled water pump is 15 horsepower. The main pipe branches into two 4-inch pipes, one to each system, having a separate automatic temperature control valve to vary the amount of chilled water passing through each system, with control by return air thermostats.

Each theatre has a system of tunnels under the orchestra floor, a balcony with space between the underside of the balcony slab and the orchestra hung ceiling below, and a hung ceiling above with a dome in the center. Steel balcony trusses and roof trusses allow ducts to be run between their lower and upper chords, and between their vertical and diagonal members.

Distribution Systems

The air distributing systems are similar for each theatre. From the discharge side of each supply fan in the new fan enclosure over the court, the supply duct runs upward outdoors in the court and divides into two branches, one of which pierces the theatre side wall above the main auditorium ceiling into the attic space; and the other pierces the theatre side wall so as to enter the theatre in the space below the balcony floor slab, but above the orchestra ceiling.

Branches are run to supply the lobbies, toilet rooms, projection room, foyers and basement lounges. The air distribution in general is overhead in the orchestra and balcony seating spaces, while in the case of the lobbies, etc., sidewall supply grilles are used.

The Riverside had been renovated some years previously and a well laid out series of circular plaster plaques installed at the time in the main auditorium ceiling and the balcony ceiling. These were utilized in the case of this theatre.

The Riviera, on the other hand, had no previous provisions for air distribution, so holes were cut in the suspended ceilings and Anemostat aspirating diffusers were installed.

Outside air is introduced into the system through louvres in the wall of the new fan enclosure. Each system has two outside air dampers—one for minimum outside air requirements, equipped with an automatic damper which opens when its fan is started and closes when the fan is stopped; and an auxiliary damper which can be manually opened at the judgment of the maintenance engineer, so that on cool spring, fall, or summer days, or warm winter days, the amount of fresh air may be increased up to the entire fan capacity. Thus comfort may be maintained without operating the refrigeration machine whenever outside conditions are such that the internal heat load may be offset by circulating a large quantity of outside air.

Return Air Arrangement

Return air is taken back to the coil assembly intakes through two groups of floor grilles in each system. These floor grilles are placed under the seats and are so designed that women's narrow heels will not catch in them. The type of seats existing in the theatres prevented the use of the familiar mushroom type of return air inlet in that the seats swing very close to the floor.

One group of grilles was placed in the orchestra floor above a series of tunnels which were existing, and the other group of grilles was placed in the balcony floor so as to allow air to be drawn through them into the space below the balcony floor and above the orchestra ceiling. This space was used as a plenum, and a return duct piercing the theatre side wall draws air back from this space. Another return duct pierces the theatre foundation wall to the tunnel system under the orchestra floor and draws air out of the tunnels. These two return ducts join in the court, and the combined duct enters the fan enclosure at the intake filter chamber.

WINTER AIR-CONDITIONING

comfort zone is from 64° Effective, to 76° Effective, while the summer zone is from a low of 70° Effective to a high of 87° Effective. With all this preamble we now come to the real formula for winter air-conditioning:

1. Temperature—A temperature range between 68° F. and 72° F. is the accepted proper temperature for theatre interiors during the winter season.

2. Humidity—Relative humidities between 40% and 50% are most acceptable during this season.

3. Air Movement—An air movement of 25 to 35 linear feet per minute is most satisfactory, producing adequate circulation of air without creating drafts which are of course particularly objectionable to most people during the winter.

4. Vventilating Air—Not less than 3 cubic feet of air per occupant should be provided each minute.

5. Air Cleanliness—All the air should be filtered—this means total air, both fresh air and recirculated.

Winter Air Impurities

Because air cleanliness is perhaps more important in winter than in summer, it is well to elaborate slightly on this subject. Air is no more impure in winter than in summer—by this I mean it carries no more dangerous impurities than in the summertime. In winter the air is heavy, it stays closer to the ground and is not so readily blown away and dissipated by prevailing winds, therefore there is very likely to be a greater concentration of dirt in it in winter, especially because so much more smoke from the burning of coal and oil is released into it.

The amount and the nature of foreign material, such as dust, smoke, fumes, gases and disease-producing organisms in the air breathed, determine its degree of purity. In cities the number of particles per cubic foot of air may be counted in the millions. Dust carries and spreads bacteria which may cause many respiratory diseases. A very large proportion of this foreign matter may be removed from the air by mechanical filters, some of it will also be removed by an air washer. From the standpoint of health, air in theatres should be filtered. Even though the dust in the air does not carry germs, the dust is deposited in the theatre on walls, floor, draperies and furniture, and such accumulations not only add to cleaning and maintenance costs, but definitely contribute to the problems of odors in the theatre.

Of the five above mentioned considerations in winter air-conditioning, four may require some change or re-arrangement of the average theatre system, if they are to be considered—namely, humidity regulation, air movement, ventilating air, and air cleaning.

Estimating the Cost of Winter Air-Conditioning

The humidity control involves a city water connection somewhere in front of the fan intake, a pipe with several atomizing sprays, a solenoid valve in the water line (which valve is to operate from a humidistat to be located in the return air or recirculated air duct) and finally, a drip pan to catch any excess moisture from the humidifying sprays. Generally, this installation can be made for about $250, in even a large theatre.

In regard to air movement, which tends to give uniform temperature results throughout the theatre, this is widely possible with the equipment in a theatre. To accompany this satisfactorily, some adjustment of the fan speeds will probably be required, because it is not usually necessary to handle as much air in the winter as in the summer. This may involve one pulley for either the motor or the fan, and a new belt or belts. This regulation of the amount of total air can be accompanied for about $65.

Ventilating air is air from the outside. If the existing air intake is large, it can be masked down to a smaller size. Or better still, mask the opening down to a size, say, 2x3 feet and install in this opening a hand-adjusted louvre, then the amount of fresh air can be regulated at any time by visiting the chamber and making an adjustment of the louvre. Such an alteration should not cost more than $75.

Air cleaning necessitates filters. The mechanical type of throw-a-way filters come in a 20x20-inch size. Each filter is capable of filtering 500 cubic feet of air per minute, therefore 10,000 cubic feet of air would require twenty filter sections. Filters cost from 65 cents to 75 cents, the racks to hold the filters cost $1.75 to $2.25 per sections installed, thus a filter section of sufficient size to filter 10,000 cubic feet of air would cost from $48 to $60.

Totalling all of these four items up, assuming that the theatre has a source of heat, and not including any item for installing indirect heating coils, we have the following:

For humidity control	$250.00
For modification of the fan	65.00
For ventilating air	75.00
For filters	60.00
Total	$450.00

Thus we see that most theatres could have very satisfactory winter air-conditioning for an expenditure of $500.

The Manager's Vital Interest In Modern Lighting Practice

He need not know the art—but should know his needs

GOOD LIGHTING is not just a passing fancy. There is practically no one who will disagree with the assertion that after adequate lighting is obtained, additional lighting can be done to create effects and to dramatize design in mass, form, shades and shadows and line. Lighting, thus, must be considered as a device of the architect, engineer, or designer to convey the usefulness of the building, be it theatre or hotel or office building.

As the functional aspect of lighting is a responsibility of the architect, engineer or designer, it should be left in his hand to use, and it should be considered as part of the building. Lighting should not be considered as a part of the fixture, furniture or equipment budget, to be selected an installed by or at the discretion of a purchasing agent. As difficult as it may be for the theatre man to visualize or accept that lighting is a structural element, this point of view must finally prevail if we expect to profit most from design.

Lighting Makes Sales

Lighting is one of the newer materials which has been put at the disposal of the architect, the engineer and the theatre manager to work with. Lighting has definitely established itself in the merchandising field as a sales incentive. Lighting can even create an emotional appeal. Lighting can be used to tie design and motive together and produce a unified effect.

Lighting might easily be divided into three categories, such as functional lighting, design or emotional lighting, and technical process or mechanisms of lighting.

Functional lighting embraces all of the lighting required by local codes, laws or ordinances, plus sufficient lighting to maintain a predetermined light level at given points, such as on steppings or on poster displays. This type of lighting can be done by rule and plain common sense. Remember, good lighting is comfortable lighting, and in laying out functional lighting, this principle should be kept in mind constantly. This means, to the theatre manager, that quick adjustments of the eye are uncomfortable; that passing from a brilliant foyer into an almost dark auditorium is uncomfortable; and that spotlights to illuminate posters or decorations may and can be too bright in relation to the surroundings. Even the flashlights of ushers may be too strong for comfort. Highlights that are too brilliant, bright spots from exit lights, and an uncontrolled ray of light through a curtain become uncomfortable and distracting, therefore not good lighting. So, to sum up, functional lighting must be comfortable lighting.

Lighting for Emotional Effect

Design or "emotional" lighting may be identified in this way: Where there is little light, or the wrong kind, design in form or mass or color cannot be properly seen. Any light will make a form or surface visible, but the color of the light, combined with the location of the light source, make a world of difference in what we see. With careful use of light, the architect or designer can control, to a very large extent, not only what we see but what impression we get from what we see. In brief, he can control the composition of his design and thereby influence the atmosphere of the theatre. This type of lighting cannot be well done without much study, it generally cannot be done by the layman, it usually must be planned by the designer and worked out by the technician.

The technical processes, equipment and mechanisms are and must be left to the engineer to select and use to bring about the results visualized by the architect or the designer. The result of proper technical application should be the control of utility and color and distribution, plus the regulation of any movement if that is incorporated.

Few theatre managers are competent to create or regulate the latter two classifications of lighting, yet these two classifications of lighting are very definitely theatrical and a part of our business. With some study and at least the knowledge of the obstacles that confront us in this lighting, we can be better prepared to judge good "emotional" lighting and to decide its place and value in any particular operation.

Knowledge of Lighting Tools

So much in the way of new lights and lighting equipment is being developed today and brought to the attention of theatre managers, that it is of little wonder that some of them are confused by it all. This condition imposes considerable difficulty in the mind of many towards new forms of lighting; however, with the application of some ingenuity, the newer fixtures and light sources can and will find increasing application to the theatres of this country.

A competent knowledge of lighting tools and the factors in good lighting practice can be acquired only through experience and some experimenting with equipment. Every care should be taken to be very critical of results because it is only by carefully noting results that an intelligent appraisal can be made of a certain type of fixture, let us say, and its location in relation to the area, object or space to be illuminated. With this aim in mind, every theatre manager should give some time to the study of lighting, lighting of the kinds and purposes which so importantly affect the success of his business.

Unglazed, louvered light boxes are combined with concealed neon tubing to illuminate the auditorium of the Times theatre, recently opened in Morris, Ill., by Anderson Theatres. Finished entirely in Celotex, the auditorium has a suspended ceiling panel with edges concealing blue and red neon, the blue used for running illumination, the red combining with it, forming magenta, during intermissions. Each light box is 2 feet square, is equipped with diffusing louver, and contains one 300-watt silver-bowled lamp. Incidentally, a novel feature of the Times is upholstering of the Kroehler push-back chairs in rose velours in the center bank, and in turquoise velour at sides.

These columns are regular features of Better Theatres dealing with methods by which the theatre may be planned as efficiently as possible for the exhibition of motion pictures. Both Mr. Schlanger and Mr. Potwin are consultants to Better Theatres. All inquiries concerning planning should be addressed to Better Theatres Service Department.

RATING OF MATERIALS

TO CONTINUE the discussion of the sound absorption characteristics of acoustical materials, the writer wishes again to emphasize the importance of studying the coefficients at all frequencies, instead of judging the efficiency of a material on the basis of a single value.

The noise reduction coefficient of a material, a value standardized by the Acoustical Materials Associations for sound quieting should not be misinterpreted by exhibitors or architects as a value which is in any way related to the acoutical correction of the theatre auditorium.

Noise Reduction Rating

The noise reduction coefficient represents the net average value of the coefficients of absorption at four frequencies, namely, 256, 512, 1,024, and 2,048 cycles per second. This average value is not comprehensive enough to indicate whether or not the material is a suitable one for auditorium correction, any more than would be the value at only 512. If the noise reduction coefficient is .80, for example, it may be that the coefficients which produce this high net average are in the upper range of frequencies—that is, between 512 and 2,048 c.p.s.

The coefficient at 256 cycles is the only low-frequency value which affects the average. The value at 128 cycles, which is so important from the standpoint of auditorium correction, is not included in establishing the noise reduction coefficient. Therefore, under no conditions should the noise reduction coefficient be used as a basis for planning for sound control in the auditorium.

Auditorium Requirements

In planning treatment for the auditorium it is necessary to determine as a first consideration the amount of sound absorption needed on various surfaces. Unless the theatre is especially shaped for sound control, it is usually found that a high coefficient material, with a value lying between .70 and .85 at 512 cycles per second, is required on the rear wall; and that a material with a lower absorption value van be used on the side walls.

A practical way to make sure that the material will provide sufficient absorption at the low frequencies is to select it on the basis that the coefficient at 128 cycles is between two-fifths and one-half of the coefficient at 512 cycles per second.

Acoustical Value of Cinder or Slag Block

THEATRE architects and exhibitors are often impressed with the characteristics of certain building units formed of cinders or slag, which absorb sound by virtue of their natural porous surface. The factor of economy is particularly attractive, because this type of material serves both as a construction unit and acoustical treatment. A frequent question regarding these blocks is, "Does the natural porous surface of the block provide suitable sound absorption for the motion picture theatre, and, if so, how may this material best be employed?"

Any material which depends primarily upon its porosity and internal cellular structure for the absorption of sound invariably has its greatest effect in the frequency range above 256 cycles per second.

Effect of Cubic Volume

From experience with the use of this type of material it appears that in theatres where the cubic foot volume is well proportioned in relation to the seating capacity, advantage can be taken of its porous surface.

On the other hand, if the cubic foot volume is excessive, it has been found in some cases where this type of material has been used, that there is a tendency toward "boominess" in the theatre. This would indicate a lack of the necessary absorption of sound in the lower range of frequencies.

In very few cases does the natural surface of this type of material provide sufficient sound absorption for the rear wall. It is usually found that a material having higher coefficients through the entire frequency range is required.

Where Blocks May Be Effective

Under normal conditions of theatre design—that is, where the cubic foot volume is moderate in relation to the seating, and the seats are of an efficient absorptive type—it is the writer's opinion that the porous surface of these blocks can be relied upon to provide an acceptable amount of absorption along the side walls provided a more efficient material is used on the rear wall, which also has high absorption values at the low frequencies.—C. C. P.

ARRANGING SEATING IN A STAGGER PLAN

STAGGER SEATING has been installed to date in the centre bank of seats either by using an extra-wide chair to fill in the gap left by the omission of one chair in every other row, or by leaving this gap. Further research had proved that in cases where the center bank holds ten or more chairs across, it is possible to maintain an even unbroken aisle line without resorting to the oversized seat.

This is an important development because the extra-wide chair is not desirable, for two reasons. First, it is not particularly good in appearance when placed next to comparatively narrow chairs; and secondly, many patrons would be annoyed by having to sit with a stranger when the theatre is crowded.

Varied Width Method

A uniform aisle line can be obtained by developing a mixture of chair widths, the difference varying no more than 2 inches in width. However, this mixture must be so dispersed as to guarantee unobstructed vision from every angle of view subtended from all chair locations. Therefore, the seating plan must be developed showing a study of every chair location. This type of planning involves considerably more time and more careful arranging of the seating, but the results are worthwhile.

It is not possible to develop a standard plan for this purpose because of the variation of aisle arrangements and seating plan shape characteristics. The size of the projected screen image also affects the arrangement. Incidentally, this method overcomes the objections raised by some city or state authorities in regard to seating plans, insofar as the indentation in the aisle line may be considered a hazard.

How Rows are Evened

According to such an arrangement there would still be one seat less in every other row in the center bank. For example, chairs 20 inches wide would be used in one row, while in the next row a mixture of 20's, 21's and 22's, properly dispersed, would fill out the complete bank width.

Careful stagger planning takes into account the anatomy of the human head and shoulders. The latest report of the subcommittee on theatre design of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, deals with the above consideration of seating arrangements, and endorses the use of staggered seating to improve viewing conditions.

It is important in each instance where the exhibitor decides to purchase new chairs for his auditorium, to determine if the existing floor slope is proper and sufficient for insuring unobstructed viewing of the picture. If the floor slope is not proper, as is the case in many of the older theatres, it would be of great importance to install the new chairs in accordance with a proper stagger system. Such a change in arrangement would in most all cases result in very favorable viewing conditions.

New Plan for New Seating

If the jagged aisle line heretofore mentioned is to be avoided, the new seating arrangment should not be arranged with an aisle placed on the center line of the auditorium and screen. The layout should include a center bank of seats with at least twelve seats placed across the width of this bank.

It is not necessary to stagger the seats in a certain number of the rows nearest the screen because the amount of stagger does not leave sufficient space between the heads of the preceding spectators to permit a view of the entire picture from those rows. Since only a nominal floor slope is necessary under those seats to achieve unobstructed vision, the seats in this area can be arranged on a non-stagger plan.

Balcony Rearrangement

Although obstructed vision of the picture is more common in the main floor seating there are many instances where upper levels of seating are not pitched sufficiently for full clearances of vision. Here again it would be advantageous to reseat according to a correct stagger system. It is advisable that all seating plans for proposed reseating or new seating, which incorporate the stagger system, should be checked for every seat location to insure proper angle and space separation between the heads immediately preceding each viewer. Otherwise one cannot be sure of an arrangement which represents a genuine gain in visual conditions, but instead, a scheme which, while producing some improvement, does not realize the full benefits possible with a stagger system.

The ability to improve vision conditions greatly without going to the expense of rebuilding floor pitches should be an inventive to exhibitors to reseat their chairs according to a new studied arrangement where the chairs are in good condition; and in instances, where the chairs are beginning to show signs of ending their usefulness, reseating with a new plan of seating developed for the new chairs assures a remarkable improvement in the appeal of a theatre.

—that's what a seat upholstered in CAVALON* can stand!

IN the Du Pont laboratories at Fairfield, Conn., where CAVALON is made, there's a mechanical impact testing machine called the "Seat Tester." This machine, illustrated at the right, exerts a downward force of two hundred pounds on a stationary cushion upholstered in CAVALON over 100,000 times without a break! This, in itself, is dynamic proof of the amazing durability of CAVALON heavy-duty upholstery fabric.

CAVALON is made by a special "case-hardening" process. It resists edgewear, cracking, peeling and flexing. Its good-looking colors are washable and highly resistant to crocking, bleeding and fading. No wonder theatre owners the country over are so enthusiastic about CAVALON! It will pay you, too, when re-upholstering old seats or buying new equipment to specify CAVALON. Preparation for a New Advance in Motion Picture Sound

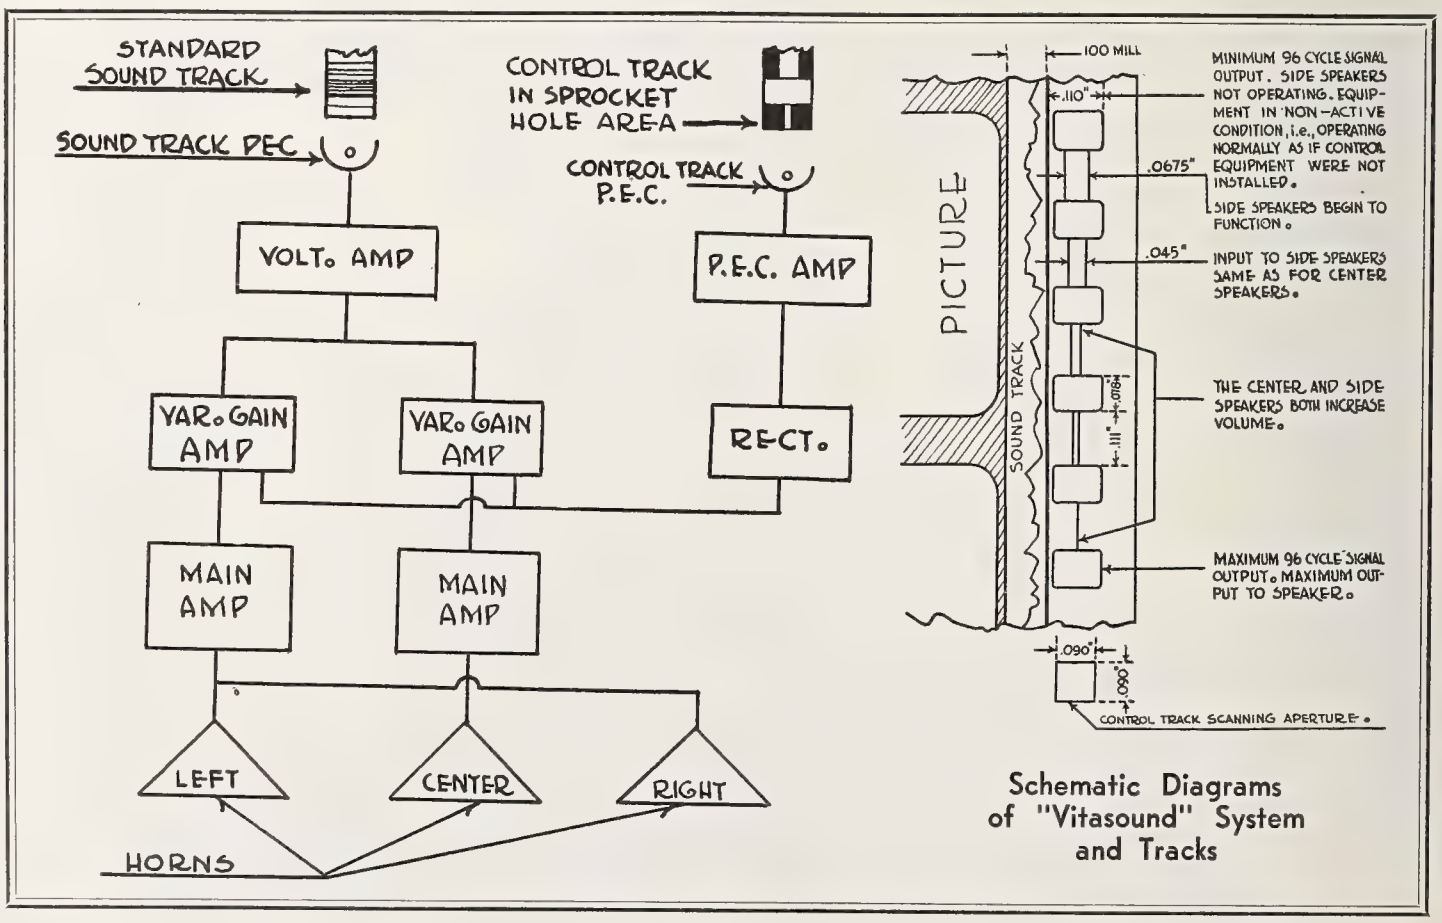
• "Fantasia" was a forerunner, "Vitasound" is the beginning of a technical movement to give sound greater entertainment value. Here is a summary of the trend



THE PUBLIC presentation of "Fantasound" at New York's Broadway theatre in November, while interesting enough in itself as a technical achievement, was also a harbinger of things to come. Warners Brothers have since announced "Vitasound," with early inaugurals in both New York and Hollywood on their schedule. And there are others essentially ready, awaiting corporate decisions in particular, and perhaps industry opinion in general, with the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences offering anxious counsel to the end that the need of standardization be not lost sight of.

The Disney-RCA "Fantasound" may be regarded as a bit too specialized for consideration in the light of general industrial purposes. "Vitasound," however, definitely is representative of the current aim to give the motion picture more flexible, more dramatically convincing sound. "Vitasound" employs a control track, but only one sound track, and they are on the same film with the image. Others under consideration similarly have both sound control and sound pickup from the picture print, but use two sound tracks. These latter, as we shall see in a moment, provide "stereophonic" sound. Like these, "Vitasound" has horn systems, one at either side of center speakers, but in the Warner method all speakers of course get their signals from a single track, whereas in the two-track systems, the recording on one track may be associated with one side of the image, that of the other track with the opposite side.

Warners' "Vitasound"

"Vitasound" is the simplest of the group. It uses only two amplifying channels, although with three speaker systems. In a theatre which at present has regular and emergency full-power amplifiers and three sets of speakers backstage, conversion to Vitasound operation would be comparatively simple. The existing soundheads would be modified for Vitasound reproduction (they would retain their capacity to play ordinary tracks in the ordinary way). The existing amplifier channels would be modified for variable gain operation, which would not involve sacrifice of their ability to function in the usual manner; and a control panel for handling the variable-gain control currents would be installed. That, and some changes in wiring to the amplifiers and the speakers, is all that would be required.

In the case of existing systems having but one full-power channel, and less than three complete sets of speakers backstage, it would be necessary to add a second channel, and a suitable number of additional speakers.

Vitasound is recorded on an ordinary track, exactly like any other sound. Additionally, however, the film carries a second track for control purposes, which is placed in the line of the sprocket holes, and carries a simple controlling signal for actuation of the variable-gain features of the amplifiers.

How Control Track Operates

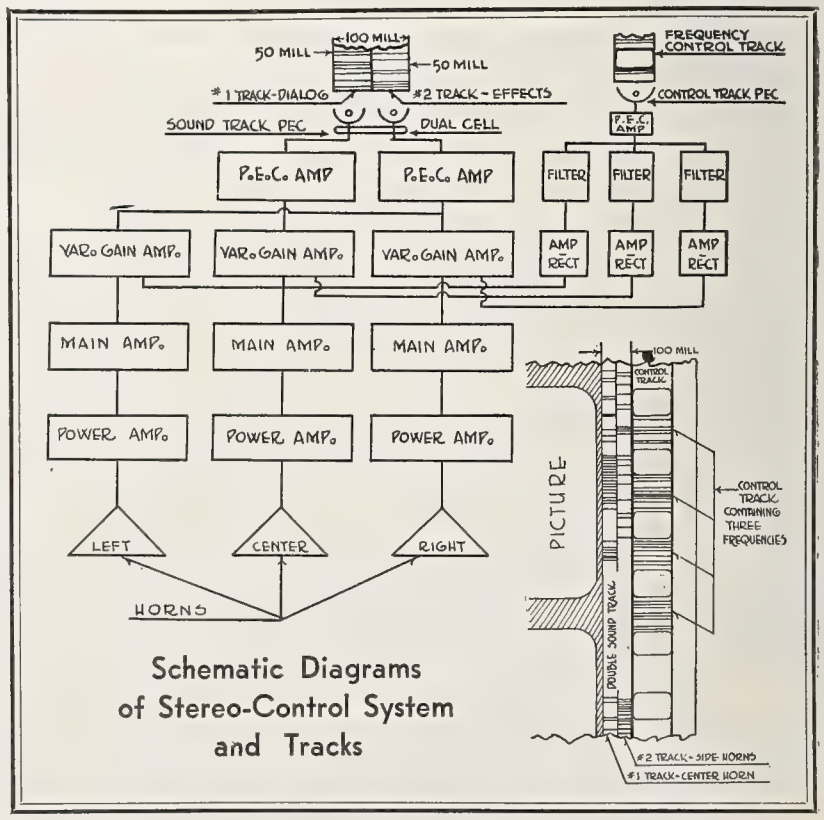
The special track works in this way: When the area between the sprocket holes is entirely opaque, the special, second photocell is illuminated only when a sprocket hole passes through the special exciting light. Since there are four sprocket holes per frame, and 24 frames per second, a 96-cycle signal results. This signal is of maximum intensity when the area between the sprocket holes is entirely opaque. When the signal track permits some transparency between sprocket holes, the 96-cycle intensity is reduced, and when the region between the sprocket holes is entirely clear, the signal strength is brought to its minimum.

This signal, amplified and converted to d.c., is applied equally to both variable-gain amplifiers, but the variable-gain circuits in those amplifiers are adjusted differently and do not respond in the same way to the same control signal. One amplifier supplies the central bank of speakers, the other both of the side banks (there are, as said, only two amplifiers for three banks of speakers). The difference in the setting of their variable-gain circuits is so arranged that when the control signal is at minimum the central speakers play normally and the side speakers do not play at all.

Actuation of Side Speakers

As the control signal strength increases the side speakers begin to function, and at about medium strength of the control signal, they are playing at the same volume as the central speakers. Further increase in control signal strength (still more opacity between sprocket holes) adds amplification to both sets of amplifiers, which are then producing louder sound than they would normally give for the same soundtrack. At a maximum control signal strength (complete opacity between sprocket holes) the automatic volume control of both amplifiers has been pushed up as far as it will go and the system is at maximum volume.

What "Vitasound" Contributes



Being of what may be called a "tri-sonic" type, this system cannot produce a stereophonic effect. It incorporates the advantages of increased volume range, freed from previous limitations of on-film recording. It spreads the source of sound across the whole proscenium opening, or narrows it to the center of the screen, as required, all by means of automatic control. An illusion of true orchestral placement of instruments is produced, not as completely as with more elaborate arrangements, but nevertheless an illusion strong enough to be strikingly and to music lovers most pleasantly noticeable.

The sound acquires a very marked increase in depth and "presence." The side speakers can be used to produce a background of off-screen sound, and to some extent to tie in the audible source of sound with the pictorial source in the action on the screen.

Two-Track "Stereophonic"

An intermediate system incorporating some of the advantages of both those previously described, has been identified as "stereo-control" sound. This arrangement also carries a special control track on the ordinary film. In addition, its splits the ordinary sound track, which occupies the usual area, into two narrower tracks, playing into a dual photocell. (The control track, in the sprocket hole region has its own photocell.) This arrangement also calls for modification of existing soundheads, not for special heads separate from the projector assembly.

The signal control track, placed between sprocket holes, differs from that previously described. It does not utilize the 96-cycle modulation produced by the sprocket holes themselves, but consists of three control frequencies of variable-density recording photographed on the areas between sprocket holes. The 96-cycle sprocket-hole modulation is understood to be electrically separated from these control frequencies by filter networks, but the full details of this portion of the system are not as yet available. The two soundtracks, each half of the normal width, are placed side by side; each carries its own signal group.

One of these tracks is amplified by the single channel which supplies the central bank of speakers, the output from the other is equally divided between two additional channels which supply the right and left speaker banks. Each of the three channels includes a variable-gain amplifier, the amplification being controlled by one of three control frequencies on the special track.

Advantages of "Stereophonic" Method

The results from this system approach those that can be obtained from the full stereophonic set-up. The control frequencies can silence any of the three banks of speakers; hence the sound from the second soundtrack can be made to originate at either side of the proscenium or to swing back and forth across the proscenium opening. However, the two side banks cannot be made to emit different sounds simultaneously. The system in short, does not have the full flexibility of the elaborate "Fantasound" setup, but it gives all the results of "trisonic" sound and in addition approaches the results of stereophonic reproduction.

In terms of equipment, it requires three channels of variable-gain amplification to Vitasound's two; three sets of speakers backstage, and control facilities for filtering, amplifying and rectifying the control frequencies. Like the trisonic system, it needs only modification of existing soundheads, not separate soundheads.

New to the motion picture theatre, these principles of sound reproduction are not new to engineers in the field, but are the result of many years of development. Some years ago essentially the same technique was demonstrated at Carnegie Hall, New York, by Bell Telephone Laboratories. Development of related methods by Walt Disney studios, in collaboration with RCA, goes back to 1937, and university laboratories have also pursued investigations along the same lines. It is the accumulated result of all these researches that is now bringing to the motion picture theatre at least (and perhaps preferably) some one new technique in sound to greatly enhance the entertainment value of the film.

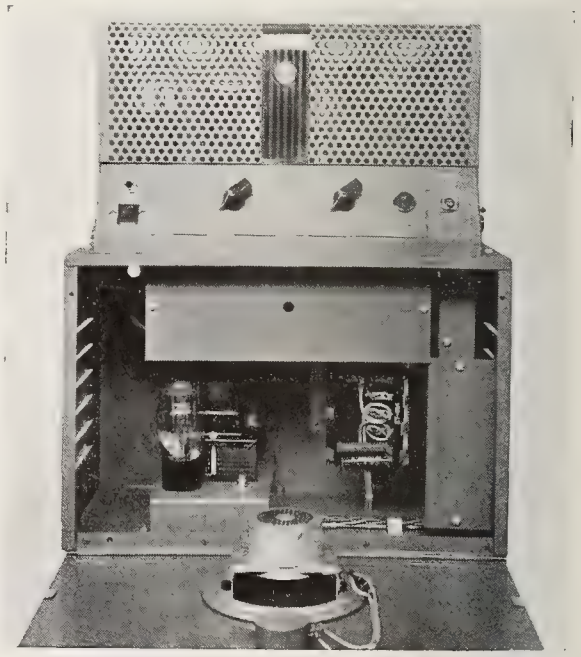
A New Sound System Designed For Small Theatres

A NEW SOUND system recently brought out by RCA as designed for small theatres (the PG-134) consists in a combination amplifier-power supply monitor speaker cabinet, soundheads with rotary stabilizers, and a two-way stage speaker.



The combination-amplifier cabinet is 19⅛ inches high, 15⅜ inches wide and 10 inches deep, and will mount on the front wall between projectors. It is equipped with auxiliary input terminals for phonograph and microphone, and with independent volume controls for synchronous reproduction, phonograph reproduction, and monitor speaker.

The exciter lamp power supply, also contained in this cabinet, is of the humless type based on the principle of using line a.c. to generate an inaudible frequency by means of an oscillator tube. In this way, the lamp can be economically lighted with a.c. without producing residual hum, and without requiring elimination of normal low frequencies, as is sometimes done to avoid hum when ordinary a.c. is used for the exciter lamp.

The soundhead, which includes the driving motor in its assembly, is belt-driven, and is equipped with rotary stabilizer identical with those on larger RCA systems. The stabilizer and the optical elements are rubber-mounted to minimize introduction of microphonic noise. Mechanical coupling to the motor is by means of a double belt.

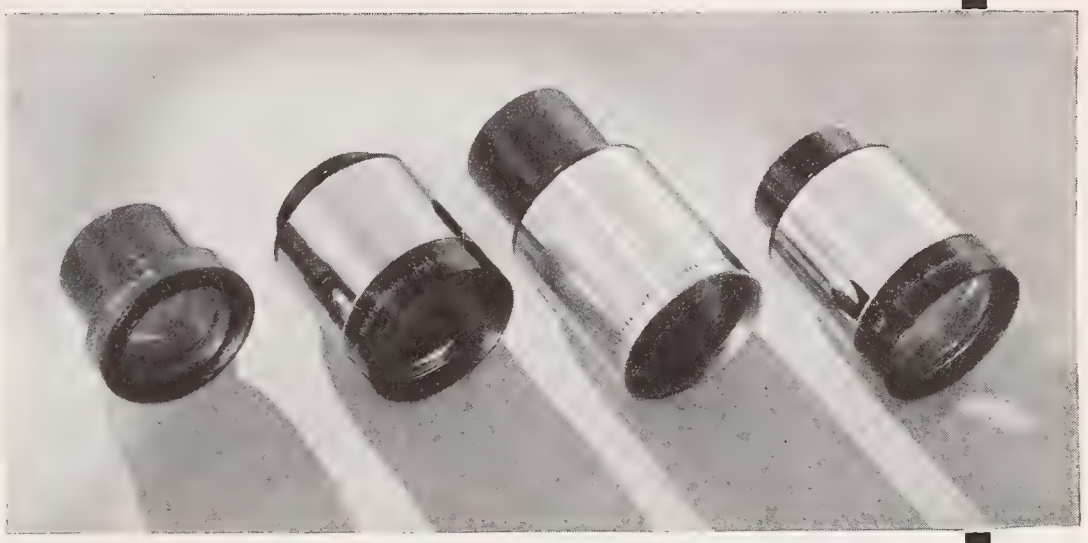
The speaker system has a depth of only 32 inches, being intended for small theatres where there may be a minimum of back-screen space. The low-frequency baffle is of the folded type, measuring 32 inches deep by 40¼ inches high and 61¼ inches wide. The high-frequency trumpet, mounting on top of the low-frequency baffle, is of the common multi-cellular type, containing eight "cells," and measures 13⅞ inches high, 21¼ inches wide, 30½ inches deep. The unit is equipped with quickly-adjustable bracket for setting its vertical tilt to give optimum sound distribution.



The small-dimension horn system.

A new model RCA non-synchronous record player specifically designed for theatre work, with a special pickup circuit to give the sound from an average 12-inch record the same characteristics as sound from an average film track. The standard amplifier is thus as well matched to non-synchronous sound as to film sound. The turntable is driven at the rim instead of at the center to minimize variations in speed and mechanical vibration, and is rubber-cushioned. The cabinet is further provided with adjustable shockproof mountings. The motor is of the self-starting synchronous type. A magnetic pickup is used.

HOW TO GET GREATER EFFICIENCY FROM YOUR PRESENT PROJECTOR

You can greatly increase the efficiency of your projector with a Bausch & Lomb f:2 Super Cinephor—the projection lens which actually delivers 25% more light on the screen. A new process of treating lens surfaces to minimize reflections puts to work the light previously lost (4 to 6% at each air to glass surface). The new f:2 lens has the light efficiency that hitherto would only have been possible at f:1.79.

The result of this increased light on the screen is a marked gain in contrast and crispness. Shadow detail is not diluted by distributed light. Color films have greater purity and brilliance.

If you want greater projection efficiency—better image quality—write for details to Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., 679 St. Paul Street, Rochester, N. Y.

F. H. Richardson's COMMENT

Deluxe Type Base Developed for the Smaller Theatre

A NEW PEDESTAL of modern design has been brought out by Century Projector Corporation for the medium- and small-sized theatre. Pedestals of this type make available to the restricted-budget projection room the advantages of complete protection and perfect shielding for power and sound wiring, and the sturdiness inherent in four-square construction.

The new Century pedestal occupies a floor area of 39x18½ inches, and weighs 240 pounds. The forward lip of the lower casting extends out under the lower magazine to assure complete stability regardless of projection angle; the principal point of support for the lamphouse carriage is likewise carried forward, over this lip and as close as possible to the projector, with a view to minimizing any leverage between the projector and its support that might otherwise amplify projector vibration. A double support is provided for the rear of the lamphouse carriage. The pedestal is internally braced for additional rigidity.

A ball-bearing tilting mechanism operates on the rear supports to afford projection angles approximately from 30° downward to 5° upward, and the adjustment is not altered in any degree by locking it. Four levelling screws are provided in the base casting which can be set to compensate for unevenness of the floor. The lamphouse carriage is equipped with set-bolts in each of its four corners for fine adjustment of the lamphouse position, which can thus be aligned with extreme accuracy.

The door of the compartment is of cast metal, and of the hinged, not the removable, type, and opens on a shelf provided for carbons, small tools, etc. A 100-ampere switch and switchbox is mounted at the switch and switchbox are mounted at the rear of the pedestal for control of the arc current supply.

Management Today Must Follow Through

DURING THE past 30 years I have been something of a "preacher." I have preached projection—more projection, and always better projection. I have preached it from all angles. And verily I say unto you, that the very best projectors in the world, run by the very best projectionists in the world, will achieve no reward if management does not perform "good works" from one end of the theatre to the other.

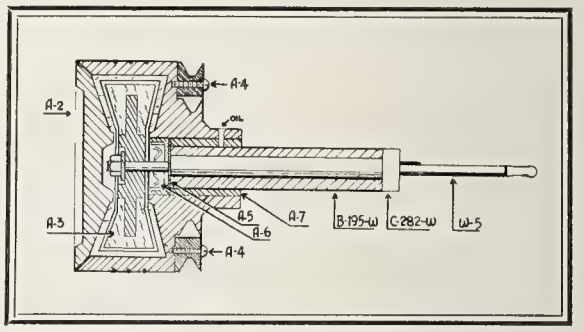
Sometimes a manager, although otherwise far-seeing, thinks thoughts which run something on this order: "Wonder, should I have that screen cleaned? It's pretty dirty, but it will be a lot of bother and will cost quite a bit to do it. The audience doesn't know it is soiled, so maybe I'd just better let it go as it is for awhile longer."

The answer is: Nope, the audience does not know! And you do not know that your box office returns are all that they might be. And if you do, you may be guessing at the causes with too much self-assurance. Theatregoers, by process of elimination, eventually track down the theatres where the managers are on their toes, have good projection, well illuminated screens, convincing, dramatically effective sound; comfortable seating and air; clean, snappy surroundings; courteous, attentive service, etc. Management today must follow through on all these things.

How does the process of elimination of one theatre after the other take place in the theatregoer? There are any number of theatres within a radius of a few miles, as distances go today, which are showing first- and second-run pictures. Certain theatres, regardless of product, are more popular than the others and the answer is obvious: The theatregoer has tried them all and finally developed an inclination toward certain theatres. Specific pictures and various stunts can overcome such an inclination on occasion. But a theatre operates 52 weeks a year!

A New Type of Takeup from Texas

IN THE LAST issue I told you something of the work of Clarence Nelson, projectionist at the Alabama theatre in Houston, Tex. I shall now tell you of more of his recent doings, for Nelson doesn't stop as soon as one job is finished; instead, as soon as he has cracked one nut and dug the meat out, he proceeds to crack another. One of the latest kernels that he has extracted is a takeup employing a brand new principle for such devices.



Ever since the creation of the first takeup there has been a constant, and to some extent successful, effort to produce a device that would be thoroughly reliable in its action, deliver a steady, even pull on the film throughout the entire run, and at all times deliver just enough pull (in pounds) to insure its continuous rewinding during projection.

View of the assembled Nelson takeup.

Brother Nelson explains his new takeup in this way:

"The basic principle is by no means untried. The first application of a fluid coupling to automibiles in the United States was made at about the time I was experimenting on the same principle as a takeup. The difference between the Chrysler clutch and my takeup is this: In the case of the automobile the engine must be under way before the car starts moving. In the case of the takeup it must start instantly, without a jerk. Theatre introduction came only after two years had been spent developing and testing fluid couplings.

Diagrammatic representation of the Nelson takeup. A2—main casting with small pulley; A3—inside paddle fastened to reel shaft W5; A4—two screws to remove outside large-diameter pulley; A5—bronze thrust washer; A6—oil seal; A7—bronze bushing; B195W—takeup bearing; C282W—collar; W5—chrome steel reel shaft.

"We finally chose a design with vanes attached to the casing and rotating therewith. These vanes throw the oil around and outward like a vertical whirlpool until it crosses a 1-32-inch gap between the driver and runner, impinges upon the vanes of the runner and causes it to turn. The oil whirls around and around in the closed circuit, picking up a load of energy from the driver, carrying it across to the runner and returning again to the driver for more energy. It is quite possible to get a smooth, even start without any chance of damaging the film.

"Theoretically, the tension of the film at the beginning of the reel, no matter what the size of the hub, should be exactly the same as it is at the finish, whether there are one thousand or three thousand feet of film. We have been unable to reach this perfection, however; by testing the pull of the film we find that at the beginning of a 5-inch hub we have approximately 12 ounces of pull, and at the end of the reel we have approximately 9 ounces (2,000-foot reel). Please remember, this refers to the pull on the film, while the pull at the hub of a full 2,000-foot reel has increased over four ounces."

"The unit will function satisfactorily at all anticipated extremes of temperature. By bringing it down to about 40° the pull of the film is increased approximately 2 ounces. By raisinig the temperature to 150°, the pull is decreased 1 ounce. This means that on the temperature extremes there is never a total of 3 ounces difference in the takeup—and in the present day takeup it is impossible by spring tension to adjust the takeup within five ounces."

I questioned Brother Nelson about the deterioration of the oil and am assured that because the unit is completely sealed, so that no air or oxygen can get to it, it is good for the life time of the takeup; he is backed up in this statement by the engineers of a large oil company who developed an oil especially for this purpose.

I also questioned the possibility of the reel latch breaking off; however, this is made of high-grade chrome-nickel, stainless steel shaft.

The entire takeup is decidedly well made, both inside and out. The case is of highly polished aluminum trimmed in red and is modern and attractive in appearance. It can be attached very quickly — between reels, in fact.

Coating Lenses To Reduce Loss

WE ALL recognize the fact that there has been a heavy loss of light all through the past due to reflection caused by the angle at which the light or most of it, meets the surface of the first element of the projection lens. This, as I say, is now recognized by all, but it still deserves mention occasionally. Before me lies a letter from Donald Pilcher, projectionist at the Palace theatre, Gilman, Ill., which says:

"In the matter of coating the surface of the Bausch & Lomb lenses to reduce loss of light through reflection—can this be done to lenses that have been used? If so, please advise as to how it can be done by a competent projectionist.

"I have seen quite a number of articles on projecting green or newly cleaned prints. I have no trouble with them because with each loading I completely wipe out the film path through the mechanism with my finger, then using a good wax, such as "Simonize," with a pipe cleaner thoroughly coated, I wax the tension shoes. I find that if this is done, the prints do not stick. Do you approve of this plan?"

If carefully done, yes—F. H. R.

"I am a small-town projectionist, yes, but I do try to keep abreast with the latest improvements so far as possible. I endeavor to be especially careful of the prints, because I know others must employ them to supply entertainment for other audiences, and if I needlessly damage them I have worked injury to the enjoyment of perhaps thousands of people.

"We have Simplex projectors which, by the way, I have painted pure gloss white. I like them very much better than when black. True, it adds illumination to the room which cannot be commended, but if you saw them I think you could not help but approve."

As to the matter of coating lenses, I believe Bausch & Lomb are in a position to coat cinephor lenses. I suggest writing them to get their reaction to such a proposal.

Your method of waxing the aperture plate tracks and other frictional surfaces is to be commended. To some it might have one grave fault—it requires some work. Each time, before the grease is applied, all surfaces should be thoroughly wiped clean.

Cecil Wood, one of America's Noted Projectionists says...

Simplex E·7 PROJECTOR is the Best Ever

FORTY YEARS EXPERIENCE

In my forty years as a Projectionist I have never found any equipment which compares with the Simplex E-7 Projectors installed in "The Broadway" for the New York "Fantasia" premiere. With the Simplex E-7 we get an extremely steady picture and no trace of travel ghost. Positive lubrication applied during operation without an oil can, remarkably quiet operation, easy, visible and accurate threading, correct loop size and cool mechanism at all times are definite advantages. Every detail of Simplex E-7 mechanism makes a man proud to operate it and anxious to keep it always in the pink of condition.

THE BIG TRAIL

IN all the much that has been said of those junket-to-location previews, it is yet to be observed that possibly quite as much benefit has been had in showing the country to the picture business as in introducing the picture to the country.

It is at least one device which for its occasion forces contact with the customers under the white light of promotion. This reveals to grease-painted Hollywood and ink-stained New York that there is a great region of patrons to whom the product is not "just another picture".

So it was at last weekend when Warner Brothers publicity caravans converged on high, chill Santa Fe in New Mexico.

The conclave of the citizenry, pouring in from mountain and desert, with eager interest in this visitation from the world of make-believe, was for some an encouraging suggestion that this industry has plenty of customers, plenty of market, and requires only a flow of merchandise to be assured of doing business.

This "Santa Fe Trail" occasion, and attentions to it from the daily lay press, the radio and the magazine pundits are calculated, too, perhaps somewhat beyond the manifestations of some kindred expeditions, to impress the experienced observer with the distance that the screen has traveled, and of the status which it enjoys.

Despite the continuing complex of problems, it may be accepted that the screen is to this America the wide way into the romance road of entertainment, the box office the best toll gate. The expeditioneers of "The Santa Fe Trail" can look back into the vistas of the transcontinental distances and see that there's gold in them hills.

FOR PEACE

THE bitterly threatening controversy between the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and the radio industry, as represented by Broadcasters Music, Inc., is one of those continuing absurdities growing out of a lack of perspective. The clash and disaster that threatens is somewhat like what happens to the pedestrian who would exercise his right-of-way, even against a fire engine—and that goes for both sides.

Once again our new media, including the traffic of the air, raise new questions—just as the motion picture did in the copyright situation so many years ago. They are not to be settled by the rules of the status quo ante. Yesterday may guide, but not make, laws for today and tomorrow.

Clearly this is a time when the situation can be constructively controlled, to the benefit of all interests involved, only by a clear view of both sides and the middle, by a competent understanding and a constructive sympathy with the divergent causes. Also something more than that is indicated, too: a personality of persuasive qualities able to sell the effective compromises which represent practicality.

The whole of the scene and its people seems to present one reasonable nomination in a man who combines experience, perspective and diplomatic capacity of decided practicality—and for all of his sundry ties, radio, cinema and newspaper—in the most independent position, Mr. Merlin Hall Aylesworth—"Deak" to most of us, and one of the most plain spoken persons who ever came to Broadway. He has a fashion of saying things so they will stay said.

WHO SAYS?

NOW comes Mr. William Dieterle, able director, with a piece in Liberty asking: "Will Hollywood Give Up Intelligence?" He seems to think that Hollywood has "come to the forks of the road". It is another of those statements about an issue between entertainment and "a victory over ignorance".

Mr. Dieterle seems to think that a policy of purveying entertainment only leads to a "dead end". He insists on "intelligent entertainment".

It goes on like that for quite a while until he says: "Far better than dropping serious pictures, Hollywood should continue to produce them, but on a different budget. They should contain no overpaid stars, no highly priced writers, directors. They should be made entirely with the accent on the story.

"At first," observes Mr. Dieterle, "lacking names like Gable and Flynn and Garbo, these pictures may not be supported by the masses, but, little by little the average person would get the habit of intelligent pictures."

There is so very much to commend Mr. Dieterle's idealisms, so little, also, in a practical sense. Mr. Dieterle is forgetting quite that he is asking for an intellectual revolution, which is the last revolution that is going to be had.

The problem of the motion picture, and all other amusements, is serving the customers as they now are.

THE Amurrican cinema is an awful substitute for art, in the words of Sir Thomas Beecham, composer conductor from Britain, speaking before the Canadian club in Montreal at the externally austere Hotel Windsor, with its Norman facade and merry interior. Sir Thomas feels that good old British drama is, says our dispatch, "dead, damned and buried". In its place we have, says he, "that most terrifying, humiliating, disconcerting, ear-splitting and sight-unnerving phenomenon called the American cinema". His subject was "The Decline and Fall of Thespis". The dear old diehard is to be regarded with fondness. His position makes a benchmark from which to measure progress. Sir Thomas, you'll be remembering, has been enabled to enjoy a career of art by reason of a fortune made by Joseph Beecham, something rated around $150,000,000, in pills. But Sir Thomas gets his catharsis, it would seem, through his teeth, in words.

A Law with Teeth

THE question whether the state can put a theatre company out of business in Mississippi if one of the circuit's houses operates on Sunday in the face of the state's "blue law," is before the courts for a decision in Hattiesburg, Miss.

Involved are the 23 houses in Mississippi of Saenger Theatres, which operates also in Florida, Alabama, Louisiana and Texas. In court at Hattiesburg Saenger put a value of $500,000 on its Mississippi properties and declared it had a mortgage for $2,400,000 on all its Southern property.

Judge F. Burkitt Collins left undecided when he adjourned court last week, questions in two quo warranto proceedings, which District Attorney Alexander Currie filed against Saenger and against Royal-Sigler Theatres, Inc., a one-house Saenger company. Court will not convene again until January. If the state wins, all the corporations' property in Mississippi will have to be put up for sale, under the law.

District Attorney Currie asked the judge to oust from Mississippi the two corporations because they defied the Mississippi blue laws and operated on Sundays. Saenger claimed it had not been served correctly, but the court held it had. Then Saenger, which brought four different firms of attorneys into the case, claimed that the case can only be tried in Jackson, Miss., where its resident agent lives. The court had not ruled on that when it adjourned.

New Sound for All

THE three-horn-system, control-track type of sound is to be made available soon to all theatres, according to developments this week. Equipment manufacturers are awaiting only the adoption of standards by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences to market equipment for the adaption of existing sound systems to the new method.

Edward C. Cahill, manager of the Photophone division of RCA, announced this week that as soon as the Academy standards were issued, equipment for a system to be called "RCA Panoramic Sound" would be placed on the market. The systems being installed in Warner Brothers' Strand, New York, and Hollywood in Hollywood, under the name "Vitasound," are of this type. Employing two channels of amplification, the apparatus requires two additional horn systems, one for each side of the stage; auxiliary amplification, and a control track pickup. The control track, which cuts in the side speakers for selected musical passages and effects (according to the present scheme), and also controls volume in both main and auxiliary channels, is located in line with the sprocket holes, while the control pickup is inserted into the soundhead to occupy space already available, using existing screw holes for attachment.

Herbert Griffin, vice president, and George Friedl, director of engineering, of the International Projector Corporation, have just returned from Hollywood where they were in consultation with sound engineers in preparation for adaptation of Simplex sound systems to the new method. Mr. Griffin also announced this week that equipment would be made available by his organization as soon as the standards are adopted.

The Latin Problem

HOW to increase business in Latin America and participate in the United States' program of good-will to other nations in the Western hemisphere continues to be a topic of discussion this week for the major motion picture companies in New York. Two basic plans, both involving the use of radio, are still being considered. National Broadcasting would like to have the American distributors use its short-wave facilities and certain foreign department film executives favor a plan of sending records to Latin American radio stations for transmission on the local standard broadcast bands.

RKO has scheduled three sponsored short-wave programs over the NBC short wave station for January. Phil Reisman, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution, said RKO would do something about regular broadcasts after January 1st.

Although NBC's price for a weekly broadcast, sponsored by the majors, to build good-will was reported to be about $550, company foreign departments remained unenthusiastic. David Blum, MGM, has sent a questionnaire to the company's branches in Latin America seeking to find out reactions to the plan for making records in this country and sending them to the Spanish speaking stations in South America.

Films Sell Baseball

PITCHER Bob Feller throws a baseball in competition with a speeding motorcycle, racing 75 miles an hour. . . . Ted Lyons tosses a spheroid at an archery target to test his marksmanship . . . scenes from the 1940 world series between the Reds and Indians . . . these are among the scenes in the new, annual "Official American League Baseball Film" being prepared for release by the independent Chicago Film Laboratory, for the American League.

The film, to be issued next year, for free showings, only, will be the seventh of the series. Some 25,000,000 baseball fans are estimated to have seen the films to date. Approximately 150 prints of last year's film are still in circulation. They are generally used just before each new season to popularize the game.

Val Lindberg was production manager, working with a crew of eight. David Scott supervised the baseball players' dialogue.

The Balaban and Katz Circuit, in Chicago, has co-operated with the Chicago Daily News in showing the films.

The War & Contracts

CABLES from England this week reported that the dispute between the Cinematograph Exhiibtors' Association and the Kinematograph Renters' Society (distributors) over the disposition of contracts on closed theatres continues.

English distributors maintained that while they sympathize with the position of exhibitors in situations created by the war the basic policy of distinguishing between theatres closed by enemy action and those voluntarily shut down is not unreasonable. Representatives of the KRS and CEA will meet after Christmas in an effort to find a practical solution of the booking problem with respect to theatres which have been forced to close on account of the war.

The monetary export agreement between the English government and the eight major American film companies was reported to be agreed upon and final approval expected in England by Christmas. English representatives of American distributors were said to be awaiting instructions from New York on what sums should be exported. The majors will be allowed to withdraw $12,800,000 from England from October 31, 1940 to October 31, 1941, approximately two-thirds of the sums remitted during the first year of the war. Republic and Monogram will negotiate separate agreements, receiving their instructions directly from the Birtish government.

Tax Warning

IN a pointed warning to exhibitors that the federal administration taxes they collect are the Government's money, Guy T. Helvering, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington, calls attention to the heavy penalty imposed early this month by Federal Judge William Bondy, in New York, upon an exhibitor who failed to accompany his monthly tax returns with the necessary deposit.

Following a plea of guilty, Pietro Garofalo, president of the Cine Lux Corporation, which operated a New York theatre, Judge Bondy handed out fines of $5,000 upon the corporation and $2,000 upon Garofalo, who also was sentenced to a term of two months in prison and ordered deported to Italy upon completion of the sentence.

Garofalo made his return to the collector of internal revenue each month, but failed to remit the tax. He was charged with embezzling the admission taxes collected from his patrons, offering as his defense that he used the money to pay the operating expenses of the theatre and corporation.

In a five-to-four opinion considered to be of importance to some motion picture companies, and other businesses operating in inter-state commerce, the U. S. Supreme Court, on Monday, held valid a Wisconsin law imposing taxes on dividends paid by out-of-state corporations.

The Supreme Court reversed a decision of the State Supreme court that such corporations were beyond the reach of the state, and ruled constitutional the tax of two and one-half per cent imposed by Wisconsin on dividends declared and paid out of income derived from property owned or business transacted within the state.

While the decision was rendered on a contest of the law by a chainstore company, it will apply to all corporations doing business in Wisconsin, including motion picture distributing and theatres companies, it was said.

Less than one-third of the amusement corporations of the country including film, were able to show taxable income for 1938, it was disclosed this week in an analysis of returns by the U. S. Internal Revenue Bureau, Washington.

Of a total of 10,353 amusement corporations, 188 of them inactive, only 3,230 showed taxable income and 5,935 others, after allowable deductions, reported a deficit of $28,828,000.

The Bureau's figures showed that the 3,230 companies reported an aggregate gross income of $797,709,000, while the 5,935 untaxed corporations reported only $342,982,000.

The tax-paying group reported aggregate net income of $80,734,000, on which the U. S. Treasury collected $11,614,000 in income taxes and $88,000 in excess profits taxes, a total of $11,702,000.

Dividends were paid by companies in both groups, however. The tax-paying companies reported the distribution of $42,484,000 in dividends other than stock, while the untaxed companies reported $801,000.

REPRINTS AVAILABLE ON FINAL DECREE

Exhibitors, exchangemen and others in the industry can still obtain copies of the final, official, revised Consent Decree, which has been reprinted in pamphlet form by Quigley Publications, together with the Rules of Arbitration, the Map of Arbitration Jurisdictional Districts and the Department of Justice's statement of policy and procedure under the consent settlement of its trust suit against the "Big Five" distributors. The pamphlet is available, without charge. Copies will be mailed without charge to those sending requests to Motion Picture Herald, Rockefeller Center, New York.

Big Bingo

A THEATRE Bingo game has grown so big that Mitchell Fitzer, Syracuse exhibitor, has found it necessary to buy the four-story Elks Temple, on South Clinton Street, Syracuse, N. Y., to accommodate the crowds overflowing from the Fitzer Rivoli theatre, on West Fayette Street.

Monday and Saturday nights are Bingo nights, with two 1941 Hudson cars the big bait. Bingo players at the Elks Temple overflow pay the regular Rivoli theatre admission and receive tickets good at the Rivoli for some later date.

Associated with Mr. Fitzer in the Temple deal are his brother, Morris and Effie Bettigole, wife of the manager of Fitzer's Rivoli. They will install a Turkish bath in the Temple basement.

IATSE Challenged

THEATRE owners know well of the unsuccessful attacks by labor unions on the jurisdiction of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, whose cardholders occupy most craft positions in production and run a big majority of the projection machines of the country's theatres.

This week there came another challenge, this one hurled by the Upholsterer's International Union of North America, which filed suit in New York Supreme Court for an injunction to restrain the IATSE from manning the installation of draperies, curtains and wall hangings in theatres.

Both unions are members of the American Federation of Labor. The upholsterers claim the AFL parent had originally given them jurisdiction in this work, complain in their suit that the IATSE moved in some time ago and has since been exerting exclusive rights in hanging theatre drapes.

Side-line

FOX WEST COAST theatres have completed installation of candy counters in all their theatres in the Los Angeles area, and have figured that one in every five persons buying admission will spend five cents for sweets. Expectancy is that for every admission ticket purchased, one cent will go for candy.

However, title of the "Candy King" goes to Harold Kopp, manager of the Fox Uptown, Los Angeles. For every admission ticket sold at the house, two cents is spent for candy, a record.

Mr. Kopp is using a trailer instructing patrons who want candy to motion to the nearest usher, who will take the money and bring the candy.

The trailer also announces a three-minute intermission to be used by patrons for visiting the candy counter in person.

ALLIED FINDS BUYING SLOW, PRICES GENERALLY UNCHANGED FOR 1940-41

Second "AID" Report Indicates One-Third of Exhibitors Have Not Bought Enough Product To Operate Through Year

Seven per cent of exhibitors reporting to Allied's Product Information Department have not signed any contracts with the 10 large distributors for 1940-41 product, and nearly one-third have not contracted for sufficient product to run their theatres during the present season, according to the second AID report on 1940-41 product policies and prices, buying and selling, completed for Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors.

Sidney E. Samuelson, head of the AID, points out that the survey is "based upon hundreds of cards received from independent exhibitors."

Highlights from the report included the following:

Twentieth Century-Fox had sold the largest number of contracts on which reports were received, over 13 percent of the total.

Sixty percent of the exhibitors paid the same or less for product this year as compared with last, and nearly 22 percent more.

Twelve percent of all pictures nationally sold to members reporting to AID were sold on percentage; 88 percent on flat-rental terms.

MGM sold the highest number of percentage pictures, averaging 11 each contract.

Fifty-eight percent of the contracts reported on were partly percentage and partly flat rental.

Over 50 percent of the percentage pictures contracted for were at 35 percent terms.

Guarantees were asked on 31 percent of the percentage pictures reported on and preferred playing time was specified on 53 percent of the percentage features sold.

MGM granted the greatest cancellation rights, on over 92 percent of the contracts.

Twentieth Century-Fox was said to have forced shorts in over 60 percent of the shorts contract on which data was supplied.

MGM was reported to have made the least variation and Universal the greatest from "the announced sales policy."

The "hundreds of exhibitors" sending information on product buys to Allied's Information Department reported that only 67.8 per cent had bought sufficient product to run their theatres for the year and 32.2 per cent still required product. AID announced that in terms of playing time "exhibitors have only bought sufficient product to operate their theatres eight months of the year." This shows that with the selling campaign in its sixth month nearly one-third of the required product has not yet been contracted for."

The following chart compares the standing of each company in the two AID reports in the matter of the total number of contracts sold. The first report was published September 27th and this, the second, is dated December 13th:

Company	1st Report	2nd Report
Columbia	Tied for 2nd	7th
Metro	5th	5th
Monogram	10th	10th
Paramount	6th	4th
Republic	9th	9th
RKO	1st	3rd
20th Century-Fox	Tied for 2nd	1st
United Artists	7th	8th
Universal	4th	6th
Vitagraph	8th	2nd

Allied's data showed that Twentieth Century-Fox has sold the greater number of contracts to members, or 13.7 per cent of the total number of national contracts reported. The table indicates the position of each company and its percentage of the total number of contracts signed by those forwarding information to the AID:

Company	Standing	Percent of Contracts Sold
Columbia	7th	9.9
Metro	5th	10.9
Monogram	10th	3.4
Paramount	4th	11.0
Republic	9th	8.2
RKO	3rd	11.2

EXHIBITORS URGED TO CONSERVE FILMS

In order to make the transition next Summer from the old system of buying pictures to the new one established by the consent decree as easy as possible exhibitors should save some pictures from the present contract for next season, according to Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied.

Mr. Myers said in a bulletin published this week that the indications were that four of the five consenting companies would try to have two or more groups of five ready by September 1st. "The wise exhibitor to avoid a shortage," Mr. Myers said, "and to give himself breathing time in his buying, will not needlessly squander pictures between now and next Fall."

It was suggested that consideration be given to the future selling system before pictures are cancelled or withdrawn before they have played the maximum number of days under the licenses. "Extended playing time on strong pictures may be a good policy for more reasons than one," Mr. Myers remarked.

Allied in announcing the figures showing the 21.6 per cent said that they paid higher terms for flat rentals and guarantees than last year and said "there is absolutely no justification for the demands for increased film prices." Nearly 60 per cent of the exhibitors answering the questionnaire said that they closed contracts for the same or less flat rentals and guarantees than in the 1939-40 season. According to the following table, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Universal are the two companies which have closed one-third or more of the deals this year on higher terms than last year.

Company	Same or Less	More
Columbia	69.5	9.8
Metro	60.0	33.3
Monogram	60.7	7.2
Paramount	53.8	27.5
Republic	52.2	28.4
RKO	74.2	7.5
20th Century-Fox	68.1	14.2
United Artists	54.1	16.2
Universal	46.1	38.2
Vitagraph	56.0	26.0
Totals	59.9	21.6

It was asserted that "without exception exhibitors in organized territories paid a lower percentage of the gross for film than did exhibitors in non-organized territories. This also holds true when the buying of members of the exhibitor organizations is compared with that of non-members in the same territory."

Percentage Deals: 12%

Only 12 per cent of all the pictures sold nationally to members reporting to the AID were on percentage and about 88 per cent were contracted for on a flat rental basis. The comment of Allied was, "the obvious conclusion is that the distributors have arrived at the point where practically all the good pictures are sold on percentage, leaving the exhibitors with high flat rentals for the poor pictures.

11 MGM Percent Films

AID reported that an average of 11 MGM films were sold on percentage. The next highest was Twentieth Century-Fox, with something over six and a half, followed by Paramount and Columbia. According to the statistics gathered by Allied, both Monogram and Republic sold only a fraction of one picture, on the average, on a percentage basis.

Company	Percentage Pictures
Metro	11.0
Monogram	.3
Paramount	4.7
Republic	.2
RKO	2.9
20th Century-Fox	6.6
United Artists	2.6
Universal	3.7
Vitagraph	5.1

The next study made by AID was a comparison of the number of all-flat rental contracts and the part-percentage contracts. Allied stated, "A study of the survey cards definitely proves that, with the exception of Metro, the distributing companies sold all-flat rental contracts. This disposes of the claim by the various companies that there is a national sales policy requiring the exhibitor to buy some pictures on percentage." Fifty-eight per cent of the contracts were sold with some percentage features and 42 per cent on an all-flat rental basis, according to the figures. The figures were:

Company	Contracts Flat	Part Percentage
Columbia	36.6	63.4
Metro	0	100.
Monogram	96.4	3.6
Paramount	16.5	83.5
Republic	92.5	7.5
RKO	45.2	54.8
20th Century-Fox	44.3	55.7
United Artists	52.7	47.3
Universal	64.0	36.0
Vitagraph	35.0	65.0
Total All Companies	42.0	58.0

Only a "very, very few exhibitors paid 50 per cent for one picture, the majority of these in non-Allied territory," the report said. Of the total number of percentage pictures 31.5 per cent were sold at 40 per cent; 51 per cent at 35 per cent and 17.5 per cent at other percentage brackets. Allied's figures were as follows:

Company	Percentage Terms 40 Per Cent	35 Per Cent	Other Per Cent
Columbia	17.0	43.8	39.2
Metro	46.0	39.7	14.3
Monogram	0	60.0	40.0
Paramount	37.9	52.3	9.8
Republic	0	66.7	33.3
RKO	31.1	50.5	18.4
20th Century-Fox	20.9	60.8	18.3
United Artists	34.0	59.7	6.3
Universal	1.8	82.5	15.7
Vitagraph	44.9	35.2	19.9
All Companies	31.5	51.0	17.5

Sliding scale contracts and automatic reversion contracts reported were not included in the above table, the AID statement pointed out. The report also said: "The chart shows that exhibitors generally are paying too high percentages for film."

Guarantees Asked

Over 50 per cent of the percentage films sold were also conditioned on preferred playing time and over 30 per cent asked a guarantee, according to the AID table. Paramount asked preferred time on 70 per cent of its pictures sold on percentage and Monogram sold 60 per cent of its percentage films with a guarantee clause, according to the figures computed by AID. Allied commented, "during the 1939-40 season it was generally understood that where a guarantee was applied against percentage preferred time was to be eliminated. The chart shows that the Big Eight companies continued to require guarantees from exhibitors and, in addition, forced preferred playing time."

Company	Percentage Pictures Guarantee	Preferred Time
Metro	19.1	35.1
Monogram	60.0	40.0
Paramount	7.9	70.6
Republic	55.6	22.2
RKO	32.9	36.1
20th Century-Fox	33.1	24.0
United Artists	28.8	39.3
Universal	46.0	49.4
Vitagraph	14.1	55.9
Average Totals	31.1	53.2

Over 92 per cent of the MGM contracts gave cancellation privileges, according to the AID survey. The report said: "Columbia, RKO and Universal generally restricted the exhibitors' rights to cancel." The table also shows the percentage of the exhibitors not answering the particular question. The following percentages were based on the total number of contracts as 100 per cent:

Company	Cancellations Permitted	No Cancellations	Question Not Answered
Columbia	46.3	18.3	35.4
Metro	92.2	3.3	4.5
Monogram	25.0	36.0	39.0
Paramount	83.5	5.5	11.0
Republic	32.8	13.4	53.8
RKO	49.4	7.5	43.1
20th Century-Fox	69.9	5.3	24.8
United Artists	1.4	25.7	72.9
Universal	43.8	6.7	49.5
Vitagraph	78.0	8.0	14.0

According to the AID figures, 46.7 per cent of the total number of short contracts sold were reported to be forced by the exhibitors sending information for the survey. Twentieth Century-Fox, RKO, Vitagraph and MGM were all said to have forced shorts in over half the total number of short subject contracts.

Company	Forced Shorts, Per Cent
Metro	55.7
Paramount	41.2
Republic	0
RKO	56.7
20th Century-Fox	61.9
United Artists	0
Universal	41.4
Vitagraph	55.7
All Companies	46.7

The AID reported deviation from the announced sales policies in the following order: First, Metro (least variation); second, Paramount; third, Vitagraph; fourth, 20th Century-Fox; fifth, RKO; sixth, Columbia; seventh, Universal.

United Artists, Monogram and Republic had no announced sales policies, AID's report said.

The AID reported that future studies would be made with relation to population, seating capacity and run.

DRIVE FROM OTHER SIDE OF THE FENCE

In these days of distributors' super-sales drives to obtain a maximum of bookings from exhibitor customers, a new twist is given by V. F. Scott, president of the Ideal Amusement Company, operating 17 theatres in Pennsylvania, who has launched his own "V. F. Scott Free Picture Drive Starting December 25th, ending July 4th." He addresses an appeal for free pictures to Pittsburgh branch managers:

"In celebration of my 20 years as an exhibitor, I have decided that I too should have a drive, a special drive for free pictures with at least one picture from each Exchange for each of my theatres."

"As a partial compensation to you for your co-operation in this special drive," Mr. Scott promised the distributors he would "purchase from you, one one sheet which I will place in front of my theatres while showing your picture; also one trailer will be run on my screens for one week, showing that your company produced this picture. This is absolutely free, and at no cost to you." He added:

"I feel it is my duty as your friend to include you and your home office in this special drive, so that you can show to the world the gratitude you feel for the many hundreds of thousands of dollars I have paid you for shows during the past twenty years.

"At the end of this special drive I expect to hold a ceremonial dinner at fifteen dollars per plate, at the Fort Stanwix Hotel. Seventy-five cents of this amount will be used for food and entertainment, and the balance of fourteen dollars and twenty-five cents will be used for a vacation for me to recuperate from the hardships of this phenomenal drive."

MPPDA Meeting Has "Usual Discussion"

At a meeting of the MPPDA in its New York office Wednesday there was the "usual general discussion of the foreign situation." It was announced that there was no direct or indirect consideration of a new contract for Will H. Hays, president. Mr. Hays' five-year contract expires next March. Also discussed was the result of the industry's cooperation in the annual Red Cross drive. A special short, prepared by Warner Brothers was shown in some 7,500 theatres during the two weeks drive in November.

Those present were: Barney Balaban, Jack Cohn, E. B. Hatrick, Joseph H. Hazen, W. C. Michel, Charles D. Prutzman, George Schaefer, Murray Silverstone, Mr. Hays and Frederick L. Herron. The meeting was adjourned to December 27th.

O. Henry Briggs Resigns From Pathe Laboratories

O. Henry Briggs has resigned as president of Pathe Laboratories, Inc., and plans to enter independent film production shortly.

He had been sales manager of DuPont Film Manufacturing Corp., from 1924 to 1936 when he became president of Pathe Film Corp. Two years ago he left that post to become president of Pathe Laboratories.

Succeeding Mr. Briggs at Pathe is E. M. Travis, Hollywood manager for the company.

Copeland Switch January 1st

Raymond H. Copeland, present manager of the Paramount branch at Des Moines, will assume the managerial post for the company at Kansas City on January 1st. Joseph T. Manfre, manager of the Kansas City office, will switch to the Des Moines branch on the same date.

AAA TO INSIST ON MINIMUM FEES FOR ARBITRATORS UNDER DECREE

Maximum Is $50 a Day but Lower Usual Payments Are Seen; Little Three Wins Point as Trial Proceeds

Arbitration fees, specified as not to exceed $50 per day in the consent decree, will be kept at a minimum by the American Arbitration Association, administrator of the arbitration system, and in many cases the fee for the arbitrator will probably be $10, $20 or $30, in certain types of cases no fees at all.

J. Noble Braden, executive secretary of the AAA and director of the 31 arbitration tribunals being set up in as many key cities, completed preliminary work in organizing boards in the Far West and after spending Monday at the New York headquarters of the Association went to the Mid-west to select personnel and locations for local offices. Mr. Braden will return to New York just before Christmas and complete arrangements for boards in the East shortly after the first of the year. All nominations for arbitrators and clerks will be submitted to the AAA's arbitration committee for final decision. Paul F. Warburg, chairman of the administrative committee of the industry's arbitration system, announced Monday that Mr. Braden had reported that in all the key cities the Association had received complete cooperation from local organizations.

Fees Studied

One of the important questions now receiving attention from officials of the AAA is the fees for arbitrators. Section XI of the Rules of Arbitration of the decree states, "The American Arbitration Association shall fix for each arbitration district the per diem rate of the arbitrator's fee, which in no event shall exceed $50.00 per diem. The arbitrator shall be entitled to the per diem fee for each day or part thereof that he shall attend a hearing or make an inspection." Though the authority to set the fee is given to the Association, the organization in this, as in other matters connected with the decree, will consult with the Department of Justice before any decision is made.

The AAA has been opposed to the principle of paying fees to arbitrators. In the thousands of cases handled in its 14-year history fees have been paid to very few arbitrators and then only at the consent of both parties. In its regular work the AAA has been able to get the type of men desired for arbitrators without paying any fee. Arbitrators for the motion picture industry are expected to be the same type of men, conforming to the AAA's standards. In fact prospective arbitrators for the motion picture Tribunals are being more thoroughly investigated than has been the case for others.

Fees for Arbitrators

But the Department of Justice, during the negotiations for the decree, decided that the film arbitrators would be called on much more frequently than in other industries and should receive some fee. It is the policy of the association, however, that no one will be selected for an arbitrator who is looking for the position on account of the fees involved.

In answer to an inquiry from Abram F. Myers of Allied, the Association said no member of its board might receive any compensation or benefit from any arbitration held in the associations tribunals or in connection with its work. The association further pointed out, "There will be no appointments to our board of directors or advisory committees of any person known to be connected with the motion picture industry and no appointments have been made."

PARAMOUNT PREPARES DECREE INSTRUCTIONS

Austin C. Keough, vice-president and general counsel, and Louis Phillips, home office attorney, are preparing an analysis of the consent decree for the instruction of the field sales force. A similar booklet is being prepared by Twentieth Century-Fox.

After the Paramount decree instruction summary is completed, Mr. Keough and Mr. Phillips will begin personal tours of the company's exchanges to discuss the decree with sales personnel. The tours are expected to begin after the first of January.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox and RKO are also working on written instructions for the sales force and scheduling trips to branch offices by sales heads and lawyers.

"Little Three" Win a Point in Their Suit

The "Little 3," Columbia, United Artists and Universal, not parties to the consent decree, won the first point, even though minor, in their defense of the Government's anti-trust suit which was originally directed against the eight majors. The Department of Justice agreed not to simultaneously try the New York case and the three field suits in which the three non-theatre owning companies are also defendants, Schine suit in Buffalo, Griffith in Oklahoma City and the Crescent in Nashville. The trial order of the four suits was to be agreed upon this week.

Raftery Files Motion To Dismiss Complaint

On Monday Edward C. Raftery of O'Brien, Driscoll & Raftery, filed a motion to dismiss the Government's amended complaint on the charge that no cause of action was stated. The hearing has been set for January 7th before Judge Henry W. Goddard who signed the consent decree ending the action against the five theatre-owning companies November 20th.

Mr. Raftery also requested that if the motion to dismiss the complaint was denied that references in the complaint to the five consenting companies be stricken out as well as other sections which, he alleges, have no application to the non-theatre-owning companies.

It was reported that Columbia, represented by Louis D. Frohlich, of Schwartz & Frohlich, would join United Artists and Universal in the motions to dismiss the amended complaint or to strike out references to the "Big 5." Mr. Frohlich at a recent court hearing said that he would appeal the consent decree to the Supreme Court, if necessary.

If the "Little 3" find that the Government is not trying the four trust suits in "an orderly fashion" they may file again their motion to have Judge Goddard restrain the Government from prosecuting the suits in the field until the New York case is settled.

Additional Costs in B. & K. Settlement

In the settlement of the Chicago Balaban & Katz consent decree violation suit Paramount, Balaban & Katz and B. & K. Management must not only pay fines totalling $10,000, court costs of two or three thousands but a $10,000 fee for Edgar Eldredge, special master who took testimony and made a report which was accepted by the court, according to reports from Chicago.

All the original defendants, with the exception of the "Big 5" which have been dismissed from the case, have until January 2nd to file objections against or answers to the Government's interrogatories in the Griffith Amusement Company case in Oklahoma City. Robert L. Wright, who is in charge of the Griffith case and the "key" New York action for the Department of Justice has said that the Oklahoma case will be ready for trial first. But he did not announce whether or not it would actually be tried before the New York action.

Fox Wisconsin Amusement Company won Monday a suit brought against it in Milwaukee by the Oriental and Tower theatres, controlled by M. L. Annenberg. Circuit Judge Gustave G. Gehrz ruled that there was no breach of contract and that the matter of waiver of clearance was vested in Fox Wisconsin and could be used as it wished in the matter. It had been charged that clearance had been illegally waived in favor of Fox's Shorewood State theatres. Frederick W. Pride, of Dwight, Harris, Koegal and Caskey, represented Fox Wisconsin.

Ellis Suit to Federal Court

The $67,500 damage suit filed by Abe Ellis, operator of the Tower, Camden, against Twentieth Century-Fox in the Philadelphia Court of Common Pleas, charging failure to deliver films which had been contracted for, has been transferred to the U. S. District Court, at the behest of the picture company's attorneys.

Counsel for Mr. Ellis, on Tuesday, filed a petition for a hearing on Friday, this week, after which a date later than January 20th will be set for trial. Despite the transfer of the case to Federal jurisdiction, it remains a breach of contract litigation.

The Folley, Midwest, Interstate Cases

The Folley Amusement Corporation has informed the U. S. District Court in New York that it will take depositions of Harry Decker, Roy Haines and Edward Schnitzer, of Warner Brothers, before trial. The examinations are in connection with the triple-damage anti-trust suit against the eight majors, Republic and Monogram, charging that the plaintiff was forced to close the Folly in Brooklyn on account of lack of product.

In January trial is scheduled for three suits brought against the Interstate Circuit of Texas following the ruling of the courts made in February, 1939, that contracts between Interstate and the distributors requiring that subsequent runs charge a minimum of 25 cents admission violated the anti-trust laws. Independent exhibitors have charged that they were forced to raise admission prices from 20 cents to 25 cents and suffered losses in business. The trials are scheduled to open on January 13th, 15th and 20th in Dallas. A fourth case brought by Louis Richter was settled out of court.

MEDIATION OFFER BY AAA IN 11th HOUR OF ASCAP-BROADCASTERS WAR

Wired Proposal Comes as Settlement of Government Suit Against Society Is Discussed; Deadline January 1st

On Tuesday afternoon the American Arbitration Association acted to try to end the ASCAP-broadcasters fight by offering its services to arbitrate any existing or future dispute. The AAA is the duly appointed agency for arbitrating film disputes under the film consent decree. Lucius R. Eastman, chairman of the board of the AAA, sent the following telegram to Gene Buck, president of the society, and to Neville Miller, head of BMI: "The American Arbitration Association offers its services to ASCAP and BMI for arbitration of any controversies that may arise under any consent decree or contract establishing trade practices. Its panels of arbitrators and rules of procedure in all parts of the United States are at the disposal of your organizations and this association will appreciate the opportunity to be of service."

Mr. Miller said Tuesday night in Washington that his organization had no intention of entering into arbitration on the ASCAP contract. John G. Paine, ASCAP general manager, said ASCAP was willing to negotiate with the broadcasters under any auspices.

A consent-decree settlement of the Government's six-year-old suit against the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers appeared in the making this week, although Department of Justice officials denied that anything definite had yet been developed and refused to hazard a guess as to how long it would take to reach an agreement with the music society.

On Wednesday Justice Department officials pointed out that immediate action could be taken in the matter if ASCAP wished to conclude the suit before the end of the year.

Department of Justice officials Monday characterized as "premature" published reports that the terms of a settlement had been reached, pointing out that it was a common phenomena for stories of settlements to appear long before they were perfected, citing the publicity given the motion picture consent decree as an example.

"Per Use" Payments Seen

The reported basis for settlement of the case was abandonment by ASCAP of its demand for a percentage of the total commercial receipts of broadcasters in favor of a plan for a "per use" basis, long agitated by the radio industry. It was said also that a "clearance" system would be adopted, under which the networks would pay the license fees on chain programs instead of the individual stations.

Such a revision of the license system is being sought by the Government, but department officials would not say whether the music association has agreed to it. The reported settlement basis would eliminate the basis for the current controversy between the broadcasters and ASCAP, which has led to the effort to work ASCAP music off the air.

The Government's formula for settling the suit with ASCAP, according to the New York Times, has the following 10 points:

That ASCAP would discontinue blanket licensing of radio stations for the use of its music; that payment to ASCAP would be on a per program basis; that ASCAP would not seek any minimum guarantee; that music would be cleared at its source; that there would be no discrimination between stations; that composers and publishers would have an option on whether they wanted to vest their catalogues in the society; that the ASCAP board would be reorganized to provide for the election of new members; that the ASCAP method of distributing fees received would be revised; that the requirement that a new songwriter must have five songs published before joining ASCAP would be eliminated, and that publishers would pay ASCAP a regular fee for clearance of their catalogues.

On Tuesday it was also reported that both the broadcasters and ASCAP had independently approached the American Arbitration Association which is administrator of the motion picture arbitration system to learn what clause might be inserted in a future contract to avoid a "battle" like the one this year and other technical details of arbitration. The AAA's policy is to arbitrate contractual disputes whenever such are offered to the association by both parties. Frequently the AAA learns that it has been designated to arbitrate disputes arising from a contract only after the fight has started and the parties cannot agree among themselves.

ASCAP officials and representatives of the radio interests admitted there was some possibility of a settlement of the differences between them. As far as the possible conclusion of the trust suit launched by the Government six years ago, one ASCAP official said: "What will come of the negotiations, or whether anything will come of them, cannot be predicted at this stage."

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer music interests figured in the ASCAP-radio fight this week as the only film affiliated publishing houses not signed with ASCAP, and the chief holdout.

Even while rumors and reports of settlement of the Government suit and through that removing of the broadcasters' chief objections against ASCAP persisted, ASCAP and Broadcast Music, Inc., continued the fight with statements, answers, charges and counter charges coming from all interested parties. BMI announced that over 550 radio stations would sign its contracts by January 1st when the ASCAP licenses expire. Over 537 have already signed, representing over 92 per cent of the total dollar volume on the air, BMI said.

Neville Miller, president of BMI and the National Association of Broadcasters, said 370 composers had contributed BMI music and over 200,000 musical numbers are available. BMI pays at the rate of one cent per station per broadcast for each tune. It estimated that composers, under that arrangement, would receive between $1,200 and $1,800 for the three-month period during which a song enjoys its greatest popularity.

Other announcements from BMI were that it planned to publish, about December 21st, for distribution to member stations a hymnal containing titles whose broadcast rights are controlled by the radio music group; that the Sociedad Argentina de Autores y Compositores de Musica of Buenos Aires had assigned its performing rights to BMI, beginning on January 1st. Tango music is included in that organization's 30,000 songs.

Mr. Miller, speaking at the Eastern State Broadcasters' meeting in Washington on Friday of last week, said that not more than eight independent radio stations had signed the new ASCAP contract.

Independent stations in the metropolitan New York area were considering signing with both BMI and ASCAP to protect their supply of popular music, it was reported. One New York station, WHN, is controlled by Loew's, Inc., and will probably follow the decision of the Metro music interests in the fight. It has been reported that the Metro music group will stay with ASCAP.

Theatres Might Benefit

It was reported that theatres might obtain some extra business if the fight between ASCAP and the radio stations and networks becomes official January 1st with the ban of all ASCAP music from the air. If the radio audience becomes dissatisfied with radio musical programs which are admitted to be among the most popular, there may be more attendance at motion picture theatres, it was said.

ASCAP meanwhile issued a statement saying that a number of leading conductors and other musicians appearing on the radio would not be able to play their own compositions when ASCAP music is barred after January 1st.

The national press this week was taking sides in the radio-ASCAP battle. A number of papers had pieces favoring ASCAP. It was reported that the old animosity between newspapers and radio, even though newspapers own or control about one-third of the radio stations in the country, might break out again in connection with the ASCAP-BMI music dispute. Editor and Publisher, newspaper trade magazine, had an editorial titled "Get Together!" saying, "the society represents the best in American music" and urging both parties to get together "and spare our people a deluge of foreign propaganda through music."

The phonograph business was reported to be expecting a boom if efforts to settle the ASCAP-broadcasters' fight break down and ASCAP music is played by only a few radio stations in 1941.

C. Lloyd Egner, vice-president in charge of the NBC radio recording-division, has announced that subscribers to the NBC Thesaurus will have on hand 2,000 royalty-free selections by January 1st.

STATIONS MAY USE RESTRICTED RECORDS

Broadcasting stations may use phonograph records despite so-called restrictive use notices to the contrary thereon it was, in effect, held by the supreme court in Washington, D. C., this week.

The attitude of the court was disclosed in an order denying applications by orchestra leader Paul Whiteman and record-making RCA Manufacturing Company for review of a decision of the second circuit court of appeals in a suit brought by Mr. Whiteman against station WBOW, alleging unfair competition.

The trial court rendered a decision in Mr. Whiteman's favor with respect to some of the records allegedly wrongfully broadcast, because of a reservation of his rights in a 1934 contract with RCA Manufacturing Company.

CONCENTRATE DECREE COMPLAINTS ALLIED'S MYERS TELLS EXHIBITORS

Asks Members to Report on Decree's Adverse Effects to Headquarters so "National Scope" Can Be Shown

Protests against the decree, based on actual experience, may be expected to have more influence on the Department of Justice than speculation concerning possible adverse effect, according to National Allied which this week urged its members not to forward separately claims of alleged violation or damage done by the decree to the Government but to send them all to National Allied so that "the full scope and national character of the violation can be pointed out." (See page 14 for further developments on the consent decree.)

Abram F. Myers, general counsel and chairman of the board of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, pointed out from Washington last Saturday that the effects of the decree would be under supervision of a unit of the Department of Justice, headed by Robert L. Wright.

"The selection of Mr. Wright," Mr. Myers said, "will evoke no cheers from the exhibitors who place responsibility for the decree mainly on him and his associate, James V. Hayes. Nevertheless, Mr. Wright is acquainted with all the details of the situation and from that standpoint is well equipped for the work.

"Those who cried that the Neely Bill involved governmental regulation have consented to a decree that places them under the thumb of the Department of Justice," Mr. Myers remarked. But the supervision by the Government will be a check on the activities of the distributors and the arbitrators and will make it possible to decide whether additional relief is necessary, according to Mr. Myers.

March 26th Protest Cited

The part of Allied in the negotiations which led up to the consent decree was explained again in the bulletin. It was said that Allied was the only exhibitor organization to protest when the trade showings and selling in small block proposals were first made public in March, pointing out that Allied sent a protest dated March 26th, to the Attorney General.

It was announced that each Saturday Mr. Myers "studied the latest drafts at the Department of Justice and to the extent that they were at variance with the position taken by the board of directors, he criticized and opposed them." The report continued, "while the Department would not recede from its position in regard to the selling plan, and could not obtain the consent of the defendants to the more important suggestions made by Allied, it nevertheless is true that a considerable number of Allied's minor suggestions were adopted and embodied in the decree."

Mr. Myers pointed out that Allied had formed a policy of instructing its members in the practical, as well as theoretical significance of the decree, and discussed it at many conventions. At the various meetings it was discovered, Mr. Myers said, "there are some exhibitors who have lost a particular run of pictures and want to regain it, or who want to obtain some run of pictures, or who have clearance troubles, to whom the decree affords an opportunity to arbitrate their problems. It is idle to suppose that these exhibitors will boycott the decree and refuse to institute arbitration proceedings thereunder. The regional associations have performed a service in acquainting them with their rights. The organizations can perform a further service by aiding them."

On the question of the arbitration system established by the decree Mr. Myers made the following remarks, "some exhibitors have expressed skepticism as to the kind of a job the American Arbitration Association will do in providing arbitration under the decree. Undoubtedly its relations with the Hays Association at one time were very close. However, it is headed by a group of high-minded men and it deserves a fair chance to show what it can do. If it indulges in unethical practices or is guilty of partiality, a scandal will result and the whole system can and will be kicked over."

A poll is being conducted to determine when the annual meeting of the Allied directors will be held. It was pointed out that on account of the Presidential Inauguration the sessions could not be held on January 19th, 20th or 21st. S. E. Samuelson has suggested that the meeting be held late in the month of January so that another Allied Information Department (AID) report can be considered by the directors.

FRANCHISES PROTECT AFFILIATED CIRCUITS

Theatre circuits affiliated with the five companies consenting to the decree in the Government's "key" anti-trust suit are reported to have franchises with one or more of the other distributors, thereby protecting them from any product shortage under the block-of-five and trade show provisions of the decree. Furthermore, sales of a company to its affiliate are exempt from the decree so, it was reported this week, many affiliate circuits will not face the buying problem confronting independents under the decree when the selling provisions become effective on August 31st.

Clearance questions and not product were reported to be a concern of the affiliated circuits. It was said that several of the companies were negotiating with circuits looking to adjustments in clearance to avoid arbitration proceedings. Revisions of the existing clearance arrangements might result in a general reduction in admission prices, according to some affiliated circuit and other chain operators.

Universal Asks Tenders to Sell Preferred Stock

J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board of Universal Pictures, in New York, disclosed Thursday, December 12th, following a special meeting of the company's directors, that the company had asked tenders for sale to its first preferred stock and authorized the use of $1,000,000 for such purchase. Tenders of these share are to be submitted to the Commercial National Bank and Trust Company, New York, transfer agent, before 2:00 p.m. on December 30th, 1940, with delivery of and payment for such stock as may be accepted to be made on or about January 6th, 1941. There are 15,330 shares of preferred stock of the company at present outstanding. (Universal preferred stock, on the New York Stock Exchange, Tuesday afternoon closed at $117; low for the year was $59.)

"Since the issuance of the first preferred stock of the company in 1925," the call for tenders said, "all sinking fund payments thereon have been met up to and including June 30th, 1941, except for the years 1933 to 1939, both inclusive, when operating losses made such payments inadvisable. In view of current earnings, the company feels that it can now make further sinking fund payments. Such payments will have to be made out of capital surplus, since the company has no earned surplus.

"Although the audit of the company's accounts for the fiscal year ending November 2nd, 1940, has not been completed, it appears from the company's books that the net earnings after all charges including estimated taxes were approximately $2,400,000," declares the Universal statement. "During the year the company accumulated, and there is included in such earnings, approximately £390,000, which were blocked in Great Britain; the value of such pounds at the present official rate of exchange is $1,560,000.

"The first preferred stock acquired for the 1940 sinking fund payments was purchased at an average price of $86.81 per share, and the stock so far purchased for the 1941 sinking fund payments was purchased at an average price of $101.83 per share.

"The right is reserved to reject any and all offers," it was stated.

ADDITIONAL FINANCING NEEDED UNDER DECREE

Schaefer Sees Acceleration of Production, with Delay in Liquidating Negative Costs

The major companies need additional financing, because under the consent decree five of them are observing, they must accelerate production of pictures, and at the same time hold those pictures so they can be formed into blocks of five for sale, thus delaying liquidation of their investments, George J. Schaefer, president of RKO, pointed out on Wednesday.

"Pressure" in Studios

Mr. Schaefer arrived in New York this week, after a month at the studio; and shortly thereafter called in the trade press, informing them, among other things, that he might return to the studio in January, possibly for a stay of several months, because his presence was needed at a time when "pressure" must be applied to have as many pictures ready as possible when the decree begins operating September 1st.

Mr. Schaefer refused to confirm or deny reports of expected executive studio changes. He said he he did not like to talk about the subject.

The additional financing needed by the companies because of the decree is one of its most serious aspects, Mr. Schaefer emphasized. He remarked, "The sad part of it is that you have now to carry more inventory, without getting any more money for it. You can't liquidate your investment as fast."

He predicted an even greater tightening of budgets at the studio but added that the result probably would be a "decided change" in the quality of pictures. "Men," he said, "will be rewarded for their creative ability, rather than for having invested a substantial sum."

Profit sharing, such as practiced in other companies, he favored. So do others in the RKO organization, he said. People of ability are not afraid to "take the gamble," he asserted.

Exchanges in key cities, under the decree, will soon cooperate in hiring a local theatre for trade showings, after first using their own exchanges, he predicted.

Film Selling Costly

Selling of pictures under the decree will be more costly; more salesmen will have to be used; but how much more costly he found it on Wednesday difficult to estimate; and how many more salesmen are to be added to the RKO staff, he said he would take up this week with the home office sales staff.

RKO will probably have "42 to 45" pictures ready this year; and about 40 next year, when the company will operate fully under the decree, he declared. It will have "five to eight" pictures ready by August 31st, he added.

Reminded that a figure of 40 pictures for next year is a reduction from the average annual number for the company, Mr. Schaefer asserted that "too many smaller" pictures have been made; too many "program" pictures.

Of the 40 films, about 35 will be RKO's own; the rest will be from independent producers. He would not say who these would be, beyond admitting negotiations are now going on between the company and several independents who have not heretofore released through RKO. He admitted that Gene Towne and Graham Baker, producing team, have left RKO, and probably would join United Artists. Harry Goetz and Max Gordon, also, will not produce for RKO, he said, unless they make "The American Way."

Herbert Wilcox will continue making pictures for the company, he confirmed.

Mr. Schaefer hopes RKO will have the first block of five pictures, as required under the decree, ready by June, and the second block ready some time in September, but added that this spacing did not necessarily represent the spacing of bocks which will be observed when the company gets into decree routine.

He reminded those present that "this thing is new, after all" and said probably more time would be needed to sell the first two blocks.

Sales conventions will become a thing of the past, except for "educational purposes," Mr. Schaefer predicted. Anent the latter purposes, he insisted about 98 per cent of the salesmen and exhibitors still regarded the decree as "Greek" and needed it explained to them.

Cooperation Expected

The average exhibitor will probably take the groups as arranged by the company, Mr. Schaefer expects. He thinks, also, that while first runs will probably be able to obtain only one block at a time, the second and third runs will be able to secure several blocks at a time, because of their booking lag.

He did not see collusion between the majors, in offering groups at the same time, beyond admitting that, because all will be trying to produce and group as many pictures as possible, coincidence will possibly occur in the offering of groups during a certain period.

A shift of home office sales and publicity departments from New York to Hollwood is not seen by the RKO president. He thought merely that more persons would probably be employed by those departments.

No shortage of product will occur, he predicted. Possible slower delivery of product will enable exhibitors to catch up on back bookings, try other companies not previously contracted, and play their pictures longer, for all the money in them, he predicted.

Mr. Schaefer also predicted a revision in the U. S. tax laws. He said the present effect was to make exhibitors lower admission prices. A general policy of lowered admissions, he asserted, would be "disastrous" for the industry at a time when it had lost most of its foreign markets. He thought a beneficial revision would have the tax start on the first ten cents.

PLAN TO RE-OPEN LONG-DARK HOUSE

The Minnesota theatre in Minneapolis, which has been dark for nearly a year may be reopened New Year's Eve with a policy of vaudeville and motion pictures it was learned Monday. Attorneys for the Minneapolis Theatre Co., owners of the theatre, are preparing to petition Walter H. Newton, referee in bankruptcy, to call a meeting of creditors to consider the deal. Under the deal the theatre would be operated by the Middle States Corp., operating theatres in Milwaukee.

New additions to the Paramount sales staff in Philadelphia is Nat Harris.

Swedish Industry 'Unhurt' by War

The Swedish film industry has been virtually untouched by the war, according to reports submitted to the U. S. Department of Commerce from the American commercial attache in Stockholm.

Although one or two of the smaller producing companies have been eliminated since 1939, the larger companies are operating at levels equal to or exceeding last year. Since the German occupation of Norway and Denmark, shipping lanes have been restricted for imports into Sweden and foreign exchange regulations have been tightened, but importation of films continues.

During this year, no theatres have been bombed or damaged, none has been closed and no new houses have been opened. There are, in Sweden, 2,134 theatres, all wired for sound. The Swedish Government plans no quota legislation on films from the United States. During the first six months of 1940, a total of 3,831 pictures, including prints, were censored. Of this total, 1,028 were American, 2,278 were Swedish, and the balance were from the various other countries.

Generally, the censor rejects pictures because of political implications. During the first half of the current year, 11 films were banned, seven of them from the United States. For the most part, positive prints are shipped to Sweden from America.

Masters to New York To Confer with Kelly

Haskell Masters, Canadian saies manager for United Artists, left Toronto on Tuesday for New York, where he will confer with home office executives on the new executive sales post which has been offered to him.

Arthur W. Kelly, UA vice-president and general sales manager, this week said he would have no statement to make regarding Mr. Masters' prospective appointment until he had discussed the matter with him.

Paramount Schedules Eight Films for Siegel

Paramount has assigned Sol C. Siegal, new producer, to supervise production of from eight to 12 features during the 1941-1942 season. Included among them will be Owen Wister's "The Virginian," in color, probably with Joel McCrea in the lead.

Mr. Siegel is also expected to produce "The Paramount Parade," a Henry Aldrich comedy, and "Two Bad Angels", concerning British refugee children. Eugene Zukor, Joseph Sistrom and Jules Schermer will assist.

Army Film for Republic

"Rookies' Roost," a comedy on national conscription by F. McGrew Willis, will go before the cameras at the Republic studios soon. Albert J. Cohen will supervise production.

Dart Becomes Booker

Kermit Dart has become booker for the Lyric Theatre, Indianapolis, and others, and is working in Chicago. He was formerly production manager at the Lyric. William McIllwain replaces him there.

METRO PUTS ON OPENING SHOWS FOR 'FLIGHT COMMAND' IN FOUR NATIONS

Warners "Santa Fe Trail" Party in New Mexico; Paramount Has Broadway Premiere for Benny's "Love Thy Neighbor"

Concentrated local field previewing of new product went out of normal bounds this week, when Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer put on a "world premiere," not in four or five theatres in one city, but in four theatres in four different countries, opening its "Flight Command," a story of the U. S. Navy, Tuesday, in Washington, D. C., Mexico City, Havana and Toronto. In each the theatre premieres were part of the observance of Pan-American Aviation Day.

Meanwhile, Paramount, with a Jack Benny picture to open in New York, "Love Thy Neighbor," closed its first run "show-window," the New York Paramount, for several hours Tuesday afternoon, preparatory to a full-fledged "Broadway opening," preceded by a "tremendous" cocktail party at the Stork Club, attended by Jack Benny, Mary Livingstone, Fred Allen and the Jello troupe, and crowned by attendance of these and others at the opening in the newly decorated theatre that evening.

"Wind" Premiered Again

And, even as the news of these two openings this week was reported by press and radio, serving as aids to attendance at those pictures, the reverbations of last week's openings were slow to die. With a fanfare of three days, Warner Brothers' "Santa Fe Trail" had opened in that New Mexico city Saturday; and, in Atlanta, in the same theatre, on the same date, December 12th, in which last year it had a world premiere, MGM last Thursday opened its "Gone With the Wind" for general release, and happily reported, after the opening, that a canvass of the audiences showed more than 70 per cent of the persons there were seeing the film for the first time.

One company, it appears, has the opinion that a "quiet opening" might, in these times, attract some attention. So RKO will open its "Kitty Foyle," much heralded in the magazines and newspapers, and in the literary world, in Philadelphia next Friday, without the usual Hollywood fanfare. Not a star will be present.

"Hemispheric Opening"

In four chief cities of four countries on the North American Continent, Canada, the United States, Cuba, and Mexico, MGM on Tuesday evening opened its "Flight Command". In each of the cities, Toronto, Washington, Havana, and Mexico City, the openings were preceded by banquets, celebrations, and speeches, attended by Governmental, aviation and political officials, and other luminaries; for MGM had tied in the opening of its picture, which itself is based on the U. S. Navy air arm, with the Western Hemisphere's celebration of Pan-American Aviation Day.

The lead-off dinner was in Washington, at the Carlton Hotel, under the sponsorship of the National Aeronautic Association, with Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity for MGM, as the toastmaster. Among the notables present at this dinner, which preceded the premiere at the Loew's Capitol, were Admiral Harold Stark, chief of naval operations for this country; General George Marshall, U. S. Army Chief of Staff; Leo Rowe, director-general of the Pan-American Union; Juan Terry Trippe, head of the Pan-American Airways; Senators Sherman Minton, Robert Wagner, and James Davis; Eugene Meyer, Nathan Straus, C. V. Whitney, Thomas Fortune Ryan, III; and Major General H. H. Arnold chief of the U. S. Army Air Corps.

Mr. Dietz sounded the keynote of the industry's co-operation in national defense when he pointed out that, while the movies don't produce tanks or airplanes, their importance lies in their ability to create "morale-power."

Hostess at the dinner was Miss Adeline Cox, 20-year-old Pennsylvania Central Airline stewardess, earlier named "Miss Flight Command" after being judged the prettiest of all airline hostesses. Present from among MGM star ranks was Walter Pidgeon, who in the film portrays a flight commander.

Talks of Admiral Stark, General Marshall, Dr. Rowe, and others, were broadcast that evening over the Mutual Broadcasting System.

In Toronto, the dinner preceding the opening was attended by the Dominion's most famed flyers and sponsored by the Toronto Flying Club. W. A. "Billy" Bishop spoke.

In Mexico City, President Manual Avila Camacho attended, accompanied by his cabinet, and representatives of other Latin-American countries.

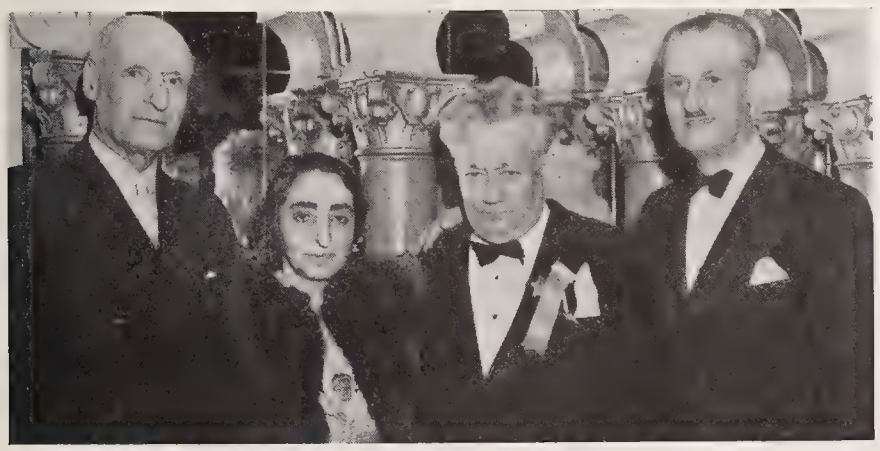
On Sunday evening, the picture was previewed to newspaper and Washington notables on board a PCA transport plane, flying from the latter city to Kitty Hawk, North Carolina, "birthplace of aviation."

The Advertising Club, of Washington, last week commended MGM for its "civic consciousness and its spirit, and its high standards," in connection with the "hemispheric premieres".

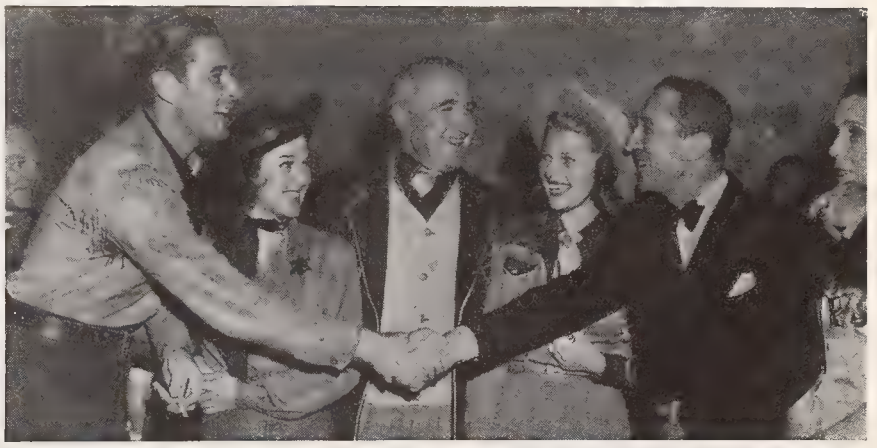
"Santa Fe" Excitements

Not the least important in the occurrences during the three-day celebration in Santa Fe, New Mexico (Friday, Saturday, Sunday) incident to the opening of Warner Brothers "Santa Fe Trail" in three theatres of that city, were the collapses of two of the company's stars, May Robson and Olivia de Havilland. The former, 75 years old, fell ill Friday night, December 13th, first day of the ceremonies. The high altitude was blamed; and she was rushed to a hospital in Albuquerque, 2,000 feet lower than Santa Fe. Miss de Havilland collapsed the same day of appendicitis. Doctors decided not to operate.

Both cases received national publicity.



The celebration and premiere in the old New Mexico city was marked by Indian ceremonial dances, the donning of costumes by locals and visitors, much jollity; and by the presence of two huge delegations, one from Hollywood, the other from New York, both consisting of newspapermen, photographers, the company's executives, and the stars.



Festivities began as soon as the Eastern contingent met the western crowd at Lamy, New Mexico, on Friday, the 13th, and journeyed, en

SHOWMEN TO FIGHT NEW SUNDAY LAW

Exhibitors and sports promoters are reported contemplating legal action to restrain Palmyra, N. J., officials from enforcing a new ordinance restricting the showing of Sunday movies, voted by the electorate November 5th, last. Under the new law, shows would be restricted to the period between 1 and 6 P. M., and between 8 and 11:15 P. M. It also prohibits "special inducements" such as prizes or lowering of admissions and compels exhibitors to repeat Sunday shows on week-days.

masse, into Santa Fe. The next day, 20,000 lined the streets of the town to watch the galaxy of stars and players greet the crowds from a "covered wagon" platform between the Alley and Lensic theatres. Meanwhile, Rudy Vallee directed a street show, contributed by the personalities on the junket.

S. Charles Einfeld, Warners' director of advertising and publicity, led groups of publicity and advertising men from the home office and the studios. Mort Blumenstock led the Eastern contingent and Robert Taplinger headed the studio group. Ed Manson handled some details on the eastern train, while the Coast train was handled by Bill Belcher, Jerry Hoffman, Carlyle Jones, Ken Whitemore, Irving Fine, Bill Blowitz and Lou Espinosa.

The official program listing said it was "the greatest coagulation of movie stars celebrities, and official personalities" ever. Some of the newspaper men referred to their trip as the "junket to end all junkets". On the program were the public reception on Friday to the visitors from Hollywood, Chicago, and New York, at Fort Marcy Stadium, a "monster pioneer pageant," coronation of Miss de Havilland as "The Queen of Santa Fe," an Indian ceremonial, "The Burning of Zozobra," the "Friday the 13th Fandango," also by Indians, and the Governor's Grand Ball. Saturday's events included a sports carnival at the city's Ski Club, a luncheon, a pioneer parade, Pueblo Indian ceremonials, the triple theatre premiere, and a Grand Jubilee Ball. The special trains left Sunday.

"Wind" General Premiere

With crowds thronging the street in front of the theatre, blocking all traffic at the five-street intersection, and with a battery of powerful lights illuminating the front, and a 26-foot anniversary birthday cake atop the marquee, MGM's "Gone With the Wind" returned to Loew's Grand Theatre, Atlanta, Thursday evening, December 12th, the date on which it had its world premiere last year. The occasion this time was the "general release world premiere," and proceeds of the brilliantly attended opening this time went to the British War Relief.

The area's great attended; among them the Governor of the state, E. D. Rivers, Mayor Hartsfield, of Atlanta, and Margaret Mitchell, author of the best selling book from which the film was made.

The airplane carrying Lawrence Olivier, Vivien Leigh, and director Alfred Hitchcock to the premiere was grounded by fog, after circling the city several times. The personalities were forced to stay in Augusta. However, from the standpoint of the company, regrettable as their inability to attend the premiere may have been, the publicity gained from the mishap was valuable, being carried over the nation by the wire services.

Mr. Hitchcock was to have directed a scene, with Miss Leigh, from the picture, on the theatre's stage.

Corroboration of the estimate of 50,000,000 persons as still an audience for the film was found by MGM home office officials, from a poll of the audience at the opening Thursday evening. It was said that 70 per cent of the persons asked, declared they had never before seen the picture.

Read to the audience was a message from Leslie Howard, now in London with the British Army, thanking attendees, and the American people, for support of the British.

"Foyle" in Philadelphia

The world permiere of RKO's "Kitty Foyle" is to be held at the Boyd Theatre, Philadelphia, next Friday. None of the stars of the picture, among them Ginger Rogers, will be present.

Part of the crowd that thronged Santa Fe streets for the premiere of "Santa Fe Trail" and the celebrations attendant thereon.

The fact emphasizes that the premiere will be "quiet". The celebration attendant to the opening will be local, and will have Christopher Morley, author of the book, as guest of honor.

A local society group may sponsor the opening for charity. Plans for that were being worked on this week. In conjunction with the Philadelphia Daily News, the Warner circuit is conducting a "search" for a local "Kitty Foyle". A serialization of the book has been running in the Philadelphia Bulletin.

"Love Thy Neighbor"

World premiere of the Paramount—Jack Benny film, "Love Thy Neighbor," occurred Tuesday evening at 9:00 P. M. at the New York Paramount Theatre "show-window" of the company's affiliated theatre circuit, after the theatre had been closed earlier that afternoon for special lobby displays, a new stage program incident to the picture, and radio equipment. The special Broadway opening was unusual to the theatre; so was the special broadcast over radio station WOR, of the Mutual Broadcasting System.

Mr. Benny and Mr. Allen appeared together for the first time on the stage at the Paramount, although they have appeared together before on the radio. Don Wilson, announcer on Mr. Benny's program, acted as master of ceremonies on the WOR broadcast.

Guests at the opening included: Mary Livingstone, Stanton Griffis, Barney Balaban, Adolph Zukor, Austin Keough, John W. Hicks, Neil F. Agnew, Tom Dorsey, Jese Block, Edwin Weisl, John D. Hertz, Russell Holman, Leonard Goldenson, Leon Netter, Charles Reagan, Joseph J. Unger, Oscar Morgan, M. F. Gowthorpe, Pat Scollard, Harry Kalcheim and John Hertz, Jr.

Interviews, cocktail parties, and dinner, participated in by the picture's principals and newspaper men, preceded the opening. Advance festivities for the premiere in fact got under way Sunday evening, with the devotion by Mr. Benny and a goodly portion of his Jello radio program to the picture and its world premiere. On Monday, Mr. Benny, Fred Allen, and others of the Jello troupe were interviewed by newspaper, fan and syndicate writers; and then attended the amateur boxing matches at the Madison Square Garden. On Tuesday afternoon, Messrs. Benny, Allen and the members of their respective radio groups were guests of honor at a special cocktail party in the Stork Club. They then went to the theatre, where, before seeing the film, they were interviewed at the radio microphone in the lobby.

Neil Agnew, Paramount vice-president in charge of sales, said on Monday the film would have 247 day and date Christmas showings. National release is next Friday.

J. P. O'Loghlin Heads Canadian Distributors

J. P. O'Loghlin, general manager of 20th Century-Fox, Ltd., of Canada, has been elected president of the Motion Picture Distributors' Association, it was announced this week in Toronto. The organization represents all major distributing companies in Canada.

Colonel John A. Cooper continues as chairman of the board. The association will function virtually the same as the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America operates in the United States. It will have only an indirect connection with the latter organization.

Postpone Meeting

In order not to conflict with the testimonial luncheon on Thursday at the Hotel Astor, New York, to E. K. O'Shea, newly appointed central division manager of MGM and Jack Bowen, newly appointed New York district manager, the meeting of the amusement division of the Federation of Jewish Charities was postponed until Friday, this week.

Also postponed until Friday was the luncheon meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, scheduled for Thursday at the Hotel Edison.

Colonel Joy's Contract

Col. Jason Joy, public relations head at 20th Century-Fox studio since 1935, has been signed to a new two-year contract, it was announced today.

BANK NIGHT TAX FOR AGE PENSIONS; OHIO ITO WANTS LEVY ON BINGO

Two State Legislatures Eye Games as Source of New Revenue; Cities, State Open New Drives on Legality

Pennsylvania legislators want theatre "Bank Nights" to pay for state old-age pensions; Ohio exhibitors seek a state tax on Bingo games conducted non-theatrically in competition; the legality of Bank Night hangs in the balance in a court action in Ohio; cities in several territories are cracking down on games, as the practice grows locally. Thus do legal and legislative arguments continue over giveaways and chance games in cities and states.

Ohio ITO's Attack

Citing the fact that admission tax collections by Ohio are lower than those of other taxable lines, due to dwindling box office receipts, caused, he says, by outside competition on which the state does not levy an impost, rather than to the quality of the picture product, P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, Columbus, has asked exhibitors to make a detailed report of "Bingo" activities in their communities, which data will be brought before the State Legislature and Federal Congress. Mr. Wood reports a 12.3 per cent increase in sales tax collections for the first 11 months of this year, compared with the corresponding period of 1939, while admission tax shows only a six per cent increase. In the numerical breakdown, he shows 30 per cent increase in automobile taxes, 12 per cent in radios and musical instruments, and 11 per cent in jewelry. There is no breakdown available of the tax between various lines of amusement, Mr. Wood says.

A report by Eugene T. Weatherly, Cincinnati police chief, which shows total attendance of 286,182 at 253 local Bingo parties, in November. Gross was $205,597, prizes were $49,960, leaving a net of $155,636 to sponsoring organizations. Average net cost per player was 54.4 cents.

October figures were 253 games, attended by 308,538 persons. Gross was $222,818; prizes, $54,246, and net, $168,571. Average net cost per person was 54.6 cents.

Bank Nights in Ohio

Pending a decision by the Ohio Supreme Court, in Columbus, on the legality of Bank Night in the appealed case of Troy Amusement Co., against which suit was brought by a taxpayer to discontinue the game at the Mayflower theatre, in Troy, because it violated the Ohio lottery law, Common Pleas Judge Fred B. Cramer, at Hamilton, will defer action in a test case, at Middletown, involving the validity of an anti-gambling ordinance, put into effect there October 5th.

The Middletown city solicitor has filed motion seeking to dissolve a temporary injunction granted Northio Theatres, Inc., in which police were restrained from making threatened arrests of persons purchasing admission tickets to participate in Sweepstakes at the Paramount, in Middletown.

The city also is seeking to dissolve a similar injunction granted a church which conducts weekly Bingo parties.

A situation in Reading, Pa., that bars Bingo from theatres and yet finds the game mushrooming under promoted auspices all over the city, is causing concern among local theatre men. The issue may come to a head during the holidays with local newspapers carrying advertisements of almost 40 Bingo games, using more space than the theatres, offering everything from roast dinners to candlewick spreads and other inducements. The bingo parlors, with a 30 to 40 cent admission price range, all have added door prizes as added inducement. It is estimated that there are at least 100 bingo parlors in the city. While theatres can play bingo for merchandise, they are of the opinion that they can't compete with the amount of giveaways of the regular bingo establishments. Money giveaways, even use of baby government bonds, are prohibited.

Pennsylvania Proposal

In Pennsylvania a plan to legalize bank-nights in motion picture theatres has been included in the drafts of legislative bills completed by State Senator John J. Haluska, Democrat of Cambria County, calling for a State "Townsend Plan" that would give residents of Pennsylvania sixty years of age or over an assured income of $60 a month. The bill, to be introduced in the next session of the legislature, opening January 7th, would be financed by legalizing and taxing all forms of gambling, including pari-mutuel horse race betting, slot machines and bingo as well as bank nights.

Exclusive of bingo, the financing program would yield about $185,000,000 a year, according to Senator Haluska's estimates. He said he was working on surveys to determine the revenue that might result from a levy on chance games receipts. Based on estimates of figures from New York and New Jersey, horse racing would bring in more than $20,000,000; slot machines would yield about $150,000,000, and bank nights would account for approximately $15,000,000 a year, the Senator claimed.

Slot machines would be taxed on the basis of $50 a year for one, $35 each for two, and $25 each for all over two in a single establishment; while theatres featuring bank-nights would be taxed a flat rate of $1,000 a year. The Senator predicted a "battle to the finish" on the measures.

A favorable decision on the legality of two cash giveaway games introduced in Philadelphia theatres last month, came this week from Judge Howard A. Davis, Philadelphia, following a hearing on a friendly test suit. Charles Goldfine, operator of the Alden theatre, and Dave Mollivar, operator of the Viola theatre, where "Zingo" and "Cash Quiz" were introduced, brought action against Superintendent of Police, Howard P. Sutton, seeking the return of the equipment, including transcriptions, trailers and cards, seized in a raid on both houses.

David Yaffee, attorney for the theatre operators, argued that in spite of the cash awards, the games did not constitute gambling, but rather a display of skill. "Zingo," played in the manner of "Bingo," employs the use of sound effects during a recorded dramatization instead of numbers. The game had been used in radio on station WIP, Philadelphia, sponsored by the Philadelphia Daily News. "Cash Quiz" is a question and answer game, calling for yes or no answers to the queries.

Increase in Wilkes-Barre

In Wilkes-Barre, Pa., bingo continues to be one of the leading amusement attractions for the local citizenry. A recent survey shows that in the past year the number of games have increased from forty to fifty, practically all giving cash prizes, with about forty of the games advertised in the daily newspapers.

Meanwhile, the Lockwood & Gordon and M & P theatre circuits in Boston have installed "Cash Quiz" in their houses. The games will be distributed by Premium Promotions Syndicate, in that city.

As part of the anti-gambling drive inaugurated in Massillon, Ohio, Police Chief Stanley W. Switter has warned the theatres of that town the games must stop, and that arrests will follow if they fail to comply with the new order.

At the present time, the largest theatrical bingo game is that operated twice weekly by Al Gilbert in his Riviera and Brighton theatres, with admission prices of 75 cents, while Karp's Cameo theatre is reported planning the installation of bingo games with a 68 cent admission.

The State Fair Coliseum and the Rivoli theatres, both in Syracuse, are reported to be doing capacity business with the first running "Dollar Bingo" on Wednesday nights and the latter giving away four-door sedans on Mondays and Saturdays.

After several weeks testing in Rochester, N. Y., the Schine circuit dropped chance games from three of its larger theatres, the Lake, Webster and West End. However, "Super Bingo" games are staying at the Riviera, Madison and Monroe theatres—also Schine theatres—on Wednesday nights and business at these houses is reported to be good.

Theatres Combine on Giveaway

In Seattle, Wash., five first run theatres, operated by three competing circuits, combined on a mammoth automobile giveaway held Friday, December 13th. On that night, the Fifth Avenue, Orpheum and Paramount theatres of the Hamrick-Evergreen circuit, John Danz's Palomar theatre and Jensen-VonHerberg's Liberty theatre jointly raffled two Dodge sedans. Tickets for the raffle were given away with all paid admissions to any one of the theatres.

The Quad-Cities Theatre Managers Association have inaugurated a new attraction idea by which they will give away various electrical appliances. The theatres located in Rock Island, Moline and East Moline, Illinois, and in Davenport, Iowa, are cooperating in the idea with the local utilities companies.

Meanwhile, in Illinois, theatre games may suffer at the hands of Attorney General John Cassidy, who is enforcing to the utmost state laws against gambling and games of chance. The first to be affected so far by court order are the local bookies.

The law concerning minors in games of chance will be tested in Muncie, Ind., in a suit brought against the Rivoli, Strand, Grand, Uptown and Hoosier theatres by Mary E. Kerkondis, 16 years old, who alleges she held the winning number in a drawing conducted jointly by the houses, and was refused the prize when she was called to the stage because she was under 18 years old.

LOEW-RKO CIRCUITS GIVE EARLY SHOWS

So that children will not stay awake too late, the RKO and Loew circuits in New York this week began cooperating in a policy of morning shows during the Christmas - New Year vacation period. In the Loew theatres, one morning show was to be given, with free candy and cookies; at the RKO houses, there were to be "kiddie matinees" with Disney cartoons and short subjects. On Thursday, the theatres were to distribute gifts, toys, and Christmas baskets.

CHICAGO GROUPS STUDY NEW CENSORSHIP PLAN

Hearings Continue on Proposal for Group Empowered Only to Pass on Children's Pictures

The controversy in Chicago between those who wish to maintain the city police censor board and those backing a proposed ordinance, which would establish a group empowered only to prevent minors from seeing pictures considered unfit, continued this week in public hearings before the judiciary committee of the City Council.

To Be Appointed by Mayor

The proposed ordinance which would eliminate censorship for adults was introduced by Earl Dickerson, negro alderman, and is sponsored by the Civil Liberties Committee. The new body which the ordinance would substitute for the present police censors would be appointed by Mayor Edward J. Kelly.

The present censor board is under civil service rule, and its members were selected by a competitive examination held some years ago at which time noted educators and college professors passed on the merits of the applicants for the positions on the board.

Those speaking at the hearing Monday in favor of retaining the present censor board included Mrs. M. McClure, president of the Better Films Council of Chicagoland and Mrs. George Hanson of the Catholic Women's League. The proposed amendment was indorsed by Mrs. Charles Merriam, wife of a professor at Chicago University; Rev. George Gibson, Hyde Park Congregational Church; William Wolf, International Ladies Garment Workers; Ira Latimer, executive secretary of the Civil Liberties Committee.

The present censor board was defended by Mrs. McClure who said that only 25 percent of the films released in Chicago had been approved by the Better Films Council as suitable for the whole family. Certain groups need censorship, she asserted. It was also pointed out that the Legion of Decency condemned nine out of 590 pictures viewed and the Chicago censor board had rejected or given an "adult only" permit to only 17 out of 1,646 pictures.

Mrs. McClure defended the U. S. government documentary film "The Fight For Life" as a great picture, but stated that it should be shown to select audiences of doctors, educators and special groups, not in a theatre where people go to be entertained. She identified this film as an educational film, not in the entertainment classification. "I doubt if an exhibitor would want to book a film which is classified as educational. It seems that this type of film is not as profitable as a picture with entertainment as the theme," she continued.

Ad Supervision Suggested

A suggestion that perhaps the advertising in front of the theatres as well as that placed in newspapers be supervised was also made by Mrs. McClure, who pointed out that the smaller theatres on South State street and West Madison street, used sex as an attraction in their advertising in front of their theatres.

Mrs. McClure concluded, "statistics show that 65 percent or 75 million people in the United States do not have more than an elementary school education. Therefore the films today have become the text-book for a majority of Americans. With such a condition I wish to state that I am in favor of the present censor board, as I believe they are doing their utmost to do a job that will benefit the majority of people."

Mrs. Charles Merriam, wife of a University of Chicago professor, told the committee that she objected to the term censor and suggested that "regulation" be substituted. She claimed that a majority of countries throughout the world had regulations for minors with respect to movies, but that because of "powerful movie interests," this was not so in the United States.

The consent decree was injected into the hearing by Rev. George Gibson of the Hyde Park Congregational church who spoke for the proposed change in the ordinance. He said it was his belief that under the terms of the consent decree, an exhibitor would be able to see the pictures at trade showings and therefore determine if the picture was fit for exhibition at his theatre. He also pointed out that under the proposed ordinance the city would have the right to go into court and prosecute any exhibitor who showed a film which was immoral, indecent or ridiculed any race, creed or color.

The International Ladies Garment Workers union was represented by William Wolf, who identified himself as head of the educational division of the union. He complained to the committee that while he had viewed "The Fight For Life" in New York, he was unable to see it in Chicago because of the censor's ban. He declared he believed such a picture would be of invaluable aid and provide important information to expectant mothers.

Pro-Nazi Influence Charged

Ira Latimer, executive secretary of the Civil Liberties Committee whose organization is sponsoring the proposed ordinance, said he had been informed by Police Commissioner Allman that he would welcome the shift of the censor board to some other department.

Mr. Latimer also charged the censor board with being pro-Nazi because of their willful and arbitrary banning of anti-Nazi films while issuing permits for the showing of pro-Nazi films in Chicago. He asserted that the action of the censor board in the past in banning films which are unfriendly to other nations, is a function of the State Department of the United States, not the local censor board. He also read sections of the Production Code and presented it for the record.

The Catholic Women's League, is for the present censorship method according to Mrs. George Hanson, who appeared for the League at the meeting. "If the present censor board is abolished it will be a great step backward," Mrs. Hanson said.

Morris Leonard, counsel for Balaban & Katz sent a telegram asking for an opportunity to appear before the committee. The next hearing was set for January 13th. Alderman Hy Brody, vice-chairman, said the motion picture industry would have delegates present then to give their opinions on the proposed change.

To date, Jack Kirsch, president of the Allied Theatres of Illinois; Clyde Eckhardt, branch manager of Twentieth Century-Fox, and Morris Leonard of Balaban & Katz have been the only representatives of the motion picture industry, at the hearings.

Dwight Spracher Transferred

Dwight Spracher, salesman for the Paramount Seattle exchange, is being advanced to a selling assignment at the San Francisco branch. He will be succeeded in Seattle by Glen Haviland, who in turn will be replaced in the Eastern Washington area by Ward Pennington, formerly of San Francisco.

Religious Series In 16mm. Starts

The first of a series of some 250 religious films in 16 mm, "The Saviour Is Born," was previewed before an audience of upwards of 700 clergymen at Pilgrim Hall of the Broadway Tabernacle Church, Broadway and 56th Street, New York, on Monday night, under auspices of the Federation of Churches of New York City. It tells the story of the nativity.

The first 50 of the films, made for the Biblical Photo Plays, Inc., 551 Fifth Avenue, New York, of which Charles Anson Bond, is president, will be devoted to the life of Christ. All of the subjects will be religious in theme and are for exhibition exclusively in churches.

The initial production, "The Saviour Is Born," is a 3-reel film in color and sound and runs about 22 minutes. It is one of the series of productions financed by Mr. Bond. It was made in the Metropolitan studios, Los Angeles. Bookings are being handled through the offices of Biblical Photo Plays, Inc.

Rahal Drops Suit

The suit of Fozie Rahal, owner of the Tomorrow Publishing Co., of Oklahoma City, Okla., against the Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., and the Standard Theatres Corp., operators of the midwest theatre in Oklahoma City, which showed the film, "Charlie McCarthy, Detective," was dismissed this week on a motion of the plaintiff's attorney who said he was unable to get witnesses to Oklahoma City. The suit, before Judge Bower Broaddus, in federal court, sought to collect $50,000 damages, alleging that the magazine Tomorrow, published in Oklahoma City and its editor, were held up to ridicule in the film.

Theatre Operation Suit Filed

A suit brought by Joseph Stoia, owner of the Circle and Midway theatres in Detroit, Mich., to restrain completion or operation of the nearby Carmen theatre, which is nearly completed, is in progress before Judge Guy A. Miller of the circuit court. Mr. Stoia's suit is based upon an agreement with Joseph Miskinis, his former partner, under which it was agreed by both parties that Mr. Miskinis would not operate a theatre within four miles of Mr. Stoia's theatres. The suit charges that the theatre being built is secretly owned by Mr. Miskinis.

A writ of attachment for $31,487, was obtained by Patrick J. Monaghan on Monday, against Gaumont British Corp., Ltd., in the New York supreme court. Mr. Monaghan has filed suit for the amount as assignee of a judgment obtained by Constance Bennett against the company in 1938 for alleged breach of contract.

Morey Goldstein, Boston salesman for MGM, will arrive January 1st to take over the managerial duties in the New Haven office.

Ray Copeland Shifted

Raymond H. Copeland, Paramount's Des Moines branch manager for 13 years, has been transferred to the Kansas City office. Joseph T. Manfre, Kansas City manager for 8 years, succeeds Mr. Copeland in Des Moines.

LITHO U

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Late one night last week, radio station WOR, Newark, received a mysterious telegram from Tacoma, Washington. It read:

CONTACT BILL BOJANGLES ROBINSON COLORED TAP DANCER COME TO TACOMA SOON AS POSSIBLE VERY IMPORTANT NO NEWSAPER PUBLICATION

CAPTAIN JAY CHAVIS

The cryptic wire sounded urgent, so the WOR master control room engineer who took the telegram immediately telephoned Nat Abramson, WOR's Artist Bureau head, and read him the message. Puzzled, Abramson listened in bewilderment, trying to figure it out. Finally he sent the following reply to the West Coast Captain:

CANNOT UNDERSTAND WIRE REGARDING ROBINSON DO NOT MANAGE HIM WHAT'S IT ABOUT?

WOR ARTISTS BUREAU

Back flashed another telegram from Tacoma:

CANNOT EXPLAIN WAR SECRET

CAPTAIN JAY CHAVIS

Not wishing to proceed without further confirmation from the Army, Abramson turned the telegrams over to Dave Driscoll, WOR's director of special features and news, who immediately contacted Army Headquarters in New York for a fuller explanation.

The Army conducted a speedy investigation and the next day broke the news to WOR: The "Captain" is a resident of a Tacoma mental institution.

That big "million-dollar" yacht belonging to Axel Wenner-Gren, which carried the Duke of Windsor and his Duchess to Miami, from Bermuda, the other day, for the Duchess' tooth extraction, is the same vessel on which Hollywood's Greta Garbo "hid-out," a few years ago. Hollywood wondered and wondered about her long unexplained absence. She was on the yacht at sea, with Wenner-Gren and his wife, Greta's compatriots from Sweden.

Anything may now be expected from Wally Butterworth and Parks Johnson, Columbia broadcasters. Visiting Arizona, recently, they hiked along the Hassayampa River, and drank lustily of its waters. An old Indian legend has it that one drinking from the Hassayampa will never again tell the truth.

Streamlined movie exhibition is growing. At the Paris, Burro Castle and Lensic theatres in Santa Fe, New Mexico, where Warners, last weekend put on their big opening for "Santa Fe Trail," visiting reporters and film critics sat comfortably during the performance in rocking-chair loge seats. Originator of the idea in that western land was a man known as "Grandma" Greer, father of E. John Greer, present owner-operator of the three theatres. Seems that "Grandma" Greer was a great old movie fan and insisted upon homey comfort while he was seated to watch his screen favorites.

The Log Cabin theatre, conducted by C. S. Humphrey, in Oklahoma City, goes even further. It boasts of a crying room for wailing babies, 50 large, double-width seats, for lovers, for large persons or for two children. It has rocking chairs, too, and kiddy rides for tiny tots, a fountain and grill and free parking—all for 15 cents admission.

A Wauwatosa, Wisconsin, movie theatre has introduced the love seat.

It is designed for young courtship. The theatre management considered the conventional single-seat chair an impediment to adolescent romance and decided to do something about it.

The love seat is a well-upholstered, roomy theatre chair which will accommodate two occupants.

To get a closeup of the love seats, an Oklahoma City reporter visited the movie house. He went alone.

The love seats were there, all right. There was one at each end of every other row in the center section—about 40 in all.

But romance had deserted the theatre. The reporter found only one love seat occupied, and in that sprawled a tow-headed lad.

United Artists press agents hired three acrobats, the other day, to do "turns" at Broadway street corners, to exploit its new "Thief of Bagdad." The "Three Arabians," as they called themselves, rolled out the carpet, on which was lettered the title of the picture. As they performed for passersby, some seemed interested, others were not. Few, if any, knew that one of the tumblers was Frankie Parrish, of the old acrobatic vaudeville team of Parrish and Peru, who, years ago, toured the world in top spots, making a thousand or two every week.

Bower Broaddus, federal district judge, 12 men who constituted a jury in his court in Oklahoma City, several attorneys and various court attaches went downtown one day last week to "film row" and saw a movie screened.

They saw "Charlie McCarthy, Detective."

It was in the interests of justice, and the audience, excepting for snickers from the various jurors, remained cold to the antics of Edgar Bergen's little dummy.

The court saw the picture as an opening episode in the suit brought by Fozie Rahal, editor and publisher of the magazine "Tomorrow," against Universal Film, and Standard Theatres, operators of the Midwest theatre in Oklahoma City, for $50,000 damages in a libel action.

Rahal charges in the suit, that the character Arthur Aldridge in the film, played by Louis Calhern, is despicable, and Aldridge, pictured as editor and publisher of a magazine also named "Tomorrow," becomes so despicable he finally gets murdered.

The jury, once back in Judge Broaddus' court room, listened to the reading of depositions taken in California from various persons engaged in the manufacture of the picture.

The depositions revealed that it was Hollywood's inconsistency and changes of mind which really brought about the coincidence which led the suit.

In the first place, testimony taken from an associate producer revealed, Warren William was sought for the part of Aldridge. William wouldn't play in the picture because Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy would get top billing, so Calhern was chosen.

In the second place, Aldridge, the "heavy" in the film, was first to be depicted as a newspaper editor and publisher. For some inexplicable Hollywood reason, it was decided he would be a magazine publisher, instead.

He was to be publisher of a magazine called "Today." But there once was a magazine of that name so the studio moguls decided to change the name of the publication to "Tomorrow."

The associate producer's testimony admitted that the part called for Aldridge to be a "ruthless, aggressive man, unsympathetic," so that there would be justification for his murder.

The deposition declared the company had no knowledge of Rahal's magazine "Tomorrow," or of Rahal.

The court dismissed the suit.

Vladimir Selinski, violinist-conductor, whose album of "Serenade" will be released soon by Columbia records, gives non-vegetarians something to think about with the disclosure that three sheep have to be killed to make strings for one violin. It seems the strings are made from intestines of sheep. Next times you listen to the Philharmonic-Symphony, says Selinski, remember the 170 innocent lambs who gave their lives for the classics, and the pig who shed skin to make a tom-tom, the calf who lives forever as a kettle-drum, and the horse whose tail becomes a violin bow scraping divine music out of a sheepish stringed instrument.

STUDIO CAMERAMEN IN JURISDICTIONAL TRUCE

Mohr Reinstatement by ASC Ends Dispute with Local 659; Publicists Negotiate

Hal Mohr, first cameraman on James Roosevelt's Globe Productions' "Pot O' Gold" has been reinstated by the American Society of Cinematographers, in Hollywood, after a brief suspension for alleged non-payment of dues, during which his case appeared to be a festering point in the current dispute between the Society and Local 659, studio photographers' union affiliated with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees.

The reinstatement, and the failure of Local 659 to discipline those of its members failing to heed an order of several weeks ago, to withdraw from the Society, seemed this week to produce a truce, in a situation which, if developed, could easily hamper production in Hollywood.

Ordered by Browne

The order, by Local 659 officials, that their members withdraw from the ASC, came after Herbert Aller, its business representative, returned several weeks ago from the American Federation of Labor convention in New Orleans. He said he had conferred there with George Browne, IATSE president, who, he added, was opposed to dual unionism (i. e., the possession of membership cards in the ASC and the Local 659), and committed to a policy in which Local 659's claim of sole jurisdiction over all cameramen would be emphasized anew, to the producers.

The current IATSE agreement with the producers gives the local jurisdiction over all but first cameramen and directors of cinematography, except in location work, when the Local also controls first cameramen's work.

The ASC contract with the producers is for the first cameramen and directors of cinematography, and runs until 1942. The producers' attitude in the threatened battle was that they would live up to this agreement, regardless of the IATSE claims.

After the recent declaration by Mr. Aller, the ASC at a mass meeting reexamined its contract, and the consensus was that it was valid.

Mr. Mohr's suspension was only of several days. It came soon after Mr. Aller's declaration of the new IATSE policy. Mr. Mohr is a former president of the IATSE Local 659.

During the squabble, other IATSE studio unions were not heard from. It was recalled that when the IATSE some while ago re-entered the studio basic labor agreement, it recognized the ASC's right to certain categories of cinematographers.

Wages, Hours Survey Underway

His report will not be ready until January, E. M. Cocking, Los Angeles director of the Wages and Hours Act, said last week. He has been surveying workers in studios, in line with recommendations made late in the summer by the Act's Adiministration in Washington, reclassifying workers. He has been observing the workers at work. His report must be submitted to superiors in Washington.

Mr. Cocking remarked complexities in classifications, in the non-administrative, executive, and professional categories. Aiding him in the making of the report is Wesley O. Ash.

If the report is approved in Washington, it will then be subject to hearings in Hollywood, at which producers and workers may protest. John Stellern, local Act enforcement inspector, will use the final determination as a guide.

Mervyn Freeman, cameraman, has filed suit against the Pathe newsreel company, for $7,872 in alleged back wages, and a like amount for damages, making this the first such suit in the Hollywood area under the Wages and Hours Act. He is a member of Local 659. He charges in his suit that his job is subject to provisions of the Act.

The Screen Writers Guild has turned down a "compromise" on a plan to continue the screen credit dispute machinery, after the expiration, April 10th, of the present bargaining contract with the producers. The plan called for arbitration by the guild of disputes over such, for one year after the pact's expiration. This was regarded as alternative to the clause now being inserted in writers' contracts, and warned against by the guild, giving the producers sole authority over credits. If writers must sign such contracts, the guild further warns, they should append written protests after the offending clause.

Guild Meets on Extras

On Thursday, the Screen Actors Guild negotiating committee and one from the producers were to meet in Hollywood over the proposed new scales and working conditions of extras. To represent the SAG were Kenneth Thomson, John Dales, Jr., Laurence Beilenson, Walter Abel, Edward Arnold, Edwin Stanley; the producers, Y. Frank Freeman, E. J. Mannix, Herbert Freston, and Mendel Silberberg.

Mr. Thomson has been added to the Guild Standing Committee, administrator of the SAG contract. He will aid the committee's plan to reduce the number of casual extras, and also create more work for the regular extras.

The Guild has ordered members not to work for Louis Weiss productions after next Saturday. The contract with the producer has been cancelled. It is alleged Mr. Weiss refused to allow a Guild representative to go on a set. Actors' agents have been warned by the Guild not to enter into negotiations with Mr. Weiss, or his corporation.

In New York City, the Screen Publicists Guild home office unit disclosed at a meeting Thursday night, December 12th, that negotiations of the companies with the National Labor Relations Board, on bargaining contracts with the Guild, were to begin before Christmas. The union is asking the companies for recognition and a closed shop. It is reported the companies have asked for proof the union represents a majority of employees. The union has taken its case to the NLRB.

Ralph Morgan, president of the SAG, pledged its support to the publicists at the Thursday meeting. Also, at the meeting, Joseph Gould was nominated by acclamation as president. He is now in that capacity. Other offices are to be contested, at elections to be held this week or next.

Wage scales and working conditions for musicians at the studios have been changed somewhat and the changes will become effective after January 1st, the American Federation of Musicians announced in Hollywood last week.

Union Moves on "Slot-Movies"

Movies being made for the "nickel-in-the-slot-movies" machines, now being developed, have been regarded with suspicion by the theatrical unions; and, this week, two of them moved to regulate the new medium.

Local 47, Hollywood unit of the American Federation of Musicians, issued regulations concerning work of members in the new 16 mm films; and the Hollywood unit of the IATSE projectionists, Local 150, began a survey of the number of projectors in Los Angeles cafes, to determine the basis for negotiations for agreements to cover servicing of the machines.

The musicians' union has ruled that members must obtain clearance from the office of J. W. Gillette, international studio representative, before signing a contract, or accepting work in a 16 mm film designed for use in the new machines.

In addition, "all records of 16 mm films must have a license from the AFM," members being prohibited from rendering service to an unlicenced recorder.

In disclosing the IATSE survey, Ralph MacDonald, business agent of Local 150, said it was permitting the machine companies to service their own machines at present, but would start negotiations when it was determined enough machines are in use "to warrant" IATSE projectionists.

The actors, writers', and directors' guilds have designated representatives to serve on the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences awards committee, for the annual awards event.

Local 702 Pact Discussed

Officials of six film processing laboratories in New York met in that city Thursday, December 12th, with officials of the Laboratory Technicians Union, Local 702, on a new contract to be effective December 31st, expiration of the present agreement. The union seeks a uniform contract, with wage increases, two weeks' vacation for all employee categories, and a 35 hour week. The laboratory officials are to meet again with the union after formulating a policy among themselves.

Exchange Unions Elect

William Z. Porter, Monogram branch manager and booker, has been reelected president of the Philadelphia Exchange Employees Union, Local B-7. Elections were Friday, December 13th. Other officers are: Fred Fortunate, vice-president; James McWilliams, recording and financial secretary; Marie Hause, treasurer; James A. Flynn, business manager; Al Holmstock, sergeant-at-arms; and Henrietta Weinberg, trustee. On the executive board are Harry Bache, Charles Donahue, Charles Smith, James Keating, Anthony Blase, William McLaughlin, Peg Fogarty, and Victoria Van Story.

In St. Louis, Louis Lovato has been reelected business agent for Local B-L. Presidency of the unit will be decided next Saturday.

In New York, Harold Klein, of the Cocalis circuit, has been reelected president of the Motion Picture Bookers Club. Elections were on Monday evening at the Hotel Lincoln, that city. Other officers are: Leon Greenfield, vice-president; Ben Levine, treasurer; Peter Saglembeni, financial secretary; Pearl Elsohn, recording secretary; Bernie Brooks, Jack Gelber, trustees; and Jeanette Dennett, Max Fried, Harry Margolies, and Mr. Gelber, directors.

New Deals for Projectionists

Local 143, St. Louis projectionists' union, has renewed a wage contract with Harry Holloway, owner of the Gem, Overland, and Beverly theatres, neighborhood houses, ending a dispute which had closed the theatres for one day. The contract terms are the same as those which expired September 1st.

Projectionists in Seattle will receive wage increases of from five to 12½ per cent for next year, resulting from negotiations ended Saturday. The union had threatened a strike.

In New Haven, Local 74 of the IATSE has reelected all officers, headed by John S. O'Connell, president, and Daniel Cummings, business agent.

In Columbus, the projectionists' Local 386 reelected Robert Greer president, elected Ronald Stoneburner, business agent.

CHAMPIONS OF RADIO CHOSEN BY EDITORS

Jack Benny Ousts Bergen and McCarthy from first position after three years

IT'S Jack Benny back on top again. Returning to the top spot as "Champion of Champions," after a lapse of three years, during which time he yielded the front position to Edgar Bergen's blockhead, Charlie McCarthy, Benny was handed the laurel by the more than 700 radio editors in the United States and Canada polled by Motion Picture Daily on behalf of FAME in its fifth annual poll.

For the first time, the poll showed radical changes over previous years with old-time favorites returning to top rank and many previous top notchers placing below the first five in the varying classifications.

Following closely on the heels of Benny is Bob Hope in the runner-up spot, a big step forward from his No. 7 ranking of last season. Bing Crosby, always up among the leaders, retained his hold on third place, while the big surprise of the balloting was the slip from first to fourth place of Bergen and his pal, McCarthy. Fred Allen, dropped from the big five last year after considerable difficulties with his scripts, has returned to tie for fifth place with Helen Hayes. The latter, returning to the air with a show all her own, went back among the leaders.

Dinah Shore Top New Star

The editors picked Dinah Shore as the brightest new star in the radio firmament—the outstanding new star of the season. Yvette, the golden-haired songstress, and Miss Hayes follow closely behind. Carol Bruce, who made her debut with the new Ben Bernie show, placed fourth, but there were enough votes for another radio newcomer, one Wendell L. Willkie, to create a tie for that fourth position. Whether Willkie's political speeches or his stellar appearances on "Information, Please" and "America's Town Meeting of the Air" drew the editors' plaudits, we cannot say, but radio editors expressed their regard for his personality by ranking him high among the new stars.

Radio contributed heavily to public understanding of current affairs during the past years but it has now learned to do the job so efficiently that there is little of the confusion and excitement which were attendant on coverage during the early crisis days. Day by day coverage of the European war was picked by most editors as the most impressive contribution, although many expressed preference for the coverage of political conventions and the remarkable handling of the returns themselves—a long way from radio's first efforts some 20 years ago.

Edward G. Robinson climaxed his steady climb upward during the five polls by clinching the position as most effective film player on the air, while Don Ameche slipped back to second place. Basil Rathbone, never before listed, rose to third with his portrayals of the famed sleuth, Sherlock Holmes, with Bette Davis, another newcomer, and Helen Hayes tieing for fourth.

Bob Hope and Jack Benny traded their last year's places with Bob as the best comedian this time. Jack was second, Fred Allen retained third position, Edgar Bergen continued fourth, while Ed "Rochester" Anderson, Benny's dusky valet, walked right in among the leaders with his boss, to take fifth place.

There was a radical shakeup in the commentator classification. Raymond Gram Swing moved up from fourth to first place, with H. V. Kaltenborn, last year's victor, coming in third. Lowell Thomas continued as second choice. Elmer Davis was fourth, and Gabriel Heatter tied with Wythe Williams for fifth.

The editors' tastes among comediennes hasn't changed much. Fanny Brice, Gracie Allen and Mary Livingstone, who rated one-two-three in 1939, showed up in that order again. Marion Jordan (Molly of Fibber McGee & Molly) was fourth, and Jane Ace and Portland Hoffa tied for fifth place.

Fibber McGee & Molly, and Burns & Allen remain in the one-two posts among comedy teams. Brenda & Cobina, newcomers, moved into third, while Amos 'n' Andy, Benny & Livingstone and Abbott & Costello wound up in a triple tie for fourth.

Lux Theatre Still Tops

The Lux Radio Theatre, which hasn't missed a top ranking since the Motion Picture Daily poll began, was an overwhelming first choice for the Best Dramatic Show. The new Helen Hayes Theatre promptly established itself in second place, Arch Oboler's Everyman's Theatre was third, First Nighter, fourth, and the Columbia Workshop, fifth.

Those perennial favorites among popular vocalists, Kate Smith and Bing Crosby, were again returned the winners in the female and male categories, respectively. As a matter of fact, only one among the 10 leaders last year failed to return in the 1940 selections. Dinah Shore, outstanding new star, was voted second to Miss Smith, a remarkable upward move. Connie Boswell and Frances Langford tied for third, and Ginny Simms moved into a leadership position by tieing for fifth place with Bea Wain. Kenny Baker, second among the male popular vocalists; Lanny Ross, third, and Frank Parker, fourth, continued the same popularity ratings they held before. Frank Munn, however, took the fifth spot.

The growing role of sports in radio entertainment called for a new classification this year—that of Best Sports Announcer—and it was Bill Stern who walked off with the honors, in a photo finish with Ted Husing, runner-up. Red Barber was third and Stan Lomax and Bob Trout tied for fourth. Lomax, of WOR, was the only non-network star to place.

Quiz programs having established themselves as more than just a passing fad, a quiz category also was added to this year's poll. Among the question-and-answer shows, "Information, Please," as was to be expected, proved the winner. Indeed, it drew the largest plurality of any show in any classification, leaving no doubt as to its leadership. The genial Dr. I. Q. was second, Bob Hawk's Take It or Leave It, third; Kay Kyser's College of Musical Knowledge, fourth, and Prof. Quiz tied with the precocious Quiz Kids for fifth place.

Whether radio editors don't like the daytime serials, or whether they just haven't got time to listen during the early hours, is still a moot question, but a number of them expressed considerable distaste and refused to express an opinion on the best. Far and away the first choice was Vic and Sade, while the remaining were closely bunched with Big Sister, Mary Marlin and the Goldbergs tied for second place, and Bachelor's Children, Life Can Be Beautiful and The O'Neills, tied for fifth.

Kyser Leads Musical Shows

The best popular musical show on the air, according to the editors, is Kay Kyser's College of Musical Knowledge, last year's winner. The Fred Waring show, Kraft Music Hall and Your Hit Parade were tied for second place, and Musical Americana, Raymond Paige's new program, made its bid by coming in fifth.

On the classical side, the Ford Sunday Evening Hour again was named the best musical show with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra second. The NBC Symphony, second last year, was in a third place tied with the Voice of Firestone, while the Cities Service Concerts, the Metropolitan Opera broadcasts and the Telephone Hour were in a triple tie for fifth.

Among the lads who make radio pay for itself, the announcers who do heavy duty putting across the products that make the American system of broadcasting possible, the old favorites of both the editors and the cash customers remain almost unchanged, although there are slight shifts in the relative standings. Don Wilson, who has never been headed in five years, remains on top. Harry Von Zell has moved from the fourth post to the second, Milton Cross, from second to third, Ken Carpenter is fourth and Bob Trout rounds out the top five.

Crooks Wins First Place

Turning to the classical singers, there are a number of surprising changes. Richard Crooks is the 1940 top man, as compared to third position last time. James Melton, who did not place last time, is second, John Charles Thomas moved from fourth to third, while Nelson Eddy and Lawrence Tibbett, who were first and second, respectively, last year, are tied for fifth this time. The vote was a testimonial to Tibbett, especially. He has not sung this year. Margaret Speaks, winner for the past two seasons, won again amongst the feminine artists. Lily Pons was promoted from third to second, Lucille Manners and Jessica Dragonette tied for third, while Grace Moore, who hasn't been listed in these columns since 1937, was fifth.

Radio orchestras were divided into three

ROOSEVELT-WILLKIE IN THE RUNNING

Just as in 1936 when MOTION PICTURE DAILY conducted its first radio poll, this year's presidential election was reflected in the ballots. Editors who gave President Roosevelt tenth place in the 1936 vote for Champion of Champions, cast scattered votes for both candidates in the same classification this year. Some apparently still bitter, gave both Willkie and Roosevelt their votes as Best Comedian. Most surprising, however, was the fact that Willkie received enough votes for Outstanding New Star of the Season to tie with Carol Bruce for fourth place in that category.

classifications, popular, swing and classical. Guy Lombardo still rates the lead in the popular classification, just as he had done for the two previous years. Fred Waring, who did not place last year, and Wayne King, who tied for third, came in tied for second this time. In fourth place was Kay Kyser who slipped from second place, while Tommy Dorsey and Glenn Miller tied for fifth. Richard Himber just missed the first five.

Among swing bands the shakeup was even greater. Glenn Miller moved into first place, from second last year, replacing Benny Goodman who came in third. Tommy Dorsey went up two notches from fourth to second place. The real suprise however was Jimmie Lunceford, fifth, who placed for the first time.

Symphony Orchestras Selected

On the classical side, the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra returned to first place after a lapse of several years. The NBC Symphony dropped from first to second place. Frank Black's Cities Service Orchestra was third, and the Ford Sunday Evening Hour orchestra was fourth. Andre Kostalanetz, Raymond Paige's Musical Americana orchestra and Alfred Wallenstein's Voice of Firestone orchestra were in a triple tie for fifth.

The best dramatic series again proved to be One Man's Family. Big Town was second, the Aldrich Family, third, and Cavalcade of America, Second Husband and Those We Love, were tied for fourth.

Returning to the comedy side we find the Aldrich Family ousting the Jack Benny Jello series from first place. Benny was second, however, with the Bob Hope show third. Tied for fourth were the Fred Allen shows and the Easy Aces.

Children's Programs Voted

Ireene Wicker, "The Singing Lady" moved right up to first place from fourth in the children's series grouping. Coast-to-Coast-on-a-Bus with Milton Cross, Let's Pretend with Nila Mack, and the newcomer Quiz Kids were tied for runner-up and Tom Mix's Straight-shooters was fifth. The inclusion of this last show among the leaders comes despite the fact that the program's star, Mix was lost to this show by death recently. Nevertheless, his name will continue to be associated with the program.

Columbia's American School of the Air drew down the top honors as the best educational program. The University of Chicago Roundtable was given second place. Apparently believing that education is best absorbed in light and easy doses, the editors gave third place ranking to "Information, Please" while America's Town Meeting of the Air and the American Forum of the Air were tied for fourth.

The best special events job on the war was done by CBS with its nightly European Roundup, according to the editors, while NBC's spot coverage of the scuttling of the Graf Spee, a sensational news beat, general NBC war coverage, and the NBC broadcasts of refugee children speaking to their parents in England received high praise. Many of the editors said simply that the general coverage of war news by all three networks, CBS, NBC and Mutual, constituted the best special events job.

Draft Coverage Commended

The three networks were lauded similarly for broadcasts covering both political conventions and the election returns, with no network selected for special praise. Outside of the war and politics, the only other event to get special citation was the NBC coverage of the draft drawings.

Since the radio poll was conducted on a national basis individual broadcasts from local and independent station, of course, received but little attention from the radio editors, although a number of the editors did rate some local programs of enough importance to include them in their listings.

ZORN REPORTS BOOM IN SOUTHERN ILLINOIS

United Owners President Sees Record Year for State; New Equipment, Plans Reported

by KENDALL OLDS
in Springfield

Downstate Illinois exhibitors will end 1940 with a record of the best business in several years. Not only have grosses been higher, but the prosperity has been reflected down the line in increased building activity and installation of new theatre equipment.

Downstate exhibitors also will end the year more unified, through the comparatively new United Theatre Owners of Illinois, headed by Edward G. Zorn, which boasts a membership of more than 250 theatres.

"Big Pictures" Credited

The business increase is attributed to several factors, principally to the number of big pictures that have been released during the past year.

"Exceptional pictures do exceptional business while average pictures do less than average business," Mr. Zorn said.

A survey of virtually every section of downstate Illinois reveals that more theatre building has been done in the last year than in any other year of the last decade. A majority of the new building has taken place where the developing oil fields have skyrocketed the population of once small towns. Towns in the oil fields which formerly could support only one house now are supporting two and in some instances three. Exhibitors expanding through new building are going in to strictly modern, streamlined houses but are not installing too elaborate equipment.

Further new building is anticipated in several other sections of the state due to the national defense program. Centers expected to benefit from this, more than others, are those located near the army camps and cantonments such as Camp Grant, Rantoul, Fort Sheridan and Scott Field. Already exhibitors in these towns have reported increased business. H. N. VanMatre, Jr., head of a string of Rockford theatres, reports sharp gains due to the new activity at Camp Grant. The same reports come from Charles House of Rockford, A. L. Revert of Rantoul, Noah Bloomer of Belleville and the Fox theatres in Belleville.

From the oil fields the reports of better business come from Robert Cluster of Salem, Henry Tanner of Pana and Vandalia and from many other exhibitors.

Among other exhibitors reporting better business are E. E. Alges of LaSalle, A. L. Hainline of Macomb, Fred Anderson of Morris, who plans to build a new theatre in Joliet and Dwight, A. B. McCullom of Hoopeston, Turner & Farrar of Harrisburgh, S. E. Pirtle of Jerseyville, I. W. Rodgers of Cairo. H. U. Bailey of Princeton and others.

Equipment Sales Increase

Equipment sales, particularly in southern Illinois, have increased from 10 to 20 per cent, with seating equipment jumping from 15 to 25 per cent. Other types of equipment also have shown substantial increases.

Through its executive Secretary William F. Crouch, the UTOI has already branched into every section of downstate Illinois. The organization will hold a convention shortly in Springfield to which not only members but exhibitors from throughout the state have been invited.

One of the foremost subjects will be state legislation. Recalling the action two years ago of a number of state legislators in sponsoring film industry control bills, the UTOI will complete a program in connection with new legislation expected.

During the past few months the door has been virtually wide open to various types of giveaways. About half of the houses in the state employ them.

In downstate Illinois there has been a tendency to get away from double features. Triple bills, outside of Chicago, are practically unknown in the state.

The most unpleasant situation created during the year was the establishment of ten-cent movies during midweek in a number of towns where competition is exceedingly keen.

Richey Urges Decree Aid

H. M. Richey, assistant to William F. Rodgers, MGM general sales manager, speaking at a meeting of the Theatre Owners of Oklahoma during their convention at the Skirvin Hotel in Oklahoma City, on Monday, told exhibitors that they should face the fact that the Federal consent decree will be with the industry until 1942, at least, and should approach it with the idea of getting the most good out of it and of improving sections which, in practice, may prove to be unworkable.

Mr. Richey said at the meeting that MGM would live up to both the letter and the spirit of the decree and hopes, through it, to improve the relationship between exhibitor and distributor. The company, he said, hopes to be able to say at the end of the first year that it was not necessary for a single exhibitor to bring an arbitration case against the company.

Mr. Richey also urged the exhibitors to greater showmanship efforts to keep the industry in favor of the amusement seeking public and, also, as their part in the essential task of overcoming the industry's foreign market losses.

Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, told exhibitors at the convention on Monday that nothing but trouble could be expected for exhibitors from the consent decree.

"This is the first time the Government has entered the theatre business since its organization 25 years ago. The decree would never have existed if the distributors had granted the ten-point program of the MPTOA," he said.

Morris Loewenstein, president of the organization, was in charge of the meeting. At the afternoon session he was re-elected president for another year. Other officials re-elected by acclamation were Max Brock of Lawton, vice-president; Leonard White of Weatherford, secretary-treasurer.

New directors elected were: Louis Grove, Oklahoma City, representing the Oklahoma City district; Lou Chatham, Griffith theatres, Tulsa; Ed Holt, Colgate; Ed Crews, Waurika; Glenn Thompson, Healdton; Crawford Speaman, Edmond; Gerald Stettmund, Chandler; Homer Jones, Alva., and Verbe Conley, Perryton, Texas, representing the Texas district.

Complying with the request of radio station KOMA in Oklahoma City, a round table discussion of exhibitor problems and the consent decree was held Sunday, December 15th, before the opening of the Oklahoma exhibitors convention in that city, with Mr. Kuykendall, Mr. Loewenstein and Neal Barrett, manager of the station, participating.

KMTA's Convention Held Tuesday

The one-day convention of the Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association was held Tuesday in Kansas City with Ed Kuykendall, H. M. Richey and Dave Palfreyman of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., guest speakers.

The consent decree is a step towards government regulation, and does not give the exhibitor anything he did not have before, Mr. Kuykendall told the convention.

As in the past, the real problem for the exhibitors is to sell their product in a positive manner, not criticizing it, Mr. Richey, MGM director of exhibitor relations, said.

Officers elected were: R. R. Biechele, of the Osage Theatre, Kansas City, president; Tom Edwards, Ozark Theatre, Eldon, Missouri, vice-president; and Fred Meyn, Park Theatre, Kansas City, Kansas, secretary-treasurer. Missouri directors are: Frank Cassil, Rialto Theatre, St. Joseph; George Harttmann, Armour Theatre, North Kansas City; and Rex Barrett, Uptown and Boone theatres, Columbia. Kansas directors are: J. E. Pennington, Cozy Theatre, Topeka; Homer Strowig, Plaza Theatre, Abilene; and C. A. Schultz of Kansas City.

Northwest Allied To Discuss Legislation

Plans are being considered for a special meeting of the Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest early in January to act upon a suggestion of Louis B. Schwartz, attorney for the association, that legislation be sponsored to circumvent provisions of the consent decree inimical to the best interests of the independent exhibitors.

All independent exhibitors in Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Wisconsin and upper Michigan are being invited to participate in the proposed meeting to be held in Minneapolis.

Milwaukee Unit Names Committee

The independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan, Inc., has announced committee appointments for the new year as follows: Legislative, Charles W. Trampe, Milwaukee; F. J. McWilliams, Portage; Henry Ringling, Baraboo; John Adler, Marshfield, and Milt Ellis, Beloit. Convention committee, Charles W. Trampe, Bert Nathan and Oliver Schmidt, all of Milwaukee; finance committee, A. C. Gutenberg and Oliver Trampe, Milwaukee, and A. C. Berkholtz, West Bend; membership committee, Mark Morgan, Cedarburg; Mrs. Franck Eckhardt, Wisconsin Rapids, and George Langheinrich, Milwaukee, and Louis Orlove, MGM exploitation man, publicity.

NEW U. S. ARMY IN FIRST BATTLE

That dabbler in music, the U. S. Army, over the weekend was put in its place by James Caesar Petrillo, "czar" of U. S. music, and president of the American Federation of Musicians. On Saturday he forbade the networks to transmit U. S. Army band or instrumentalist music until he could "make arrangements" with someone "big" in the War Department. Thus, on Sunday the first program from Camp Dix, New Jersey, draftee training center, over the Mutual network, contained mere anaemic bugle calls instead of the robust blare of the 104th Engineers' Band, originally to be heard.

On Monday, however, Mr. Petrillo waxed magnanimous, having extracted a pledge from the networks that broadcasts by Army bands would not result in decreased employment of AFM musicians. He lifted the ban. And he did not penalize Mutual for allowing the bugle calls.

Equity Raises Initiation Fee

Actors' Equity Association has raised its initiation fee from $50 to $109 and has cancelled the privileges of deferment it was announced through the Associations' house organ, Equity, in an editorial Saturday, December 14th. While this was an admittedly mild restrictive measure, it is the first time Equity has ever taken any steps to limit the number of actors for the legitimate stage.

Nearly all the actors deplored increasing the hardships of young actors trying to get a foothold on the stage, but it was agreed that it might discourage persons from entering the theatre casually.

Howard Lindsay, who plays the role of "Father" in the current Broadway production "Life With Father," said that although he opposed restrictions in principle, he agreed that too many persons in the acting profession hurt the theatre and estimated that about 85 per cent of the profession was in debt.

Representing the producers point of view, Theresa Helburn, director of the Theatre Guild, declared that, overcrowded as the profession appeared to be to actors, there still were not enough good actors.

"We've had a lot of trouble casting plays this fall," she said. "The trouble is that the minute an actor gets enough experience to be worth anything, the movies or the radio grabs him."

Coast Representatives On Whitney Committee

A committee consisting of David O. Selznick, Water Wanger and Frank Capra, has been appointed in Hollywood to co-operate with John Hay Whitney in formulating plans for the industry's part in the U. S. Government's campaign to improve relations with Latin-America. Mr. Whitney is the representative on the coast of Nelson A. Rockefeller's co-ordinating committee of the Government for the Latin and South American republics.

Mr. Wanger outlined features of the proposed campaign at a recent meeting of industry leaders, including the heads of the Actors, Directors and Writers Guilds.

Pool Two Houses

Complete pooling of two theatres owned by two separate circuits, was announced in Chicago last week by Jack Rose, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois-Indiana Theatres. The theatres are the Commercial, of the H. & E. Theatre circuit, and the Gayety, of the S. & C. Theatre Corporation. Harry Balaban is the principal of the first circuit; Mr. Rose, of the latter.

Buys Theatre Interest

Ralph Dunbar, Warner officer manager in Pittsburgh has been appointed manager of the Warner exchange in Cincinnati to succeed Ralph Kinsler. The latter resigned recently to assume management of the Monte Vista and Emery, Cincinnati suburban theatre, part of the estate of Elmer Shard, in which Mr. Kinsler has purchased an interest.

"FILMS NOT PROPERLY SOLD", SAYS JACK COHN

This advertisement, referred to by Mr. Cohn at the AMPA luncheon, was inserted in the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette by the Barry theatre, 637 Penn Avenue. It is listed as the property of William Skirball of the Skirball Brothers circuit which has its headquarters in Cleveland.

SHOWMANSHIP and its place in the motion picture industry were discussed on Thursday of last week by Jack Cohn, vice-president and chairman of the board of Columbia, at a luncheon meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at the Hotel Edison in New York City.

"The trouble with the business," Mr. Cohn said, "is that pictures are not properly sold and in many cases are not sold at all." There are some showmen in the country, he pointed out, who are skilled in "putting over a picture" and will do well even though the same picture is unsuccessful in many similar situations.

In some cases the exhibitor has too many theatres or too many things on his mind, Mr. Cohn asserted. Too many pictures are taken out of a theatre after three or four days when, with proper exploitation, the full potentialities of the film could be realized and the run would be two, three or more weeks, he said.

Mr. Cohn stressed in general terms how pictures should be sold by a showman. As an example of how not to advertise a motion picture he cited a clipping from the December 4, 1940 issue of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, reproduced above.

Pointing to the advertisement Mr. Cohn said the exhibitor without any permission, had changed the name of the Columbia Picture, "Glamour for Sale" to "Girls on Call." "That ad," he remarked, "is an insult to the industry." He added that although there was no Federal control at present such types of advertising invited Government censorship.

Maurice Bergman, former advertising and publicity director for Columbia and now advertising manager for Twentieth Century-Fox, introduced Mr. Cohn. Announcing the speaker's topic, Mr. Bergman gave his own definition, "Showmanship consists in doing the absurd thing at the logical time." Chaos is the background of the motion picture business, he remarked.

Other Columbia executives at the speaker's table were A. Schneider, treasurer, and Nate Spingold. Leon J. Bamberger, head of AMPA, presided.

Wurtzel Touring South America

Sol Wurtzel, production executive at Twentieth Century Fox, this week was scheduled to be visiting Mexico City, and to fly from there to Buenos Aires, for vacation. It is said that, while in South America he will investigate background material for stories.

Louisiana Improvement

Virtually all theatres in Louisiana report excellent business. Crops have been good, and the port of New Orleans is doing well. The several army camps and government spending, are also factors.

YEAR-END ELECTIONS IN SEVEN VARIETY CLUBS

Short, Blotcky, Stearn, Gran Lehman, Griffith and Hicks Are the New Chief Barkers

Variety Clubs, of local motion picture, theatrical and press participations, are formulating new activities and new managements for 1941, reelecting some executives and boards, or electing new ones—Philadelphia, Dallas, Cleveland, Milwaukee, Buffalo, Oklahoma City and Baltimore chapters moving this week in this usual year-end direction.

Postmaster General Frank C. Walker's speech before nearly 1,000 guests at the sixth annual banquet of the Philadelphia Variety Club, December 12th, and the naming of R. J. O'Donnell, Texas Circuit head, as honorary life chief barker of the Dallas Club also highlighted the week's activities of the various Variety clubs throughout the country.

Sees Industry "Undersold"

Mr. Walker told the assembled guests in Philadelphia's Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, last Thursday, that a better understanding of the industry's vital role in American life was becoming more apparent. Guests at the dinner included persons from all parts of the country, including scores of New York executives.

The speaker, who was guest of honor and made the principal address, said he thought the motion picture business was "undersold" to the public. He hoped that, with the stimulus of the national defense program and the industry's own efforts, the American people would come to place a higher value upon the work of the industry and its personnel.

He predicted that a "finer association" between the Government and the industry would be achieved through the consent decree and expressed the hope that this might be the prelude to a better understanding and close cooperation. He paid tribute to John H. Harris of Pittsburgh, founder and president of the national Variety Clubs.

Ben Bernie, toastmaster, on behalf of the club, presented a $2,000 check to Superintendent of Schools Alexander J. Stoddard for construction of a pool for paralytic children, at the Martin Orthopedic School. Dr. Leon Levy, incoming chief barker, announced that Mr. Bernie had turned a check for his services back to the club for its charity fund. Other speakers included:

Harold G. Hoffman, former New Jersey Governor; U. S. Senator John J. Davis; John B. Kelly, Philadelphia political leader; Spyros Skouras, head of National Theatres; Major General Clifford R. Powell, commandant of Fort Dix, N. J.; the Rev. Herbert W. Jones, who gave the benediction, and Mr. Stoddard. Benny Fields was master of ceremonies. Benny Meroff and his orchestra furnished music.

Jay Emanuel, retiring Chief Barker, was presented with a set of candelabra in appreciation of his work.

Jack Beresin, chairman, was assisted by David E. Weshner, Ted Schlanger, Earle W. Sweigert, Edward Callow, Hilleary Brown, Charles A. Goodwin, Benjamin Fertel and Milton Rogasner.

Proceeds of the dinner at $10 a plate, nearly $10,000 went to the club's paralysis fund. Frank L. McNamee, former RKO manager in Philadelphia, heads the club's drive in co-operation with the Philadelphia County Pediatric Society, the Orthopedic Society and the Emergency Aid.

Dr. Leon Levy is the new Chief Barker.

R. J. O'Donnell, who retires after five years as chief barker of the Dallas Club will be succeeded by Paul Short. The latter will be formally inducted into office at the club's New Year's Eve party, at the Adolphus Hotel. The club's first luncheon of the year on January 6th, will be given in Mr. O'Donnell's honor. Guests will include employees of all Dallas exchanges, employees of the Griffith, Robb, Rowley, Jefferson and Interstate circuits, as well as members of the Variety club.

A special feature of the New Year's eve jamboree will be a "jam session," featuring name bands that are playing in the city on that evening. Among bands invited are: those headed by Sterling Young, Henry Busse and Louis Panico.

At the first meeting of the Dallas Club, over which Mr. Short presided, it was voted to extend activities throughout the State and to change its name to "Variety Club of Texas."

Chief Barker Short announced the following appointments: Eph Charninsky, personal representative for the San Antonio area; Henry Hall, Southwest Texas; John G. Long, Southeast Texas; Clifford Porter, Beaumont; L. M. Crim, East Texas; Al Lever, Bayou City district; Louie Novy, Austin; Frank Weatherford, Fort Worth; J. Yuell Robb, West Texas; R. N. Smith, Rio Grande Valley; Ben Ferguson, Central Texas; Joe Bryant, Lubbock and R. C. McIlheran, Wichita Falls.

"FLU" EPIDEMIC STRIKES STUDIOS AND THEATRES

Hollywood Shooting Schedules Disrupted as 500 Stars and Workers Are Stricken

Losses amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars have been caused studios and theatres in the Hollywood and Los Angeles area by an epidemic of influenza which struck high and low among executives and the back lot workers, causing loss of work and delays in shooting. Theatre attendance in the area dropped sharply.

500 Workers Stricken

The epidemic, still current but diminishing in intensity, hit every studio in varying degrees, overloaded studio hospitals engaged in precautionary measures, made necessary the rearrangement of shooting schedules and, in some cases, caused postponement of filming.

Approximately 500 persons on regular studio payrolls were stricken to such degree that they had to remain home. How many others were ill, especially those in the casual worker classes such as extras and day-to-day mechanics and the like, is impossible to estimate.

Following a succession of patients—John Hubbard and Marjorie Weaver, leads, and Ray McCarey, director, 20th Century-Fox closed down "Murder Among Friends" for more than a week. Approximately 80 others were stricken throughout the lot.

Universal had to re-arrange the shooting schedule of "Nice Girl," due to the illness of Deanna Durbin, its star. About 70 others were stricken among office workers.

Columbia had its headaches with "Blondie Goes Latin." First director Frank Strayer was bedded, and producer Robert Sparks took over the direction. Penny Singleton took ill, then Larry Simms. Finally, Sparks caught the germ and the set closed down.

With nothing to do, Strayer, who in the meantime, had recovered, spent one afternoon shooting material for the main titles.

The Columbia studio hospital, after examination, sent 30 persons home. The total stricken on the lot approached 60.

Paramount, congratulating itself that the epidemic had not caused any shooting delay, over the weekend was forced to suspend "New York Town," when Director Charles Vidor and star Mary Martin were unable to report for work. Schedules on the picture had been re-arranged when Fred MacMurray and Margaret Hayes were ailing, as were those on "I Wanted Wings," when Brian Donlevy and William Holden were out.

A total of 50 were reported ill at Paramount, including producers Jack Moss and Anthony Veiller.

Illness of Edmund O'Brien delayed added scenes for "A Guy, a Girl and a Gob," Harold Lloyd production for RKO. Producer Lou Brock, Wendy Barrie and about 40 others were out for several days or more at RKO.

Producer H. S. Brown, Jr., Judy Canova and 35 backlot workers at Republic reported illnesses at Republic, but no production delays were caused.

MGM attaches said 75, from front office to backlot, were ill and missing from work, while the studio hospital was overloaded with incipient "flu" victim treatments.

Monogram found W. Ray Johnston, Edith Fellows, Marcia Mae Jones and about 12 others suffering from the epidemic.

In the most drastic of studio shooting schedule revisions, Warners, as a precautionary measure, ordered five of its seven companies in production to work on outdoor sets in order to avoid contamination from colds. "The Great Lie," with Bette Davis and Mary Astor, was sent on location at Victorville. James Cagney, Olivia de Havilland and Rita Hayworth and other members of the cast of "Strawberry Blonde" were taken to Griffith Park for scenes there. "She Stayed Kissed" continued shooting at the Warner Ranch, although scheduled to come into the studio. "The Sea Wolf" was put to work at the lot's outdoor lake, and backlot outdoor scenes of "Here Comes Happiness" were taken.

As a result no player illness was reported, although approximately 50 of the studio's office force were stricken.

RKO Hillstreet and Pantages theatre officials blamed the epidemic for losses in grosses last week. Theatre business was off generally, as city and county health authorities advised against public gatherings. School officials, who for a time discussed the possibilities of closing the institutions temporarily, warned youngsters not to attend theatres and other indoor gatherings.

Santa Fe Trail

(Warners-First National)

Accent on Americana

"Santa Fe Trail" is Americana in personal action, garnished and glamoured and be-splashed with the colors of romance. The background is West Point, Kansas Territory, Washington and Harper's Ferry. The story is out of the pages of the history of the land of "the middle border" from 1854 to the hanging of John Brown.

Meanwhile, for the purposes of the showman retailing at the box office, background and history are to be held strictly atmospheric and and the merchandise continues to be the established screen personalities of Flynn, DeHavilland and Massey, with, it may be added, no little accent on the Massey contribution.

Also the Santa Fe Trail itself contributes more motivation than specifically direct participation—it is Why rather than Where. But all of the forces, personal and political, that were to lead to the "birth of a nation" are components in their fashion.

There's "Beauty" Stuart, of the Virginia cavalry; George Custer, he of the "Last Stand"; Phil Sheridan, George Pickett and Jim Longstreet among others, when cadets at West Point and as junior officers at the then furthermost western outpost of the Army, Fort Leavenworth; Robert E. Lee, then a colonel; Jefferson Davis, secretary of war, and, of course, John Brown, the "Kansas Terror."

Raymond Massey's performance in his portrayal of the Abolitionist, can be compared to his "Abe Lincoln." Errol Flynn and Ronald Reagan are Stuart and Custer, respectively, and though they may not see eye to eye on the question of slavery, they see eye to eye on the charms of Olivia de Havilland's "Kit Carson Halliday," whose father "Cyrus Halliday," has dreams of building a railroad along the Santa Fe Trail. Guinn "Big Boy" Williams and Alan Hale, portraying rough and ready Kansas boys, are the focal point for most of the comedy.

Kansas is dominant in the story. It is there that the Young West Point graduates are sent after an argument at the Academy over John Brown and slavery. "Rader" (Van Heflin), an enthusiast of abolitionism and an undercover agent for Brown, and Stuart get into a fist fight, resulting in "Rader's" discharge from the Academy and Stuart's appointment to Leavenworth. "Rader" makes his way to Kansas and for a price becomes John Brown's military expert.

"Rader" and Stuart meet again when Brown attacks a convoy of goods, guarded by Stuart's troop. The attack results in the turning out of the entire garrison in search of Brown. Stuart does some private scouting and is captured by Brown's men. About to be hanged, Stuart escapes into a barn, which is set afire. The arrival of the cavalry saves the future Confederate general from the pyre.

John Brown heads east and after social amenities at the fort, Stuart and Custer, now captains, go to Washington. They are dancing at a ball the night "Rader" comes to sell John Brown down the river, and thus join Colonel Lee's troops in the raid on Harper's Ferry and the hanging of John Brown.

To the accompaniment of "John Brown's Body Lies A-Mouldering in the Grave" Stuart and Custer head west once again. On the train Stuart and "Kit" are married.

Covering the years immediately prior to the War-Between-the-States the picture is chiefly one of entertainment and secondarily a setting for the discussion of an issue of the day, namely, slavery. The issue is presented for what it is worth—John Brown's theory is one thing and John Brown's fanaticism another.

Although avoiding direct mention of the impending Civil War, subtle references to it have been inserted in the script. There is the occasion when the young officers have their fortune told by a squaw. They laugh when they hear they will be fighting against each other shortly in a bloody conflict. In the group are such names as Stuart, Custer, Sheridan, Hood and Longstreet.

Then again, at the ball in Washington, Custer meets a Miss Davis. Questioned on her father's occupation, Custer receives the reply: "He's a politician, but I think he's going to lose his job." The father's first name was Jefferson.

"Santa Fe Trail" was directed by Michael Curtiz, who turned out "Virginia City" and "The Sea Hawk." The original screen play is by Robert Buckner, and the music, which serves to heighten the dramatic qualities of the picture, by Max Steiner.

Profile of a Working Girl

This is the kind of picture that built the business, built all the theatres and all the studios and, from time to time and often in the nick of it, rebuilds that business. It is the kind of picture producers dream about making and exhibitors pore over the HERALD'S PRODUCT DIGEST in quest of, a picture in the groove of today, yet in no groove, with something for every man and woman in every level of life expressed in terms every one of them can grasp without a struggle and hold onto with satisfaction.

For expediency in informing the customers about what to expect, a showman may start by saying that in this performance Ginger Rogers makes all her other performances look like rehearsals. Some millions of them have been told twice, by Life magazine, that the film is a picturization of a novel by Christopher Morley which had the nation by the eyes some months back. It remains for showmen to tell them that Life magazine, for all its devotion of page upon page to the subject, is for once guilty of understatement, that the camera has again made a beggar of ink and paper as an instrument of narration.

Mr. Morley's story, scripted by Dalton Trumbo in a fashion to eliminate a measure of sinning with gain rather than loss of power, is about a Philadelphia working girl in love with a young man born on the right side of the tracks, her experiences there and in New York, during and after this romance, ending with her decision as to where her happiness and welfare lie. There is nothing in that synopsis to distinguish the picture from a thousand others that have gone before, and there is nothing in the picture that likens it to any of them.

Produced by David Hempstead of executive producer Harry Edington, the picture displays in every sequence and in the sum of them the craftsmanship of Sam Wood, director of "Goodbye Mr. Chips" and "Our Town," manifested here in ways and by means recalling neither of these achievements. A device by which beginning and end of the picture are linked in a manner which makes time in its passing seem always now is a bit of wizardry not to be analyzed by the public but enjoyed to the full.

Previewed at the Pantages Theatre, Hollywood, to an audience made up of press, profession and public in approximately equal numbers, with ripples of laughter, outbursts of applause and solid silences alternating in a pattern recognizable the world over as proof of prime satisfaction.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

"EXHIBITORS EVERYWHERE CAN PLAY

"Here is a picture far and above anything Autry has made in the past and one worthy of a smashing exploitation campaign. A perfect blending of comedy, music, and excitement makes this palatable screen fare for all types of movie fans."

• SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW

"Not only does this give the western fans the usual action they enjoy—fighting and shooting—but it presents entertainment also for those who do not ordinarily follow pictures of this type. It is not a typical western, for music, comedy, and romance play a large part in the development of the plot; the production is on a more lavish scale."

• HARRISON'S REPORTS

"A high-rating musical comedy . . . destined to have the greatest audience appeal of any Autry film. Metropolitanites as well as hinterlanders will go for the music, romance, and comedy."

• THE EXHIBITOR

"Drama and melodrama, comedy and music . . . the appeal is far greater than that of the general outdoor action picture . . . cast names of marquee value."

• MOTION PICTURE DAILY

"Gene Autry graduates into big-time musicals . . . an elaborately filmed western which stresses comedy and song . . . far removed from the more familiar riding, shooting 'horse operas.' A strong supporting cast, an important factor which should aid in introducing the Nation's No. 1 Cowboy Star to countless fans who avoid typical western fare."

• FILM BULLETIN

"Swell fun. Knock-out comedy sketches . . . Ann Miller's inimitable dancing . . . Jimmy Durante has one of his best roles, and how he does go to town . . . Vera Vague very good . . . Mary Lee clicks for a hit . . . George Hayes is excellent . . . Horace MacMahon does a bang-up comedy job. And Gene Autry was never better."

• HOLLYWOOD REPORTER

"Most elaborate Autry and a very good show . . . excellent production values, plenty of song, comedy, and action. Ann Miller, effective feminine foil; and Jimmy Durante, swell comic."

Flight Command

(MGM)

Naval Aviation Melodrama

Timeliness of topic and thoroughness in presentation of the Navy's aviation equipment and personnel, on land and in air, distinguish this melodrama as box office merchandise from the exploitation point of view. Sequences dealing with this aspect of the picture, which predominates, range from squadron flights in fair weather and foul to landings and takeoffs from carrier ships at sea, rescues under stress, crack-ups and misadventures, the whole emphasizing ability, efficiency and resourcefulness of the Navy's air arm. National defense is mentioned in dialogue but not dramatized. Against this background is told a story of a flight commander, his wife and a recruit whose friendship for her brother and kindness to her in bereavement is misunderstood by his fellows, in a way to make his career miserable until developments clear him of suspicion. Robert Taylor as the recruit, Walter Pidgeon as the Commander, Ruth Hussey as the wife and Paul Kelly as a Lieut. Commander are the names for the marquee.

Produced by J. Walter Ruben and directed by Frank Borzage, with Morton Seligman, U. S. N., as technical adviser, the picture carries the imprint of authenticity. Commander Harvey Haislip collaborated with John Sutherland on the story and Wells Root on the screenplay.

Mood Indigo

This is a study in mood. It is derived from Joseph Conrad's book of the same title dealing with the experiences which enable a man to overcome his bitterness at his fellow humans through a woman's love and trust.

In the Dutch East Indies, the protagonist portrayed by Fredric March has decided to finally renounce society and live alone save for a Chinese servant on an island remote from other ports of call. To him, in terror, the girl enacted by Betty Field flees when she is "sold" by the owners of a girls' band with which she has been touring, to the bestial hotel-keeper interpreted by Sig Rumann.

To the hotel, after the man and girl have fled to the island, come three motley characters whose brutality is matched only by their daring. Seeing his chance of getting rid of his unwelcome guests and of getting revenge on the man and girl at the same time, the hotel-keeper tells the three that the island is full of the treasure he believes the man to have stolen.

Changing its key from the soft and insistent beat of tropic terror to the high pitched note of direct action as the trio is killed off one by one, the film ends with its principal character realizing what the girl means to him. Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Jerome Cowan and Lionel Royce match their performances against those of other cast members as, respectively, the bored and ruthless gang leader, always a "gentleman," and his assistants in crime.

Anthony Beiller produced and John Cromwell directed the John L. Balderston screen play, which follows the spirit and conveys the overtones of the Conrad novel while changing the ending. Leo Tover's photography and the art direction by Hans Dreier and Robert Usher contribute in large measure to the transposition from printed page to screen.

Previewed at the Paramount theatre, Los Angeels, where a professional and lay audience remained absorbed at the unreeling of the tale, and at its interpretation by the picture's cast and its makers.—WALTER SELDEN.

Pony Post

(Universal)

Western Melodrama

The days of the old West, Indian raids and the pony express are revived again this time in Universal's Johnny Mack Brown-Fuzzy Knight vehicle "Pony Post." Action is the keynote with music, comedy and romance spiced throughout to provide all the basic elements of an hour's entertainment.

The star is again cast as the justice-seeking cowboy who must contend with an outlaw ring and Indian raids while operating a pony express relay station. Justice, of course, triumphs.

In supporting roles and lending romantic interest to the picture are Nell O'Day and Dorothy Short with Jimmy Wakely and his Rough Riders bringing action as well as musical renditions to the picture. Ray Taylor directed from an original story and screen play by Sherman Lowe.

Benny and Allen Fight It Out

Only Crossley knows how many millions of listeners to Jack Benny's Jello program and Fred Allen's Texaco airshow have been hearing about this picture for months. But showmen have in this report the word of a listener attentive to both comedians' etherizings that it is all they've said it is and that it did for and to a Tuesday night audience in downtown Los Angeles, everything a showman listening to all the promises made for it via radio would be justified in expecting it to do. In a word, it wowed 'em.

The Allen-Benny feud engaged in for several years on the radio is carried forward in the picture, plot of which has Benny stealing the Merry Macs from Allen for a stage revue and Allen stealing the services of Rochester in reprisal. Other means of vengeance, employed by both, include attempted assassination by gunfire, a motor boat pursuit and wreck, chicanery involving controlling interest in a show, subterfuges involving a blonde and, finally, Benny's marrying of Allen's niece.

Written by William Morrow and Edmund Beloin, who wrote Benny's program, in collaboration with Ernest Pagano and Z. Meyers, the script keeps faith with the characters the stars have established on their programs, adding all the background and adjuncts associated with them. It divides emphasis between the comedians with favor to neither and plenty of punishment for both.

Mary Martin heads the feminine contingent, portraying Allen's niece and singing Cole Porter's "My Heart Belongs to Daddy," which brought her fame on Broadway. Veree Teasdale is seen as Allen's sister and Mary ("Hello, Kid") Kelly as a chambermaid. Rochester shares a duet and a number of crap games with Theresa Harris, while the Merry Macs, seen as themselves, supply some of the harmony singing that won them renown on the Allen program. There are several production numbers featuring the Merriel Abbott Dancers.

Production and direction are by Mark Sandrich, entitled to credit for preserving the essentials of two radio shows without sacrificing the interests of his picture as entertainment in its own right. Music is by Johnny Burke and Jimmy Van Heusen, whose "Isn't That Just Like Love" looms as a hit.

Four Mothers

(Warner Brothers-First National)

Domestic Comedy-Drama

Continuing the chronicle of the American family Lemp, introduced to theatregoers in "Four Daughters" and again in "Four Wives," this picture depicts the group's reactions to adversity which comes from many quarters to distress all members of the unit. The personnel of the family is the same as in the first two pictures and the outcome of the story is as it should be, though its makers have contrived to create and maintain uncertainty on this point in a way to bring tears at a number of points in the narrative. A crowd of critics, viewing the film at the studio on a rainy morning, agreed it measured up to if not beyond the first film in the series.

Although emphasis is distributed so that all members of the family are to the fore at one point or another in the telling, it is around Claude Rains as its head that the story is concentrated. A hurricane and tidal wave destroy property in which family and townfolk have invested, bringing ruin to the Lemps as well as enmity of their neighbors. How they weather the hardship and recoup the losses of all concerned makes up an account of incidents, striving, responses and coincidences such as could occur in the lives of all theatregoers and do in those of most.

The production by Henry Blanke and direction by William Keighley are in consonance with the pictures which have preceded this one in the series on all counts. Stephen Morehouse Avery wrote the screen play from Fannie Hurst's "Sister Act."

Melodrama

A melodrama at bottom, but containing also romance and emotionalism overshadowing action for much of its length, this story of murder and its consequences opens in the diamond-mine fields of Africa and progresses to London, where it finds its finale in a court of justice. Two murders are involved in the narrative, one as a fundament and one as an incident, the experiences of the hero stemming from the first of these.

George Brent is cast as the hero, accused of murdering his partner in a diamond-mine, who escapes to London, establishes himself as a man of finance, sets out to find the daughter of his deceased partner, with the purpose of dividing his wealth with her. Brenda Marshall is seen as the girl, who falls in love with the hero without knowing him as the man alleged to have killed her father, and Lee Patrick plays the girl who, knowing the truth of the case, absolves the hero when brought to trial for two murders.

Produced by William Jacobs and directed by Lewis Seiler, the picture has been designed for purposes of suspense and surprise. Barry Tribers' screen play, from a story by Sheridan Gibney, conduces to this end.

Domestic Comedy

Introducing Harry Langdon in and to a type of portrayal he has not executed in the past, but may be expected to in future if the reaction of an audience attending the preview at midweek in a Los Angeles theatre serving a residential area may be taken as indication, this production by Jed Buell of a comedy predicated on divorce and reconciliation could be starting-point of a career for the comedian in the field of the humor of domesticity not invaded with success by anyone since Sidney Drew.

The character created by Mr. Langdon is a store-keeper indicted by circumstance, not supported by facts, for infidelity on his twentieth wedding anniversary. Upcropping from the episode is a snarl of events surrounding attempts of a lawyer to promote a divorce action, a knot untied by a spot of imbibing and some coincidence. The star turns out to be an expert in this type of delineation.

Direction by William Beaudine, using a script by Vernon Smith and Claire Parrish which distributes laughs throughout the length of the picture, is of a sort to deliver a maximum of entertainment for the ingredients utilized.

Lone Star Raiders

(Republic)

The Three Mesquiteers Up

The trio of bronco "Mr. Fixits," the Three Mesquiteers, are doing their collective good deeds again via flexible saddle work, ready shooting and well placed punches. In their present project, "Stony," "Tucson" and "Lullaby" work to help an old lady, who, fresh from a poor house establishment, has fallen heir to a horse ranch, win a governmental order for horses. A rival horse breeder offers sales resistance by means of cowhand and filly sabotage. The business rivalry, although keen enough, does not produce the customary action paced tone usually associated with the Mesquiteer offerings, a result principally due to a lame shooting script.

Despite its thrill failure, the sage saga sports some fine pictorial displays of horse flesh as placed against widespread canvases of rugged out-of-door environments. Rufe Davis makes the best appearance of the Mesquiteers with his demonstrations of comic and imitation talents. The minute girl angle is formulated by the first screen appearance of June Johnson, daughter of Chick Johnson from the howl team of Olsen and Johnson and "Hellzapoppin." Sarah Padden is the sweet old lady from the poor house and George Douglas is chief culprit. George Sherman staged the events from the scenario schedule of Joseph Moncure March and Barry Shipman.

Koster Plans

Sitting in his office at the foot of the Hollywood Hills in Universal's Universal City one day this week, Henry Koster outlined his plans for the future, plans which extend to the Spring of 1942.

With "Spring Parade," his latest, currently showing throughout the land, Mr. Koster next plans an original by Laudislaus Fodor, with Norman Krasna now at work on the screen play, titled "Almost An Angel." As was the case with the last two pictures he directed, this and the succeeding films will be billed as "Henry Koster Productions," with Joe Pasternak producing.

Following "Almost An Angel" will be a Deanna Durbin vehicle, the fifth film starring the youthful player on which Messrs. Pasternak and Koster will have collaborated as a producer-director team. This is to be based on a well known stage play. Then will come Mr. Koster's first Technicolor picture, a re-make of "Phantom of the Opera." The director explains that the story will be "dusted off and streamlined; it couldn't be produced any more as it was with Lon Chaney, but it can be made most effective with modernization. The opera sequences, for example, really demand sound." The last on the Koster agenda is to be a story of the Russian ballet.

Mr. Koster points out that not one of his projected films have anything to do with war, for, as he says, "I'm trying to make pictures that will help people forget what is going on in the world. I'd refuse to try and make a picture which concerns today's events, or to try and 'educate' people with regard to political, economic or social philosophies. I want my pictures to be entertainment for the people who see them, to have music and laughter in them whenever possible."

Coming to Hollywood in 1936, Mr. Koster has been associated with Mr. Pasternak since 1929, first as a writer and then as director, the latter having been his ambition from the time he was a boy of 16 in Berlin. Then, studying art and music, he did commercial drawings, and, by dint of answering an advertisement in a daily paper, started to draw animated cartoons, used in theatres at the time for advertising purposes, with five or six of them, each running a minute or so, put on the screen in succession.

From that he went to writing, conceiving the idea of having the props, instead of people, act in the cartoons. This led to a job with Terra Films, and gradually he gave up drawing altogether to concentrate on writing for movies. His first directorial effort was "Adventures of a Beautiful Woman," made in Berlin; his second, made with Pasternak, won the award for the best direction given by the International Motion Picture Exposition in Moscow in 1935.

The next year came Hollywood, and succeeding seasons brought Deanna Durbin's "Three Smart Girls," "One Hundred Men and a Girl," "Three Smart Girls Grown Up" and "First Love," as well as "The Affairs of Maupaussant" and "The Rage of Paris." As noted above, the future has been mapped out, too.

MGM BUYS FIVE

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, within the last fortnight, has added five story properties to its vaults, ranging from biography to fantasy in subject matter. All are originals.

The fantasy is "Mama's Angel", an original story by dancer Angna Enters, and is set for production early in 1941. Its theme is that of a child reared to be a perfect product of modern education.

William Rankin's story treatment of the life of newspaper editor William Allen White has been purchased as a Spencer Tracy starring vehicle, and will be filmed with Mr. White's cooperation.

Vaudeville in its heydey is the background of "The Big Time", Howard Emmett Rogers' story which will be produced by Arthur Freed. The yarn follows a song and dance team from their start to an engagement at New York's Palace theatre.

The scene shifts to Burma and Hong Kong in the case of Hans Kafka's "The Uniform", which will be placed in production by Hunt Stromberg. It is a story of international intrigue.

"Gilded Lady", by Robert Andrews and Barry Trivers, deals with an imposter in the ranks of a group of New York women who organize to clean up vice in San Francisco in 1849.

CLAUDETTE COLBERT has been signed to a new Paramount contract.

EDMUND GRAINGER received a new associate producer's contract at Warners.

LARAINE DAY is to have the title role in MGM's "Trial of Mary Dugan."

HAROLD WILSON will act as associate producer to SOL SIEGEL at Paramount.

WILLIAM K. HOWARD will direct "Bad Men of Missouri" for Warners.

EARL BALDWIN is writing an original story for Columbia.

JACK CARSON has been signed to a term contract by Warners.

GUY KIBBEE will have the title role in RKO's "Scattergood Baines."

THEODORE ST. JOHN and ALAN LEMAY are working on the script of "Rurales" for Paramount.

BRIAN DONLEVY and AKIM TOMIROFF, who appeared together in "The Great McGinty," have been cast in Paramount's "Buy Me That Town."

C. GARDNER SULLIVAN has been assigned the screen play "Lucky Baldwin" at Fox.

JAMES CAGNEY, GEORGE BRENT and RONALD REAGAN will have principal roles in Warners' "Dive Bombers."

NEW TALENT SEEN FROM EXPERIMENTAL THEATRE

Equity, Dramatists' Guild Agree On Plan for Tryouts of New Plays; Amateurs Are Barred

Climaxing ten years' study and two years' of actual planning by Actors' Equity, in collaboration with the Dramatists' Guild, an additional source of acting and writing talent for Hollywood and stage is expected to be developed with the launching, this week, of a national experimental theatre, jointly, by the Equity and the Guild.

The first formal meeting of the joint committee, convened, last Friday, December 17th, at Equity headquarters in New York. Winifred Lenihan, actress, was temporary chairman. The next meeting is tentatively scheduled for next Monday, December 23rd. Thomas Breslin, is acting as liaison representative for the Guild, during preliminary conferences. Mr. Breslin pointed out that matters of policy have not yet been determined.

Players Interviewed, Scripts Read

Meanwhile, joint committes of Equity and the Guild, have interviewed about 100 professional dramatists and players, individually and in groups, during the past week, as to their availability for plays and, have read scripts which shows promise of meeting requirements of the tryout group.

It was emphasized by spokesmen for the joint enterprise that only professional playwrights and performers are eligible and that amateurs are not sought. It was pointed out that only members of Equity or the Guild will be used.

"National Experimental Theatre," was the title originally planned for the project in the accord drawn up between Equity and the Guild. Investigation proved that the title was not available, however, and the name "Experimental Theatre, Inc.," may be used.

In an article titled, "The Experimental Theatre Is On Its Way," the Equity, official publication of Actor's Equity, states in part:

"After more than ten years of consultation and study, and following negotiations with the Dramatists' Guild which have consumed more than two years, a joint agreement has been reached between Equity and the Guild, under which experimental productions may not only be made, but will receive both encouragement and a limited amount of assistance.

"Few problems presented to Equity have been more complicated and difficult of solution than this. With increasing unemployment, actors and playwrights alike, have besought Equity for permission to present experimental productions which might increase the scope and power of their work and display their ability to prospective agents and managers.

Danger Seen

"The Council has always been sympathetic to these pleas, but it has also been mindful of inherent dangers in these productions. Given too much scope they would probably be used by certain managers as cheap tryouts of plays under consideration for production, thus nullifying Equity conditions of employment which had taken years to establish.

"Nor was the council unmindful that if plays which were available for commercial production should be found through these experimental productions, the actors whose talent had made that possible, should share in the profits for which they were to some extent responsible. . . ."

Appointed by Equity Council to serve on the general committee were: Winifred Lenihan, Ben Lackland, Ruth Hammond, John Alexander and Hugh Rennie. Phillip Loeb had originally been appointed, but resigned because of pressure of his personal affairs. Mr. Alexander took his place. Representing the Dramatists' Guild are: Arthur Kober, Herbert Rudley, Robert E. Sherwood, Russel Crouse and Clifford Goldsmith.

Conditions of Contract

The contract which creates the experimental theatre, is for one year and expires November 15th, 1941. In order to encourage undiscovered talent, both actors and writers, Equity and the Guild mutually agree to make concessions on established minimum standards and other conditions governing employment of their members.

It is anticipated that the proposed theatre will receive the financial support of the American National Theatre and Academy. It will have complete control of all phases of production, including selection of play, director, cast, etc. Equity and the Guild, will have no financial or other responsibility, except to waive their minimum standards.

If an author receives a bid to have his play produced by a commercial manager after acceptance by the experimental group, he may withdraw it on condition that rehearsals have not yet started.

An important part of the agreement is the stipulation that all plays "shall be produced without scenery." It shall be rehearsed for a period not exceeding four weeks and be presented for not more than three performances in a theatre loaned for that purpose . . . sans rental. No royalty will be paid to the author nor shall any salary be paid to the actors or the director participating.

The advisory board will decide whether admission is to be by invitation or upon payment of an admission fee.

The tryout group will be entitled to two per-cent of the gross weekly box office receipts of a play produced by it, if the play is presented by a commercial manager within six months (not including June, July and August) from the time it was staged by the experimental theatre. It also will be entitled to five per-cent of the proceeds of all subsidiary rights, such as movies, serialization, etc., provided for in the Guild Minimum Basic Agreement, which percentage shall be paid out of the manager's share.

The director and players who participated in the production of the experimental play will receive 50 per cent of the receipts from the manager in such proportion as recommended by the Advisory Board. Any dispute which may arise out of these transactions is to be arbitrated in accordance with the rules of the American Arbitration Association.

Equity and the Guild further agreed that their respective councils would co-operate in giving advice to the newly-formed group; also that they would grant concessions relating to payment of royalties and advance royalties to authors and salaries to players.

Rosenblatt Appointed

Isadore Sokolof, Omaha manager of National Screen and Advertising Accessories, has appointed Max Rosenblatt a salesman in the Nebraska territory to succeed Mike Roth. Mr. Rosenblatt was formerly associated with Capitol Pictures in Omaha.

REVIEWS

reminiscent, in theme at least, of its predesessors in the field of paranoia, particularly the celebrated "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," but it falls short in the execution.

The bout between sanity and insanity begins with a newspaper man uncovering the tomb of a murdered wife and then tracing her husband and killer to an insane asylum, where he has sought haven and where the demented patients have locked up their keepers and assumed control. In the final round the reporter discovers his paranoiac prey as head of a fashionable "Suicide Club," at which the members, in characteristics and outlook not far different from the incarcerated lunatics previously visited, cut cards for death. The murderer is finally apprehended and executed and for a fadeout his waxen likeness is placed in a museum gallery of famous killers.

Exhibitors, contemplating a showing of this German made production in this country, need have no fear of boycott reprisals at the box office. It is understood the film is the recipient of favorable endorsement from organizations hostile to the present Hitler regime and it is further reported that part of the proceeds will be donated to rehabilitation funds for refugees from Germany. The original dialogue is supplemented by superimposed English titles.

March of Time, No. 5, Vol. VII (RKO Radio)

Labor and Defense—1941

The country's two largest labor organization, the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organization, embracing a membership of nine million workers, and the part these organizations play in the lives of American people are brought to the screen in this, the latest issue of March of Time. Here in reportorial fashion is revealed to the audience not only the achievements of these organizations but also their failures, both affecting the members, individually and collectively, and the country as a whole. Through the medium of the camera the big labor strikes of the past twenty-five years are brought to the screen while off-screen commentary recites that during the first eighteen months of World War 1 the two-and-a-half million skilled workers of the AFL voted on more than 3,000 strikes, many of which affected U. S. war industries. Samuel Gompers, Eugene V. Debs, and other outstanding labor leaders of that era figure prominently in several historic scenes. Labor conditions of today, during this period of defense production and organization leaders including William Green, president of the AFL, John L. Army Plans Four Theatres At U.S. Posts

The War Department at Washington last week announced plans for the construction of theatres in the following Army posts: Boise, Ida.; Charlotte, N. C.; Bangor, Me., and Tucson, Ariz. The Army expects to have at least one theatre in each post in the U. S.

Theatre possibilities, outside Army areas, are being explored following announcement of plans for the construction of an Army camp to house an estimated 40,000 officers and men near Rolla, Mo., about 100 miles southwest of St. Louis. It was reported that an unidentified exhibitor plans to erect a 750-seat house in the territory.

Army Accepts MGM Booth

MGM's World's Fair booth at Times Square, New York, was formally turned over to U. S. Army authorities, on Wednesday, as a recruiting station. The ceremonies were broadcast over WHN, at 2 P. M. via transcription; the dedication, itself, was at 1 P. M. Speakers included: Colonel E. B. Pierson, U. S. Army Recruiting Service; Borough President Stanley Isaacs; Howard Deitz, MGM director of advertising and publicity, and Colonel John Reed Fitzpatrick, of Madison Square Garden.

Major Ray Perkins, radio performer, was chairman. A public address system brought the speeches to thousands who filled Times Square. The 16th Infantry Band furnished music.

Actors Seeks Deferment

Actors Equity was asked, this week, to seek a ruling on deferment of actors in hit shows who are about to be conscripted. The first actor called for Army service, Phil Johnson, dancer and understudy in "Hellzapoppin," in making a test case, cites the fact that his job will be over in June, 1941. If he is called in January, 1941, he would lose six months work, he claims, and may not get another job or another hit for months after his release from the Army. Mr. Johnson also claims that he would be ineligible for unemployment insurance for a year following his return to civilian life.

Col. Arthur V. McDermott, New York Selective Service Board director, ruled, however, that actors as a class were not entitled to blanket deferment or exemption.

Warner theatre employees in the Philadelphia district who enlisted for military service include the following: John Radcliffe, main office; John J. Edwards, Parker, Darby, Pa.; Debert Devitt, Earle, Philadelphia; Charles Price, Earle, Atlantic City, enlisted in the Marines; Nathan Lieberman, Orient, Philadelphia; Stockton W. MacElhony, sign shop; Robert L. Frind, Capital, Lancaster, Pa.; Irvine J. MacFarland, Boyd, Philadelphia, and W. J. Woodworth, Roosevelt, Philadelphia, in the Navy; and in the Army, Robert B. Charles, Strand, York, Pa.; William C. Jacoby, Capital, York, Pa.; Morris Rutter, Jr., Karlton, Philadelphia; and Boyd B. Rose, Strand, Philadelphia.

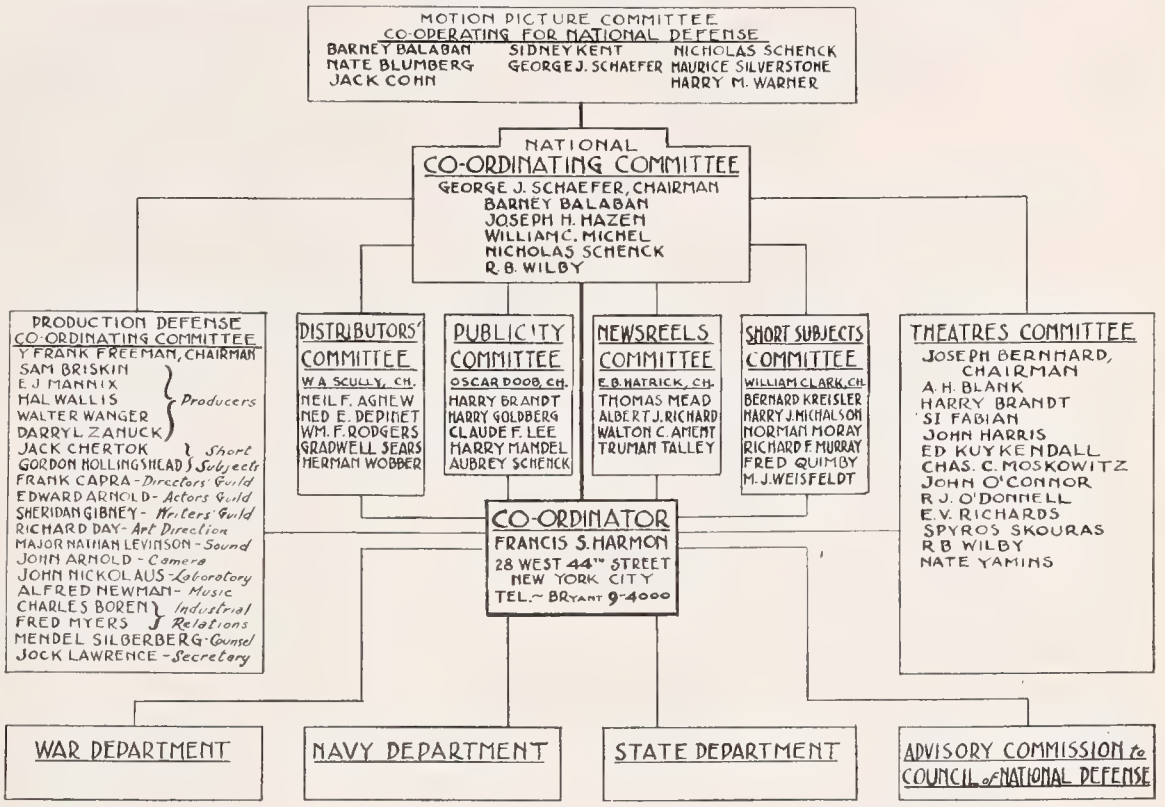
Newest film industry recruits to the Civilian Air Reserve in the New York area include Walter Reade, Jr., of the Walter Reade Circuit, and Harry Fellerman, Universal salesman, it was announced, this week, by Lester Tobias, adjutant of the CAR in the metropolitan district.

Notices posted in all Hollywood studios advised all employees of draft age to submit reports detailing their mechanical and special training, so that Uncle Sam can best use their trained services in case of emergency. The Government's attempt to utilize the trained manpower of the studios is consistent with its general policy of placing trained men in posts where their special training and skill could be best used.

Van A. Nomikos Leads Drive

Van A. Nomikos, Chicago circuit operator and president of Ahepa, national Greek society, announced in Washington last week, that the film industry's quota of the $10,000,000 Greek War Relief campaign would be $3,000,000. He expressed gratification at the response, thus far, from the industry.

Mr. Nomikos announced that Samuel Goldwyn was formulating plans for an international broadcast in the interests of the campaign, in which Prime Minister Churchill and King George from England, General Metaxas and King George from Greece, and officials from Canada, would speak between entertainment furnished by Hollywood stage and screen personalities.



Midnight shows, proceeds of which would be given to the war relief fund, also are planned. Mr. Nomikos is responsible for organizing the independent exhibitors, while Spyros Skouras is directing the circuits' drive. Studios are expected to make independent donations.

After a meeting in the Hamilton Hotel, Washington, last week, Mr. Nomikos announced that a large portion of the reserve fund of the Ahepa Society would be turned over to the fund.

Approximately $500 has been donated to the drive by employees of Warners' and its affiliated theatres, throughout the United States.

Last Tuesday, December 10th, Warner employees presented a check for $5,200 to the British War Relief Society to purchase two motor kitchens, each capable of feeding 200 persons, and 30 hospital-bed units. Women employees have already knitted some 500 garments for war victims.

Industry's Defense Co-ordinators

The motion picture industry, which, months ago, advised the United States Government that it stood ready to aid National Defense in any way requested, is now fully organized, in nine committees, as outlined in the organization chart above, with executives of motion picture corporate management, production, distribution, publicity, newsreels, exhibition and short subjects serving. The industry's liaison officer is Francis S. Harmon, of the MPPDA, working between the various committees and the War, Navy and State Departments, and the Government's Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defense.

Motion pictures are being produced, in Hollywood and at Government places, on preparedness and defense, recruiting, military training and related subjects. Newsreel cooperation is being effected, and other matters arranged.

Incorporate Three Firms

Papers of incorporation for three concerns in the motion picture and radio businesses were issued recently by the New York Secretary of State. The firms are: FM Radio Broadcasting Company, Inc., principals of which are P. K. Leberman and Richard Sanderson of Newark, and Carl J. Schaefer, of New York; Color Classics, Inc., principals of which are Stan Barnett, Clarence H. Hill and Millicent E. Smith, of New York; and Cornwall Amusement, Inc., principals of which are Frederick Unger, Samuel Stiefel, and Harold J. Klein, of New York.

More GM Free Shows

Two more free touring shows are being sent on the road by General Motors, according to Detroit report. One, an outdoor show, "The Parade of Progress," is to play the South's large cities; the other, indoor, "Previews of Progress," is to play the West's smaller cities. Both shows feature highlights from the company's exhibitions at the New York World's Fair and the San Francisco Golden Gate Exposition.

Two Companies Introduced One Third of Film Stars

Rosten Study, on Carnegie Money, Reduces Stars to Statistics

TAKING a survey of 309 stars and featured players, the Motion Picture Research Project, financed by Carnegie Fund money, this week announced its results through the Screen Actors Guild. Some of the discoveries were:

Paramount introduced 17 per cent of the top players now in the industry to motion pictures, and MGM brought 15.7 per cent.

Eleven and one-half per cent entered the industry in Hollywood in some capacity before 1920, one-fourth entered between 1920 and 1929, and almost two thirds of the group began work in Hollywood after 1929, or within the last ten years.

Sixty-five per cent of the actresses are under 40 years of age, while 39.4 per cent of the men are under that limit.

The questionnaires showed that 84.7 per cent of the players have had some theatrical background prior to their appearance on the screen.

Dr. Leo C. Rosten, head of the project, in submitting the report, declared that it would be incorporated in a book on the industry to be published by the project next spring.

One-Third for Paramount, MGM

Other results of the survey are:

"In answer to the question: 'What studio in Hollywood gave you your first movie job?,' the replies were:

"Over three-fourths were first employed by one of the majors.

"One in every ten first entered the industry via one of the independents (e.g., Republic, Monogram, Hal Roach, etc.)

"One-eighth were 'old timers' and were first engaged by studios now no longer in existence.

"Of all 'A' players working in Hollywood today, 17 per cent came into the industry through Paramount, 15.7 per cent were brought in by MGM—a total of one third for the two companies.

"Through Twentieth Century-Fox and Universal, respectively, 11.8 per cent and 11.1 per cent entered.

"One-tenth were first employed by RKO and about the same number by Warners.

"Only three per cent received their first jobs from Columbia.

"Of the actors and actresses in Hollywood today, 94.2 per cent began their Hollywood careers as actors; 1.6 per cent began as actor-directors, actor-writers, etc.; one per cent began as directors, and the same number as assistant directors.

"A very few began as writers, cameramen, laboratory technicians, property or publicity people.

"Of the actors and actresses now here, 69.8 per cent worked only on the screen during the past three years.

"On both screen and stage during these years, 15.1 per cent appeared.

"Six per cent reported employment in all three fields, screen, stage and radio.

"On the screen and radio, during 1938-40, 5.7 per cent reported work.

"From any entertainment medium during the years 1938-40, 1.7 per cent indicated no employment.

"Women apparently are more likely to rotate employment between stage, screen and radio than are the men. Whereas 72 per cent of the men worked solely on the screen during that period, only 65.1 per cent of the actresses devoted full time to the screen."

Of the 309 players queried, 15.8 per cent are under 30 years of age; 31 per cent are in their 30's; 18 per cent between 40 and 49; 20.6 per cent in their 50's; 12.2 per cent in their 60's; 2.2 per cent more than 70 years old.

A table showing men and women's comparative ages was given as following:

	Actresses	Actors
Under 25 years of age	21.3	2.1
Under 30 years of age	37.6	6.8
Under 40 years of age	65.1	39.4
45 years or over	28.8	53.7
60 years or over	11.3	15.8

"Of the players, 68.4 per cent report that they were married as of 1940.

"31.6 per cent report that they were single.

"74.5 per cent of the group are known to have been married at some time and the remaining one fourth did not indicate that they had ever been married.

"Apparently there were many more single actresses than actors; 45.3 per cent of the women reported that they were single as of 1940, whereas only 25.9 per cent of the men reported that they were bachelors. Of the actresses, 64 per cent said they were married or had been married at some time, whereas 80 per cent of the actors made such a report. These differences are undoubtedly partly due to the difference in age between the two groups, as already discussed.

"Of those who were married, 71.5 per cent of the entire group reported as to the number of children. Of this group:

"25.5 per cent report that they have no children.

"42.7 per cent reported that they have one child.

"14 per cent report that they have two children.

"12.7 per cent report that they have three children.

"5 per cent report that they have four or more children."

Taking up the family backgrounds of the players, Dr. Rosten tabulated the fathers' occupations for 84 actresses and 200 actors. For the group as a whole, he reported:

"Half are sons and daughters of professional men (e.g., engineers, doctors, attorneys, chemists, etc.)

"One-third have fathers who belong to the proprietary group (bankers, manufacturers, hotel owners, etc.)

"Six and three-tenths per cent have fathers who fall in the clerical classification (bookkeepers, salesmen, etc.)

"Five per cent are sons and daughters of skilled laborers.

"Three and one-half per cent are sons and daughters of ranchers, farmers and other agricultural workers.

"Few actors came from families which can be called either very poor or very wealthy."

A total of 251 players reported as to the level which they had reached education.

Dr. Rosten found that 49.8 per cent have been to college, 21 per cent having four or more years of college work. Of the total number, 34.7 per cent did not go to college but completed four years of high school.

Only 2.8 per cent report that they had only grade school education.

Twenty per cent received their college training abroad; one third attended institutions in New England or the Middle Atlantic states; 13.6 per cent attended colleges on the West Coast; little more than one-tenth attended universities in the Middle West.

Midseason Traveling Between Coasts

Sales executives from major's home offices in New York continue now, in the midst of the companies' mid-season, to shuttle to the Coast for conferences with their production chiefs. Recent customers of the transcontinental airplane and railway lines have been George J. Schaefer, of RKO; Joseph Seidelman, Nate Blumberg, W. A. Scully, and J. Cheever Cowdin, of Universal; Herman Wobber, Fox, and James R. Gringer, of Republic.

Mr. Schaefer, president of RKO, returned to his New York offices Monday morning, after conferences at the company's studio. He expects to go back in January.

Mr. Wobber, vice-preisdent in charge of distribution for Twentieth Century Fox, plans to spend the holidays with his family in San Francisco, and then to go to the Hollywood studio for conferences with Sidney R. Kent, president of the company, and Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production.

Mr. Scully and Mr. Seidelman, general sales and foreign sales managers respectively, of Universal, arrived in Hollywood Monday for product conferences with Mr. Blumberg, president of the company, and Cliff Work, its production head. They were expected to remain two weeks. Mr. Blumberg may return to New York with them.

Mr. Cowdin, chairman of Universal's board, flew from New York to the coast, Tuesday. He was to join the other Universal officers in Hollywood.

Mr. Grainger, president of Republic, left the New York home office Monday evening, for the Coast, to spend the Christmas holidays there with his family. En route he was to stop at key exchanges.

Mr. Taylor received the first award for his campaign on "Boom Town."

Arthur De Titta, formerly with the Movietone News in Europe, has been shifted to the West Coast as manager, succeeding Jack Darrock.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Columbia

BLONDIE PLAYS CUPID: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—I'll take a "Blondie" any time in preference to some of these so-called big pictures from some of the majors. This is the kind of a feature you can make a little dough on without splitting it a couple of ways. Feature very well taken and business good. Running time, 67 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

DOCTOR TAKES A WIFE, THE: Ray Milland, Loretta Young—Very good but doesn't compare with "His Girl Friday" or "The Awful Truth." Running time, 88 minutes. Played November 26-27.—Pearce Parkhurst, Larcom Theatre, Beverly, Mass. General patronage.

DURANGO KID: Charles Starrett, Luana Walters, Sons of the Pioneers—An O.K. cowboy picture. Running time, 62 minutes. Played November 24-25.—Pearce Parkhurst, Larcom Theatre, Beverly, Mass. General patronage.

GIRLS UNDER 21: Paul Kelly, Rochelle Hudson—A very good program picture played on bargain night that seemed to please average business. Running time, 64 minutes. Played December 6.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

MAN FROM TUMBLEWEEDS: Bill Elliott—Another cowboy picture, if you like cowboy pictures. I don't. However, to give due credit to Columbia, we'll say that this one is just as good as any other on the market today, Gene Autry exception. 'Nuff said. Running time, 59 minutes. Played November 17-18.—Pearce Parkhurst, Larcom Theatre, Beverly, Mass. General patronage.

TOO MANY HUSBANDS: Jean Arthur, Fred MacMurray, Melvyn Douglas—Paid a big price for this and business was very poor. I'd be glad to give Columbia $50 right now to cancel their contract as it's surely a losing proposition. Running time, 84 minutes. Played November 10-12.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Colo. Factory and farming patronage.

WEST OF ABILENE: Charles Starrett, Marjorie Cooley, Sons of the Pioneers—A fair show but not up to par with his other shows. Drew a fair crowd. Running time, 57 minutes. Played November 30.—Harry Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

First National

DR. EHRLICH'S MAGIC BULLET: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Gordon, Donald Crisp, Otto Kruger—What a flop for entertainment for a small town audience. Fancy asking your patrons to come to pay for a show to see how they discovered a cure for syphilis. A real treat for the younger folks from the farm for an evening entertainment. Plenty of walkouts on this. My Saturday night business killed to nothing. Put it in the can and forget it in a spot like mine. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 21.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

LETTER, THE: Bette Davis, Herbert Marshall, James Stephenson, Gale Sondergaard—Bette Davis was superb and also was Herbert Marshall and only Bette could have carried out the very difficult poses and expressive actions emanating with Love Divine and ending in the darkness of a Hell and the faultless acting as only a star of the first magnitude can shine and shine and shine without dimness or loss of lustre and James Stephenson, Miss Davis's attorney, a great lawyer, yet humane and even tender at times and but for "The Letter" Bette wrote to the man she loved and killed all would have been well and ended well, yet Bette met with an untimely death and at the hands of a deeply wronged wife, Gale Sondergaard. Running time, 101 minutes. Played December 5-11.—William Noble, Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

NO TIME FOR COMEDY: James Stewart, Rosalind Russell, Charlie Ruggles, Genevieve Tobin, Louise Beavers—Unfavorable comments on this one. Played November 24-25.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

THEY DRIVE BY NIGHT: George Raft, Humphrey Bogart, Ann Sheridan, Ida Lupino, Gale Page—Very good at the box office. Action fans will like it. Played October 11-12.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

THEY DRIVE BY NIGHT: George Raft, Humphrey Bogart, Ann Sheridan, Ida Lupino, Gale Page—The picture did very well here in Beverly. Ida Lupino definitely stole the show away from George Raft, Ann Sheridan and Humphrey Bogart. Her acting was splendid. How about giving this girl a break, Warner Bros.? Don't be afraid of this one, Mr. Exhibitor, it should mean something at your box office. Running time, 94 minutes. Played November 17-18.—Pearce Parkhurst, Larcom Theatre, Beverly, Mass. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANDY HARDY MEETS DEBUTANTE: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—A sure winner at any box office. They just can't make enough of these Hardy pictures for us exhibitors. With the ability of Mickey and Judy, the future looks promising for a good team that will never fade from the Motion Picture World. Keep 'em coming. Running time, 89 minutes. Played December 8-9.—Harry Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

BOOM TOWN: Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert, Hedy Lamarr, Frank Morgan—Everyone knows this is a good picture and business was fairly good. The exchange wouldn't let me play it any sooner on account of my low admission price, they said. Running time, 120 minutes. Played December 8-9.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BOOM TOWN: Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert, Hedy Lamarr, Frank Morgan—Drew a much better than average business and well liked. Running time, 119 minutes. Played November 17-19.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Colo. Factory and farming patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1940: Eleanor Powell, Fred Astaire, George Murphy—Entertainment plus for my audience. Plenty of comedy and excellent dancing. Tops in its line. Can recommend this one in any spot. Running time, 100 minutes. Played November 28.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

CHRISTMAS CAROL, A (reissue): Lionel Barrymore, Gene Lockhart, Terry Kilburn—A most timely subject that brought very favorable comments from both theatres.—Harland Rankin, Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, and Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

DULCY: Ann Sothern, Ian Hunter, Billie Burke, Roland Young—Played midweek to exceptionally poor business. Picture is good; Ann Sothern never screwier. Running time, 73 minutes. Played December 4-5.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

ESCAPE: Robert Taylor, Norma Shearer, Nazimova, Conrad Veidt—Very fair. Taylor good; in my opinion he's very good in this. Rather a strong dish to set up in a German community, such as this, but you only live once anyway. Running time, 104 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

ESCAPE: Robert Taylor, Norma Shearer, Conrad Veidt, Nazimova—The further the producers stay away from the propaganda pictures the better we will all be off. You can't cavil on the acting; it was tops. But there never was a light moment; it is grim and realistic as perhaps Germany is today. But our regulars were missing and in the grim days that are with us lighter pictures seem to be what the public want. This picture for all its story reputation and the fact that Metro's top stars were in it did only normal business that an ordinary picture would do. They have had war over the air and in the press and that is free, so why spend their sheckles for more of the same and that is what it amounted to. I don't want any more for mine and I don't think our public do. I heard no favorable comment on the picture except for the acting.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

GALLANT SONS: Jackie Cooper, Bonita Granville, Gene Reynolds, June Preisser—Good picture and good business. This will please on Family night. Running time, 70 minutes. Played December 3.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

I LOVE YOU AGAIN: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Frank McHugh, Edmund Lowe—This much heralded production fell flatter than a glass of beer left on the bar all night. No box office here. Played November 8-9.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

STRIKE UP THE BAND: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, June Preisser, Paul Whiteman and His Orchestra—Very well liked but not too good a draw. You never hear any kick when your patrons walk out after having seen a show that had Rooney and Garland in it. Running time, 121 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

STRIKE UP THE BAND: Judy Garland, Mickey Rooney, June Preisser, Paul Whiteman and His Orchestra—As good a musical picture as has been made by any company with two outstanding stars. Judy Garland never better and entire production couldn't have been improved. Business normal. Running time, 120 minutes. Played November 30-December 2.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

THIRD FINGER, LEFT HAND: Myrna Loy, Melvyn Douglas—Pleased those who came and they said so. Business off due to weather I hope. Running time, 92 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

THIRD FINGER, LEFT HAND: Myrna Loy, Melvyn Douglas—A grand comedy of marital mixups that pleased everyone. These two make a grand pair together, even better than Loy and Powell. Running time, 96 minutes. Played December 7-9.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

WYOMING: Wallace Beery, Leo Carrillo, Ann Rutherford, Marjorie Main—Box office tops. Beery can get them in any action story. You're on the right track, Metro. Played November 17-18.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

WYOMING: Wallace Beery, Leo Carrillo, Ann Rutherford, Marjorie Main—Must say that this Beery picture is good. Best picture in Beery's years; drew a good crowd and business was above the average. Was well enjoyed by everyone. Running time, 88 minutes. Played December 1-2.—Harry Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

NORTH SEA PATROL: Geoffrey Toone—An English picture. Maybe an Englishman would like it. Need I say more? Running time, 61 minutes. Played November 19-20.—Pearce Parkhurst, Larcom Theatre, Beverly, Mass. General patronage.

Monogram

DOOMED TO DIE: Boris Karloff—Another of the "Mr. Wong" series. Better than I expected. This one stood up fairly well. Monogram is trying hard.

Running time, 66 minutes. Played November 21-23. Pearce Parkhurst, Larcom Theatre, Beverly, Mass. General patronage.

LAUGHING AT DANGER: Frankie Darro, Joy Hodges, George Houston, Manton Moreland—Frankie Darro and the colored boy do a fine job with what thay have to work with. It's a good "B" picture. Running time, 61 minutes. Played November 28-30.—Pearce Parkhurst, Larcom Theatre, Beverly, Mass. General patronage.

SECRET FOUR, THE: Hugh Sinclair, Griffith Jones—Just 85 minutes thrown away. Rotten. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 30.—Harry Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

SKY BANDITS: James Newill, Louise Stanley—A very good picture enjoyed by many. Drew a crowd far above the previous Pal Nite and was given a high praise by almost everyone. Running time, 62 minutes. Played December 3.—Harry Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

TAKE ME BACK TO OKLAHOMA: Tex Ritter, Bob Wills and His Texas Playboys—Up until the present picture, "Take Me Back to Oklahoma," there has been somewhat a lag in the Ritter pictures. But I must say as long as Monogram keeps Bob Wills and his Texas Playboys in the Ritter productions there should be more in the box office for the exhibitor. Don't pass this production up. A sure fire winner. People even came back on the second night to see it again. Good, well I guess. Running time, 69 minutes. Played December 4-5.—Harry Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ARISE, MY LOVE: Claudette Colbert, Ray Milland—This baby took a nosedive after they saw what it was all about. Colbert is no draw here after "Zaza." Running time, 113 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

ARISE, MY LOVE: Claudette Colbert, Ray Milland—A good story well directed and as usual Claudette Colbert turns in a splendid performance. Received many favorable comments, although business was below average because of a bad snow storm. Running time, 111 minutes. Played December 1-3.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

ARISE, MY LOVE: Claudette Colbert, Ray Milland—Swell picture to big Tuesday-Wednesday business. Should be given best playing time. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 19-20.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

CHEROKEE STRIP: Richard Dix, Florence Rice—Good action feature that pleased my no-action fans. Poor weather cut business but the feature is good. Running time, 86 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

CHRISTMAS IN JULY: Dick Powell, Ellen Drew—Sorry that I didn't book this one for a Sunday showing rather than the one day I did on a Turkey giveaway. This is the type of feature that goes over big here. It's simple and down to earth, nothing elaborate but it has what it takes and that seems to be a bit of humor, a dash of romance and lots of everyday life that could happen to you or me. Running time, 67 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

DANCING ON A DIME: Robert Paige, Grace MacDonald—One or two good numbers in this but as a whole it is rather weak. Will do on a double bill. Not much drawing power. Running time, 74 minutes. Played November 27-28. N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

GREAT McGINTY, THE: Brian Donlevy, Akim Tamiroff, Muriel Angelus—A better-than-average program feature. Running time, 81 minutes. Played November 28-30.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

I WANT A DIVORCE: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—Good show. Business hurt by rain and cold. Believe under better conditions would do top business. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 24-25.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

KNIGHTS OF THE RANGE: Victor Jory, Russell Hayden, Jean Parker—A fair western but have seen lots better. Although a little old, drew a fair crowd. Just another western. Running time, 70 minutes. Played December 7.—Harry Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

MOON OVER BURMA: Dorothy Lamour, Robert Preston, Preston Foster—Missed on this one. Nothing to brag about and nothing at the B. O. Running time, 75 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

RANGERS OF FORTUNE: Fred MacMurray, Patricia Morison, Albert Dekker, Betty Brewer—A swell western to fair Tuesday and Wednesday. Would be great on Saturday but too long for my house. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 26-27.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RIVER: Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Oscar Levant, Basil Rathbone—Very good. Business only average. Roads pretty bad. Lot of snow.—Harland Rankin, Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, and Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

Republic

COLORADO: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes—Tried this on a single bill and got by nicely on week-end.—Harland Rankin, Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg and Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

FRIENDLY NEIGHBORS: Weaver Brothers and Elviry—Good action comedy to above average Sunday-Monday business. Running time, 75 minutes. Played December 1-2.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

GIRL FROM GOD'S COUNTRY: Chester Morris, Charles Bickford, Jane Wyatt—Didn't do the business anticipated. — Harland Rankin, Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, and Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

MELODY RANCH: Gene Autry, Jimmy Durante, Ann Miller, George Hayes, Mary Lee—Good picture and good business. Running time, 84 minutes. Played December 6-7.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SAGA OF DEATH VALLEY: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes, Donald Barry—Wildwest patrons enjoyed it more than average. Best attendance on Rogers this year. They were cooped up by snow and ice for a week which may account for above usual western business. Running time, 60 minutes. Played December 9-10.—Joseph Gray, Gray Theatre, Spangler, Penna. General patronage.

VILLAGE BARN DANCE: Richard Cromwell, Doris Day, Lulu Belle and Scotty—Too much Lulu Belle and Scotty and not enough Barn Dance. A little too "corny" for our patrons. Could have been better with the cast that was featured in this picture. Running time, 71 minutes. Played December 5-7.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

WOMEN IN WAR: Elsie Janis, Patric Knowles, Wendy Barrie—Not what it is cracked up to be. Elsie Janis doesn't belong in the movies, although she tries hard. Expected much better results than I got. Even with the holiday as a box office stimulant. Running time, 73 minutes. Played November 28-30.—Pearce Parkhurst, Larcom Theatre, Beverly, Mass. General patronage.

YOUNG BUFFALO BILL: Roy Rogers, George Hayes, Pauline Moore—An average Roy Rogers western feature. Running time, 58 minutes. Played November 28-30.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

FIVE CAME BACK: Chester Morris, Wendy Barrie, Lucille Ball—Interesting story with tragic ending. Audience reaction good. No star dominating. Relief from gangsteritis epidemic. Running time, 75 minutes. Played December 8.—Joseph Gray, Gray Theatre, Spangler, Pa. General patronage.

IRENE: Anna Neagle, Ray Milland, Roland Young, Billie Burke, May Robson, Zasu Pitts—A very good musical with splendid color sequences. Should please all. It will do business for you as it did for us. Running time, 101 minutes. Played November 19-20.—Pearce Parkhurst, Larcom Theatre, Beverly, Mass. General patronage.

LADDIE: Tim Holt, Virginia Gilmore, Joan Carroll—School children sponsored this and it was well worth sponsoring by such a group. Parents well pleased with feature and heard many good comments. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

LI'L ABNER: Granville Owen, Mona Ray, Johnnie Morris, Martha O'Driscoll—This one really dragged them out. Was enjoyed by practically all and business was the best since early summer. If it hadn't been snowing and blowing out, I believe it would have broken some sort of record here. Running time, 78 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

LI'L ABNER: Granville Owen, Mona Ray, Johnnie Morris, Martha O'Driscoll—Good comedy to above average business. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 17-18.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

LUCKY PARTNERS: Ginger Rogers, Ronald Colman—Swell to good business, but Mr. Roosevelt has surely put Thanksgiving on the blink here. No one knows when to celebrate. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 28-29.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

MEN AGAINST THE SKY: Richard Dix, Wendy Barrie, Edmund Lowe—Due to Santa Claus arrival, great business. Picture is good and barely missed being big. Running time, 75 minutes. Played December 3-4.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

SIXTY GLORIOUS YEARS: Anna Neagle, Anton Walbrook—Well received. Mostly timely. Business fair.—Harland Rankin, Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, and Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

THEY KNEW WHAT THEY WANTED: Carole Lombard, Charles Laughton—An exceptional feature that will have appeal in the rural areas if properly advertised. Adverse weather cut attendance for first day of showing and there wasn't a second due to bad blizzard. Running time, 96 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

TOO MANY GIRLS: Lucille Ball, Richard Carlson, Desi Arnaz, Eddie Bracker, Frances Langford, Ann Miller—As I saw this run off, I thought that it had a trifle odor and that it might be a good idea to go upstairs and do a little book work about the time it was over, but then it might be a good idea to stick around and get an earful, which I did, and was very pleasantly surprised to hear people who never say a word about any feature say that this was a darn good show. It's live and learn, I guess. Running time, 78 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHARLIE CHAN'S MURDER CRUISE: Sidney Toler, Marjorie Weaver—Sidney Toler does an excellent job in this "B" series. More power to him. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 26-27.—Pearce Parkhurst, Larcom Theatre, Beverly, Mass. General patronage.

DOWN ARGENTINE WAY: Don Ameche, Betty Grable, Carmen Miranda, Charlotte Greenwood—Very colorful musical that I am sorry to say I played on a couple of very stormy nights to a very slim crowd. This pleased those who braved weather and drifting snow to get in; they thought it was worth the effort. Running time, 88 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

DOWN ARGENTINE WAY: Don Ameche, Betty Grable, Charlotte Greenwood, Carmen Miranda—One of the most pleasing musicals to come out of Hollywood for a long time and the best Sunday business this season. Don Ameche and Betty Grable are both tops in this one and, as usual, Charlotte Greenwood nearly steals the show. It's real entertainment from start to finish. Played November 24-26.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

GIRL FROM AVENUE A: Jane Withers, Kent Taylor—Terrible. In our estimation Jane Withers has never made a good picture. Played November 29.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

GREAT PROFILE, THE: John Barrymore, Mary Beth Hughes, John Payne, Gregory Ratoff—Played with "Return of Frank James" to very good business. This one drew its share of the crowd. I know that for a fact. It kept them in laughter here from beginning to end and only a few said they did not care for it. However, I can see how it would not be liked in strictly rural sections as they would not get the point of the satire. Personally, I watched one sequence very carefully every time it came through and laughed aloud each time. Running time, 71 minutes. Played December 6-7.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

JOHNNY APOLLO: Tyrone Power, Dorothy Lamour, Edward Arnold, Lloyd Nolan—Only fair crowd for Thanksgiving. One of the best gangster type shows I have ever seen. Both Dorothy Lamour and Tyrone Power played their parts excellently. Running time, 93 minutes. Played November 21-22.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Colo. Factory and farming patronage.

MARK OF ZORRO, THE: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Basil Rathbone—Very much enjoyed here by all. Business only fair. Running time, 92 minutes.—A. E. Elaiasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

MARK OF ZORRO, THE: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Basil Rathbone—Good picture and good business. However, it fell off the second night. Running time, 117 minutes. Played December 4-5.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RETURN OF FRANK JAMES: Henry Fonda, Jackie Cooper, Gene Tierney—Played with "The Great Profile" to very good business. It is a sequel to "Jesse James," but not quite as good. It hasn't the action, for one thing. It is not particularly suited to color as so much of it takes place at night or in dingy rooms. It seemed like a waste of color to me except in two short outdoor sequences. The trail at the end has some very good humor in it and sends them out liking it better than they might have if that part were missing. It probably will draw well everywhere. Running time, 92 minutes. Played December 6-7.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

SAILOR'S LADY: Nancy Kelly, Jon Hall, Joan Davis, Wally Vernon—A good program picture with some good comedy by Joan Davis and Wally Vernon. Running time, 66 minutes. Played December 5-7.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

SHOOTING HIGH: Jane Withers, Gene Autry—I advertised this big, then opened the doors expecting a big Saturday night crowd, but it turned out to be one of the lowest grosses for Saturday this year and Gene Autry has always drawn a good crowd here before. I still can't figure out why! Played November 29-30.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Colo. Factory and farming patronage.

TIN PAN ALLEY: Alice Faye, Betty Grable, John Payne, Jack Oakie—A musical extravaganza. Alice Faye, a second Ruby Keeler in looks and action, Betty Grable, John Payne and Jack Oakie together with a very capable support render a second "Alexander's Ragtime Band" sequence, and the songs, "Moonlit Bay," "Goodby Broadway, Hello France" and "K-K-Katy," and the bright new number, "You Say the Sweetest Things," from Tin Pan Alley to the bright spots on Broadway, somewhere in France, and their girls on the dock to meet 'em on their return, Payne and Oakie are well rewarded for time and patriotic services spent. The picture should go over big whenever and wherever shown. Running time, 94 minutes. Played December 4-11.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

YESTERDAY'S HEROES: Robert Sterling, Jean Rogers—Just a lot of football shots. Played November 13.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

YOUTH WILL BE SERVED: Jane Withers, Jane Darwell—The best Jane Withers picture for some time. Will please the average family type of patronage. Jane still seems to have plenty of box office. Running time, 68 minutes. Played December 4-5.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

Universal

HONEYMOON DEFERRED: Edmund Lowe, Margaret Lindsay—A pretty good little show. Women enjoyed the scrap between the two girls. We cannot afford to double bill; wouldn't do it if we could, so every picture feature must stand alone. With a build up of appropriate shorts, this picture makes good entertainment for ordinary folks. Running time, 59 minutes. Played December 6-7.—Joseph Gray, Gray Theatre, Spangler, Pa. General patronage.

HOT STEEL: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine—Another Richard Arlen-Andy Devine series which is a fairly good "B" picture.. Plenty of action and just right for your week-end trade. Running time, 60 minutes. Played November 21-23.—Pearce Parkhurst, Larcom Theatre, Beverly, Mass. General patronage.

MA! HE'S MAKING EYES AT ME: Tom Brown, Constance Moore—The very type for a program picture. Would not do for any two days or more runs at any town. A very fair cast and drew a fair crowd. Running time, 61 minutes. Played December 6.—Harry Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

YOU'RE NOT SO TOUGH: "Dead End Kids," Nan Grey—Nice little action show possessing extraordinary box office draw. Played November 6.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Hermine, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

YOU'RE NOT SO TOUGH: "Dead End Kids," Nan Grey—Drew fairly good and many favorable comments. Book it and advertise it and you'll be well rewarded at the box office.—E. K. Menagh, Star Theatre, Fort Lupton, Colo. Factory and farming patronage.

United Artists

CAPTAIN CAUTION: Victor Mature, Leo Carrillo, Louise Platt—Poor drawing power in this situation for all sea pictures and this was no exception. Was enjoyed by the few who came. Running time, 88 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT: Joel McCrea, Laraine Day, Herbert Marshall, George Sanders, Robert Benchley—Wow!!!!! What suspense!! What thrills!!!! What a story!!! What direction!!! Yes, and there are some good laughs, too. It lasted two hours and seemed like twenty minutes. Every single soul in a very good crowd said the same thing. It is one of the best films of the year. Alfred Hitchcock's name means a lot here already. That doesn't usually happen to directors. Running time, 120 minutes. Played December 5.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

SLIGHTLY HONORABLE: Pat O'Brien, Ruth Terry, Edward Arnold, Broderick Crawford—Started out to be a civic fight against political crooks and ended in a murder mystery, rather a multiple murder mystery. Picture lacked smoothness, maybe the censors did that. O'Brien attacked in his apartment in the dark by girl, rumpus ends with scene of him lying on top of the girl on davenport. What an audience has to take for Art's sake. Running time, 85 minutes. Played December 4-5.—Joseph Gray, Gray Theatre, Spangler, Pa. General patronage.

SOUTH OF PAGO PAGO: Jon Hall, Victor McLaglen, Frances Farmer, Olympe Bradna, Pedro De Cordoba—Just average. Pedro De Cordoba, cast in the role of a South Seas chieftain, preaches philosophic dogmas that would do credit to a Harvard professor. Played November 3-4.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

WESTERNER, THE: Gary Cooper, Walter Brennan, Doris Davenport, Fred Stone—This is a very good feature that did extra business. Comment from our patrons very good. Played with "London Can Take It" as an added attraction. Running time, 99 minutes. Played December 2-4.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

CITY FOR CONQUEST: James Cagney, Ann Sheridan—Swell show; good business. Ann Sheridan tops right now. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 21-22.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

CITY FOR CONQUEST: James Cagney, Ann Sheridan—This is a very good picture but did not seem to draw the business. However, this below average business might have been caused by bad weather. Running time, 105 minutes. Played November 25-27.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

FLOWING GOLD: John Garfield, Frances Farmer, Pat O'Brien—Not what it was cracked up to be. We didn't see any gold flowing into our box office. Running time, 80 minutes. Played November 24-25.—Pearce Parkhurst, Larcom Theatre, Beverly, Mass. General patronage.

General patronage.

WASHINGTON PARADE, NO. 1: The Mint—Interesting short about the U. S. Mint. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

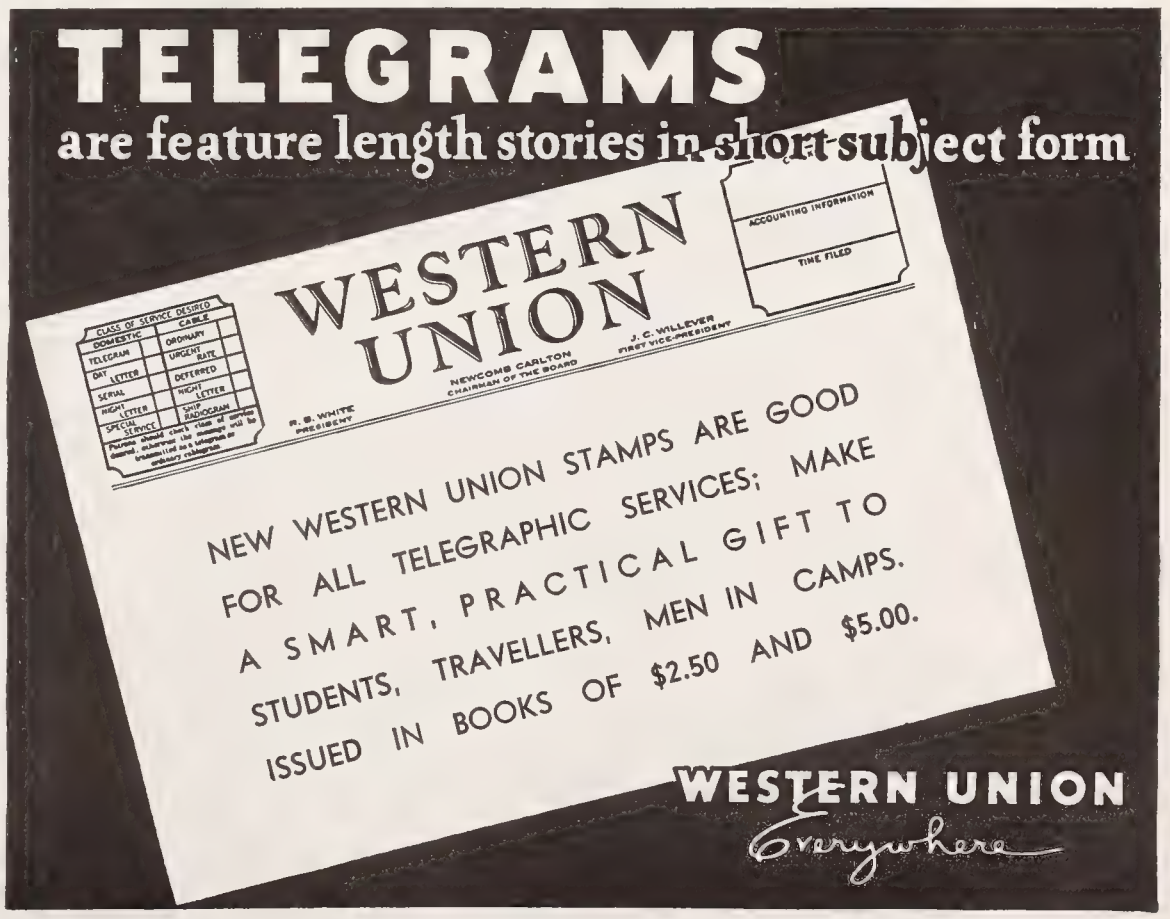
Kiwanis Honors Charles Picquet

The Kiwanis Builder's Cup, emblematic of "constructive service to the community," was awarded, December 12th, to Charles W. Picquet, showman of many years' standing, who at present operates the Princess theatres in Pinehurst and Southern Pines, N. C., at the annual meeting of the Sandhills Kiwanis Club.

Presentation of the "man of the year" trophy was made by Attorney W. B. Sabiston of Carthage, a member of the club's board of directors. Mr. Sabiston pointed out some of the highlights in the varied career of Mr. Picquet, who achieved many "firsts" in films and theatricals.



Abandoning his orchard business, he presented the first musical comedy ever produced in the territory. For three years he was manager of the Herald Square Opera Company, touring every state in the Union, except California. IN COURTS

Fanchon & Marco Awarded $33,500 in St. Louis

A decree awarding $33,500 to Fanchon & Marco, Inc., and two affiliates in their suit against three St. Louis lawyers, John S. Leahy, Lambert W. Walther and Harold F. Heckner, was entered last week by Judge Joseph J. Ward of the St. Louis circuit court.

The decree orders that 215 notes for $200 each executed by Fanchon & Marco December 3, 1936 and payable to Mr. Leahy, be cancelled and annulled. The court also enjoined the defendants from prosecuting for collection on the notes. Fanchon & Marco sued for $42,200 as the return of legal fees paid the lawyers, but the court decided on $33,500, which included interest from the time the suit was filed in July, 1939.

The suit alleged the attorneys represented the theatrical concern in forming a company to lease the Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres and that the defendants forfeited right to any fee because Mr. Leahy failed to disclose his personal interest in the deal. Mr. Leahy denied this contention and says he will file a motion for a new trial. The testimony in the suit lasted 55 days.

Complaint Held Insufficient

Holding the complaint failed to state facts sufficient for legal action Justice Benn Kenyon of the supreme court, dismissed the suit filed last month by Mrs. Florence L. Purdy of Ithaca, to void a two-year contract lease under which H. G. Carroll Theatre, Inc., operates the Strand theatre. Suing as a minority stockholder of the estate of Kate C. Curtis, Inc., owner of the Strand theatre building, Mrs. Purdy demanded an accounting and that the lease and any other agreements between the estate corporation and the Carroll corporation be declared fraudulent and void.

Annenberg Investment Co., charging Fox-Wisconsin with breach of contract in the management of Annenberg's Oriental and Tower theatres between 1934 and 1937. Fox-Wisconsin was charged with waiving clearance on pictures in favor of other theatres. The court ruled otherwise.

Awarded $4,500 Costs

The National Broadcasting Company, Columbia Broadcasting System, Warner Brothers, and a number of music publishing houses last week were awarded $4,500 costs by Federal Judge Samuel Mandelbaum in the suit brought against the companies by Joseph John Davila. The suit claims that "The Desert Song" infringed upon the plaintiff's composition, "If I Were a Spider and You Were My Fly." Judge Mandelbaum had dismissed the suit.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

A Right Merry Christmas, Friends

DEAR ROUND TABLER:

The Yuletide is upon us and our heartiest go to all and sundry for seasonal greetings and gratifying messages of appreciation.

You're a great gang to work with—and for. It's a cinch that any bows we have taken are due to the fine cooperation given by you folks in the field.

Checking back a bit over 1940 reveals it hasn't been such a bad year, has it? Nothing terrific, perhaps, but surely more than just "adequate." In fact, the records turn up a lot of easy reading vital statistics.

For instance, 1940 shows a goodly number of members taking the marital hurdle with grace and dispatch. Many have become proud "poppas." And thankfully, few have passed on.

On the important side of health, Round Tablers happily rate high. Little serious illness was reported. Most of those so afflicted have come around and are back on the job with the old zippero. And that a lot of the members evidently are happy in their work becomes apparent in the quantity and quality of campaigns reaching this desk. State of mind and state of health largely determine the soundness of boxoffice activities, don't you agree?

That would have bearing on the new distribution set-up. It needs no Einstein to figure that individual pictures are scheduled for more, much more comprehensive exploitation in the field. Theatremen who know the answers will have much to do with the fate of the new procedure. The manager who is adjusted physically and mentally is obviously in better shape to take over. (And, confidentially, 1941 may well be the year he does take over.)

Of course, business practices—new, old, or revamped—won't mean a thing if product fails to hold up. To encourage the excellent work done during the year, it becomes evident that coming pictures allow plenty of opportunity for showmanship selling. This is intended as no especial pitch for product but the line-up for the coming year certainly bears a very healthy look.

From what the boys tell us, the fortunes of many have mended, improved. Some good men have lost out. In most cases, however, they have regained much of the ground. Then, 1940 saw scores of Round Tablers stepped up to bigger jobs—and doing well too, thank you.

Some were kind enough to credit their successes in the Quigley Awards. That is nice to know. With hundreds of hardhitters competing for the honors, bossmen probably have good reason to select winners for extra consideration. What 1940 winners have to say, incidentally, will be set down in early issues.

Early issues will also carry details of the 1941 Awards. There are to be some changes but essentially, the Competitions remain the same.

Gosh, gettin' late, and how we do run on. So let's close with personal wishes for everything good in 1941 for you and yours. It's sure nice knowing you. And it's sure good to be in the only business that sells entertainment.

May the New Year be the best yet for all of us. May we be permitted to continue on our bright and untrammeled way in providing relaxation for a sorely troubled world.

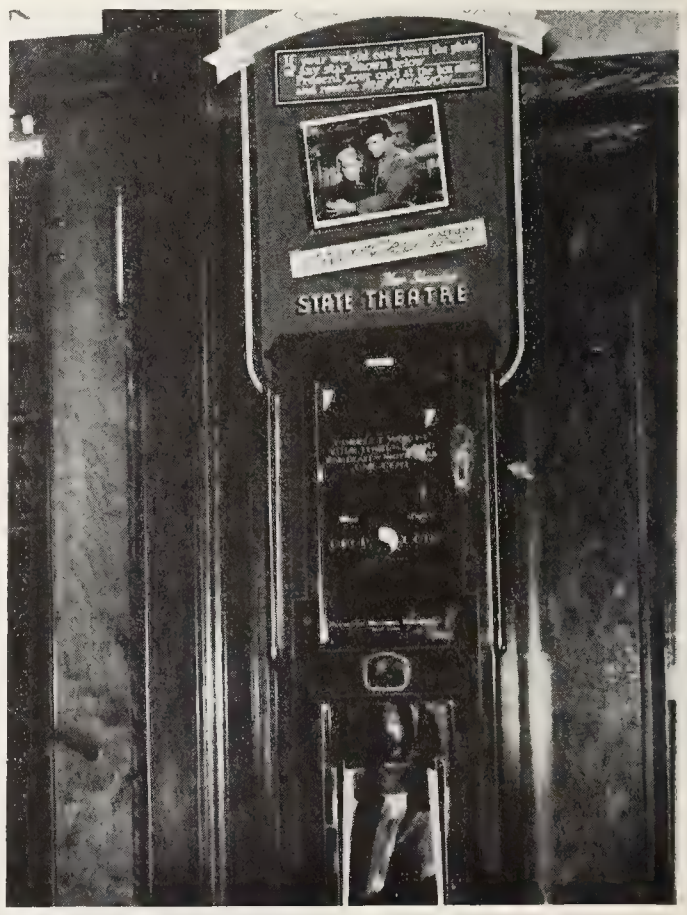
THE news is that Bill Pine, associate producer for Cecil B. DeMille, and Bill Thomas, former Paramount producer, have joined hands in a new producing unit. Soon, there will be evidence of this partnership on the screen which should be occasion for applause from among those who are familiar with the Pine-Thomas backgrounds.

With long years of theatre and picture-making experience to guide them, the heads of the new unit will be turning out a product that should ring the bell. Round Tablers will welcome these efforts from the two Bills as another proof that theatremen who have sold pictures at the boxoffice also have the savvy and imagination to fashion the kind of product theatremen will have little difficulty in selling.

A-Mike Vogel

Forwarded by Manager R. B. Gorham at the Liberty, Horton, Kan., was Santa lobby setpiece executed by Archie Clark, theatre artist. Gaily packed gift packages at base carried forthcoming attraction titles.

Giant cutout shamrock in lobby of the Utah, Salt Lake, was used by Charlie Pincus for Judy Garland's first starring vehicle "Nellie Kelly." Featured on the setpiece were title and cast.



Photos taken at last year's college prom for which Kay Kyser and orchestra appeared were used by Frank Bickerstaff at the Palace, Athens, Ga., on "You'll Find Out." Students identifying themselves in shots blown up for lobby display were rewarded with theatre tickets. Automatic music box played Kyser recordings from past and present picture.

Round Table In Pictures

For bally on "Meet the Missus" at Loew's Bijou in New Haven, H. W. Reisinger had usher push store wax figure on rollers through downtown area. Sandwich sign carried copy "Make a date for today to see" etc., etc.

To inaugurate permanent tieup on five and dime scales, J. F. Rogers at the State, Harrisburg, gave tickets to those getting weight cards bearing photo of any star shown on posted scene still. With each change of program, Rogers planted new stills.

Dailies Sponsor Special Screening

With the campaign on "Arizona" at the Warner Stanley, in Philadelphia, Ev Callow, zone ad head aimed to sell the date distinctly away from a western, by tying in the newspapers for an unusual advance screening wherein the editors and critics of the five Philadelphia papers sponsored a screening. Most of the hand-picked list of guests were selected by personal invitation of the newspapers. One of the material results was endorsement letters from principals of the public and high school system and also endorsement trailers in the principal Warner theatres throughout the city.

Literature and ballyhoo were combined in the distribution of heralds by models costumed as cow-girls who held forth at Franklin Field, local college stadium and other busy centers. The model cowgirl tiein was also used on opening day, when with the cooperation of leading restaurants and health council, Phoebe Titus pies were given away on the downtown corners to any purchaser of Christmas seals.

Full windows and interior displays were arranged in nine leading downtown department and book stores. The newspapers were widely covered in advance with publicity, among the other outside stunts was plane flying banner at the recent Penn-Cornell game.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Market Celebration Hooked To "Knew What They Wanted"

Learning that the largest local market was celebrating its birthday coincident with the booking of "They Knew What They Wanted" at the Palace, in Canton, Ohio, Manager Ralph W. Russell hooked the celebration to a tiein, copy line reading "a quarter of a million people shopped here last year because they knew what they wanted." Over 25 merchants in the market having separate stalls were promoted by the theatreman to run posters, etc., tied directly to the picture. At four distinct times during the day numbers were drawn for prizes offered by the merchants, theatre coming through with four passes, which necessitated the constant plugging of the picture title over p.a. system.

In connection with "Mark of Zorro," Ralph was fortunate enough to promote a local collector of edge weapons for an elaborate lobby display. Each item was tagged and the display was good enough to rate a special story in local daily. For interior, Russell covered the orchestra pit with an illuminated cutout of Zorro which he says proved quite a novel attractor.

Brien Ties Steel Mill To "Hot Steel" Date

With what he reports to be the largest wrought iron mill in the world, situated in Ambridge, Pa., Lige Brien, formerly at the Prince there and now at the Belmar in Pittsburg, for "Hot Steel" promoted advertising manager of company for actual model of a recently built bridge. This was planted in lobby together with various applications of the many kinds of steels manufactured in Ambridge and the ways they were used in construction.

Steel plant further cooperated printing jumbo cards which were posted at strategic spots around the mill, near time clocks in each department, bulletin boards, lunch rooms, etc. Steel company went along further by paying cost of printing and distributing 1,000 heralds.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Terrell Plays Cupid On "Arise, My Love"

As an advance teaser stunt for "Arise, My Love" engagement at Loew's Palace, in Washington, Dan Terrell distributed two fold leaflets front cover of which carried copy: "Three ways to be a Great Lover, by Ray Milland. Right out of the script of 'Arise, My Love.'" Inside spread featured cuts of Colbert and Milland with a piece of court plaster over his nose. Pasted along side was a piece of band-aid with instructions to use it in case Claudette gave the girl friend an idea.

Addressed to all the Kellys in phone book and all members of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, Terrell sent a special letter calling attention to opening of "Little Nellie Kelly." Letter head carried shamrock cut, superimposed on which were photos of the stars, and all type was in bright green.

DELUXE LOBBY SETPIECE

WITH understandable pride, Howard Pettingill, Paramount Miami Theatres ad head, forwards photo reproduced above of the new 30-foot de luxe setpiece for the lobby of the Sheridan, the circuit's ace Miami Beach house. Designed by Jack Murray, art head, the display, 9 feet high, covers the lobby space between two main foyer doors, color scheme coinciding with that of the carpeting. Glass tubing used is 1 inch in diameter, twice usual size, and 6 feet high, which made it necessary to have tubing especially made up. Frosting the glass, impossible in glass of this type, was achieved with airbrush spraying on back of glass with special mixture. Concealed lighting gives setpiece effect of corrugated glass columns.

Face is covered with leatherette in contrasting hues. A new departure is the heavy linoleum in wood grain which skirts the base of set and can be cleansed with ordinary woodwork cleaning materials. Indirect lighting illuminates the display in the center and on the side frames. Heavy metal mouldings, without any exposed screws or nails, are used.

"Convoy" Gets Premiere In San Francisco

The sea thriller "Convoy" made in cooperation with the British Admiralty had its American premiere at the Golden Gate Theatre, in San Francisco, highlight of which was a detachment of National Guard men in uniform on duty in the lobby. Display of machine guns, trench mortars, rifles and other equipment was featured.

For outside decoration, a huge sea action scene was planted on marquee with sound effects. Special art 25-sheet and lobby panels were displayed week ahead and bulletin boards of city schools carried announcements of the engagement. Through tieups with Stations KGO, KPO, KSAN, KROW and KFRC, RKO stars were interviewed.

Bulnes Gives "Lincoln" Wide Coverage in Trinidad

Concentrating on a newspaper barrage to get across the "Abraham Lincoln" date at the Globe Theatre, in Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, RKO Manager James J. Bulnes fired the first gun of his campaign by running three-column ad carrying cuts of the emancipator and Hitler. Tiein copy was included representing Democracy and Dictatorship respectively. The same personalities were again featured a few days later with a double spread, and each succeeding day for practically a month ahead of opening either writeups or ads appeared in the press.

Folks Vote "McGinty" In Roberts Campaign

Week ahead of opening of "Great McGinty" at the Shawnee, in Plymouth, Pa., Will Roberts constructed a voting booth in his lobby. Patrons were invited to cast their votes on lucky number ballots which were later good for guest tickets. Special lobby displays and newspaper ads featured shots of Roberts and Brian Donlevy taken in Hollywood when the former visited the "McGinty'" set.

Opening day street parade was held headed by Plymouth High band dressed in full regalia, followed up by bannered cars. Directly in back of band in open car rode "The Great McGinty," dressed in checkered suit, brown derby, etc., who doffed his hat in true political style.

Football Score Card Used By Benjii for "Girls"

Distributed at football game between Northwestern and the University of Wisconsin were Ed Benjii's combination heralds and football score cards used for "Too Many Girls" at the Capitol, Madison. Novelty invitations were also mailed to officers of all fraternities and sororities, various instructors and civic and social leaders.

A unique ballyhoo was that of a special six-sheet mounted on a frame with handles and carried behind the band at stadium before the game. A mobile car with posters covered the town day of the game.

Pfotenauer Ties Radio To "You'll Find Out" Date

With his highlight stunt a radio quiz contest over KOCY, Bob Pfotenauer of the State, Oklahoma City, staged a varied exploitation campaign for Kay Kyser's "You'll Find Out." Three days ahead questions regarding Kay Kyser and the picture were asked on each 15-minute program daily. Other radio factors included a 50-word spot announcement following the Kyser network show on Wednesday evening, eight daily spots for four days and the playing of Kyser records. On each program the picture and playdates were prominently mentioned.

The entire theatre staff was dressed in costumes a la the Old Professor and each wore a lapel badge plugging the show. A classified ad contest, stepped-up advertising and a flashy lobby display were used in addition.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Smith's Radio Tiein

Reported by Don Smith at the Meralta Theatre, in Culver City, Cal., is the successful tiein he effected between Station KMPC and his theatre. Utilizing a popular transcription show sponsored by a local automobile dealer and emceed by Smith's assistant, guest tickets are offered as prizes in connection with title song guessing contest, which is a regular part of the program. Theatre gets numerous plugs as do the forthcoming and current attractions and Smith contacts winners from many parts of the city not reached through his regular advertising.

Tri-States Contest Aids On 'Mountie'

Recognition of reader potentialities in "North West Mounted Police" were realized quickly by Manager Harry Holdsburg for the date at the Tri States Des Moines, in Des Moines by hooking in the town's most popular columnist to the "How to Get Your Man" contest. Interest was further titilated by classified ads in the Sunday papers reading: "Wanted. Information regarding a person residing in Iowa who was formerly in the service of the North West Mounted Police. Write Manager, Des Moines Theatre, Des Moines, Ia."

Radio coverage included tieup with Drake University with students from the school of radio giving a drama taken from the script. In addition 60 word spot announcement was landed over KRNT. Art department made up a special front with red oilcloth as a background utilizing paper from the 24, six and three sheets. Boxoffice was completely covered and painted to resemble a stockade. Street bally included man dressed in "Mountie" uniform who covered downtown area, in addition, staff was dressed in keeping.

Copies of a history of the Royal Canadian Mounted police were given to the public library with a picture of the presentation landing in local dailies. Special screening was held for high school class in journalism, which brought reviews by the students in the high school papers. In addition letters went forth to class presidents of small schools within a radius of 40 miles advising that special prizes would be made if students attended in groups.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Sobattoka's Diploma Stunt In "You'll Find Out"

Manager Herb Sobottka of the Paramount Theatre, Portland, Ore., used diploma throwaways in his campaign for Kay Kyser's "You'll Find Out." Those diplomas signed by the theatre manager entitled the holder to free admission. Where the signature was omitted the fancy diploma headed "Stoo-dents! Enroll Now in Kay Kyser's College of Musical Knowledge" served as an advertisement.

Sobottka spotted in the lobby a large tube upright in the shape of a diploma. A 24-sheet board also was used in the lobby. The theatre printed music wrappers with tie-in copy which were used by Meier Franks and Newberry's Music Department.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Serialization Planted By Deering on "Dictator"

Three days ahead of his opening of "The Great Dictator" at Loew's, in Houston, Manager Francis Deering planted a serialization on the life of Chaplin with appropriate theatre and picture credits. Additional publicity was gleaned by the theatreman through a special showing at which 200 underprivileged children were invited as guests of woman editor of the Houston Junior Post. Paper's photographer was on hand to take pictures which were planted together with story.

Laughter Analysis Sells 'Road Show'

Concentrating on the laugh value of 'Road Show" for its world premiere at the Stanley Theatre, in Pittsburgh, Frank Seltzer of the Hal Roach Studios tied in with the American Institute of Humor Analysis. Followed through by Joe Feldman, Warner ad head in that situation, 24-sheets blanketed the town advising movie-goers not to see "Road Show" until they were "humor analyzed." To further sell the idea, laugh clinics were set up in the lobby of the theatre, Gimbels, and in a special laboratory trailer which toured the city.

At each of the clinics one of the new psychometers was installed, the machine measuring the sensitivity of eight different kinds of humor. A series of cartoons were displayed singly as the patrons held electrodes which measured the intensity and density of their laughter.

Newspaper ads broke tying in the "Get Measured for Pleasure" campaign which was followed with a broadcast over KDKA, which presented Rube Goldberg as master of ceremonies, Louella Parsons, et al.

The following wire sent by the Institute to Hal Roach broke in papers several days ahead of premiere. "The Board of Directors accepts your challenge to defend our scientific studies of humor by applying them to your comedy 'Road Show.' No matter how hilarious 'Road Show' may be, we are confident our humor-analysis quiz will reveal certain limitations. We shall identify these limitations for you and for those whom we humor-analyze."

Theatremen Honor Lightman, McCoy

All of the Malco theatres are now engaged in the circuit's "Employees Loyalty Drive" honoring M. A. Lightman and M. S. McCord, the event covering December. To aid the movement, a detailed manual has been compiled by the committee, of Round Tablers W. Clyde Smith, Ollie Brownlee and Paul Jones.

To be noted are such ideas as "Queen of the Holiday," a festival tied in with merchants, schools, colleges, fraternal organizations, each to offer a candidate for the honors. The "Queen" of course is elected through a voting campaign. The committee also forwards a Christmas Eve preview slant on a possible tiein with local hospital guild, etc., to sell tickets on a split basis. Support of all civic clubs through managers' membership is also suggested as a builder in the Festival tieins and other holiday months. For additional stage slants, Tiny Tot Revue and Leap Year Stage Wedding are stressed.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Andrews' "Monster" Window

To give a gala atmosphere to his date on "Strike Up the Band," Ted Conklin at Schine's Federal, in Federalsburg, Md., contacted local light company for use of flood lights opening night. Picture started with a midnight showing, lights attracting folks from that sector.

Essay Contest Sells "Escape" for Higgins

"What is your favorite form of Escape" was the title of an essay contest staged by Manager John Higgins of the Capitol, in Hazelton, Pa., in connection with showing of that picture. Contestants were asked to describe their favorite form of escape and how it brought surcease or happiness, how it renewed interest in business, one's profession, etc. Winners received copies of the book promoted from local dealer with guest tickets to runnersup.

School Dedicates Game To "Rockne" for Smith

Through the efforts of Malco city manager, Clyde Smith, arrangements were made for the local junior high school to dedicate their football game to "Knute Rockne" opening at the Paramount, in Hot Springs, Ark. Winning team was presented with a trophy by the theatreman, which was good for stories and art. School arranged and put on a special 30-minute broadcast over KTHS from their auditorium, skit being built around the awarding of the trophy to the winner.

Attractive was the special theatre float depicting a football field with cutouts of Knute in the center, which formed part of the parade held opening day. For further coverage float was taken to football field, while the band paraded playing Notre Dame marches.

Dressing a young man in a loud checked suit, derby hat, white spats and gloves, yellow tie, cane, etc., Manager Fred E. Forry, at the Colonial Theatre, in Lancaster, Pa., sent him out on to cover entire business district during peak hours distributing teaser visiting cards with the message: "I am the Great McGinty." Working week ahead of opening, man visited ball parks and whereever crowds assembled passing out the cards

MANTA-MEN FORMULATE CITYWIDE PROMOTIONS

Indiana-Illinois Round Tablers Engage Cooperation of Civic Heads in Recent Campaigns

Continuous and vigorous exploitations by the Round Tablers of the Indian-Illinois circuit are in evidence currently as represented by the campaigns forwarded by the long-timers among the Manta-men, as well as the newcomers in the circuit. Some of what the boys have been doing to present their wares is outlined in the following, leading off with Art Wartha, of the Elco, in Elkhart, Ind.

Since Elkhart is the center of the band instrument industry, Wartha saw an opening for unusual publicity on "Strike Up the Band." He called a meeting of the industry heads and sold them on full page ads to impress the importance of their business. The layout was in regular news style, with banner heads and feature stories all having to do with the industry itself and the picture. It was illustrated with cuts of Rooney and his orchestra in action.

Merchants were worked into the campaign on a "masked players contest" wherein a set of MGM star stills was placed in the lobby. Copy advised patrons that duplicate stills, masked, would be found in leading windows, and those turning in a list of the stores and correct name of star found in each window would be guests of the theatre. The "mask" effect was obtained by painting out the eyes of the stars in the stills in the windows.

Haney's "Horror-Midnight" Jamboree

At the circuit's "B" Elkhart unit, the Bucklen, Leo Haney crashed through with what he announces as a tremendous Hallowe'en Horror-Midnight Jamboree, springing from his showing of "Mummy's Hand." Tickets were sold in advance to turnaway business. Copy used for the campaign is well represented by the trailer Haney sprang on the customers, in three frames:

"Your teeth will chatter. Your knees will clatter. Your skin will creep. Your heart will leap. But you'll have the horrific fun time of your lifetime at our—

"Hallowe'en Horror Jamboree. Midnight, Saturday, October 26. Doors open at 11:30. The terror starts at midnight (the witching hour). Tickets now on sale. No children's tickets sold—it's too scary—

"Don't Be A Sissy. Get up a party—join the fun. And—if the Goblins Get You—you can say, 'You've had a swell time,' Here's the eerie picture surrounded by really spooky shorts," etc., etc.

For the youngsters, Haney put on a costume contest during his regular Saturday kid show matinee which was advertised as was the Horror Show in circus-type pluggers, paid for by merchants ads on reverse.

Tompkins Parades "McGinty"

The city of Whiting, Ind., stages an annual Hallowe'en costume parade in which hundreds of youngsters participate and which draws crowds from all over the area. Opening "Great McGinty" on Hallowe'en night and just before election, Chick Tompkins, at the Hoosier, finally got the Mayor to allow a theatre ballyhoo in the procession, a "first-time" according to Chick.

So Tompkins spotted an old-time political torchlight bally right behind one of the bands which had two boys carrying a large muslin "McGinty for Governor" banner. This was followed by McGinty himself, in complete costume as in the picture, with campaign cigars which he passed out in the crowds. For further buildup, he even kissed a few babies. Following were bannered cars, telling about the "McGinty Rally" at the theatre and the distribution of "free cider and doughnuts."

At the theatre the lobby was occupied with lots of the promised drink-and-doughnuts which Chick promoted, all of which had considerably to do with the fine reception recorded for the date during the run.

Griffith Holds "McGinty" Straw Vote

Playing the picture right after election, Bob Griffith, at the Lex, Chicago, worked out a different advance "straw vote" tiein for "Great McGinty" in the form of a "penny" promotion. On a large lobby board, 10 feet by eight, Griffith placed pictures of both presidential candidates with copy that patrons could vote for their candidate by dropping pennies in either of two large jars, each labeled accordingly. Picture copy also was carried.

With each penny, numbered registration card was given and those holding the "luckies," posted at the theatre on election night, were accepted as guest on that night only. All pennies collected were turned over to the Chicago Community Fund, which was noted in the downtown papers in calling attention to the unusual "poll" hookup.

School Dedicates Game to "Rockne"

Transferred to the Roxy, in La Porte, Ind., with just a few days to work out a campaign for "Knute Rockne," W. F. Borns lost no time in getting the Mayor to proclaim a "Rockne Week" covering the date, which of course was duly noted in the papers. Borns then persuaded the school board to have an important high school game a few days ahead dedicated to the famed coach—and the sports editors did the rest by featuring the tiein.

For outside attentions, the manager promoted the high school freshman football squad, in costume, to carry theatre banners around town as they ran through formations and otherwise engaged the interest of Saturday shopping crowds. Windows around town were spotted with special cards and the eye-stopping Rockne photo enlargements.

Since the high school band is very popular in Goshen, Ind., Roy E. Hanson tied in to have the outfit parade to the Jefferson on opening night of "Strike Up the Band," give a concert outside, then assemble on the stage for another performance. The papers made much of the event in photo and story and Hanson reports the school heads highly reception to the hook-up.

FPC Movie News Published by Burke

Started as an experiment on behalf of the attractions at the Brant, in Brantford, Ontario, "Movie News", the front page of a recent issue which is illustrated below, has been expanded by Manager Bill Burke to double the size of initial issues. In fact, the idea has gone over so well, that the News now includes attractions at the Capitol, the other FPC theatre in the same situation.

Starting with a circulation of 2500, and soliciting the outside advertising himself from local merchants personally, Burke has now increased the book to double the distribution. The magazine is kept to one size, nine and one half by three columns wide and is issued every two months with a different star cut on cover of each number.

Full cost of printing is covered by ads with merchants, according to the Round Tabler, completely satisfied with results. Ads are confined to one to a page, three columns by two inches at the bottom of each page. To guarantee reader attention, Bill includes a contest wherein the head of a movie star is included in each ad. To the first 50 sending in correct list of names of all stars and merchants' ads in which they appear, a guest ticket is awarded. In addition to assurance to the advertisers that the copy is being read, the tiein also allows the theatre a check on how well the "Movie News" is being received. In addition to the ads throughout the book, back page is sold solidly for outside advertising. Material is taken almost exclusively from the pressbooks received in advance and experience proves to Burke that this publication sells a great number of tickets for attractions mentioned. So popular has the magazine became that Burke reports much favorable comment from patrons requesting additional copies.

ONE OF BURKE'S "NEWS" COVERS

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Effective co-op page was arranged recently by M. E. Berman for the personal appearance of Ted Lewis at the Orpheum, in Springfield, Ill. Each merchant's ad was featured in an outline of the comedian's well-known top hat. Contest angle was brought in through list of questions pertaining to the star's life which were scattered throughout the ads. Guest tickets went to winners.

For his engagement on "Boom Town" at the Paramount, in North Adams, Mass., Round Tabler Francis Faille stretched a banner across the street in front of his house which featured title, cast and playdates. Newspapers came through with nice editorials plugging the picture and mentioning the banner.

Effective was the transportation company tieup arranged by Herman Levy at the Orpheum, in Sioux City, for "Boys from Syracuse," whereby 24-sheets covered entire sides of street cars during run. In addition, Levy planted a quarter page two-color ad which proved an attractor.

For his date on "Bitter Sweet" at Loew's, in Houston, Texas, Francis Deering practically dominated his color ad pages which ran in the three dailies. Balance of page was devoted to art work and publicity on current and coming attractions.

Over his signature, Marlowe Conner at the Sheboygan, Sheboygan, Wis., circularized his mailing list in connection with advance publicity on "The Letter." Title was featured across top of sheet, followed by copy "When you expect a letter, you expect news . . . and this is great news for you! In fact it's always great news to announce a Bette Davis picture." Balance of letter was devoted to picture copy, cast and playdates.

To interest kid patronage in his "Young People" date at the Oakwood, in Toronto, A. Easson distributed imprinted blotters to all schools in theatre district. In addition, second feature and short subjects were plugged.

By way of welcoming a large delegation of the Knights of Columbus in Abbeville, La., M. E. Ferrera at the Dixie entered his "Strike Up the Band" float. Drum corps rode on the truck, either side of which carried cutout figures of Rooney and Garland playing drums.

"Babes in Hollywood" was the headline over a full page of baby pictures of M-G-M film stars planted by Milt Young, Warners Philadelphia publicist, in the local Sunday Record.

A full-page layout showing Fay Holden, the Ma Hardy of M-G-M's popular series, carving a turkey, was featured in the Dayton Sunday News a week before Thanksgiving. It was planted by Sam Gilman, Loew's.

BRITISH WAR MATERIEL SHOWN WITH "BLACKOUT"

Collected by the American Committee for Defense of British Homes, an exhibit of rifles, binoculars, helmets, etc., to be sent abroad, was displayed in the New York Globe as a tiein with "Blackout". Patrons were asked to donate like items for distribution to British civilians and similar tieups are contemplated nationally with local committees in the movement.

Hugh Martin, exploitation manager for the Martin Circuit in the Atlanta and New Orleans territory, used the home town of Lum and Abner, Pine Ridge, Ark., as a springboard for a big mailing campaign on "Dreaming Out Loud." Some 20,000 post cards bearing a message from Lum and Abner were mailed from Pine Ridge to the lists of a large number of the Martin Circuit theatres.

"What is your favorite form of escape?" was the basis of a contest planted in the local Times-Star by Matt Saunders, Poli, Bridgeport, as part of his campaign for "Escape." Readers were asked to submit letters with guest tickets awarded to winning entries.

An ad-writing contest among Syracuse U.'s journalism students, with the winner receiving a cash award, was one of the highlights of the "Comrade X" campaign put over by Frank Murphy, Loew's, Syracuse.

Keen-eyed amateur sleuths of Harrisburg were offered cash and guest tickets for identifying a "mystery shopper" in local stores as part of the "Little Nellie Kelly" campaign put over by Bill Elder, Loew's, Harrisburg. Those recognizing the young lady, and announcing: "You are Little Nellie Kelly," were given the awards.

For his "Dulcy" campaign, Morris Rosenthal, Loew's Poli, Bridgeport, had a pretty young lady in uniform stroll through streets with a package marked: "Kisses from Dulcy." To all the curious she tendered a candy kiss.

TWIRLING SIGNS SELL "LOVE" FOR PRICKETT

For "I Love You Again" at the El Rancho, Victoria, Tex., Ken Prickett lined up a parade of boys carrying block signs, each sign bearing one letter of the title. At a given signal from the leader, the boys twirled the signs, showing the reverse sides, spelling out "It's a Laugh Riot".

Highly effective were the windshield stickers distributed by A. Easson for "Convoy" at the Oakwood in Toronto. With the line so popular right now, copy read "There'll Always Be An England." Cut of the union jack in color was also run. These were also used on windows by cooperating merchants.

General exploitation for "Boom Town" at the Strand, in Helper, Utah, as put over by Cy Condon included spot announcements over radio in which the picture was generously plugged. Heralds were widely distributed to surrounding mining communities as were window cards. Entire staff wore imprinted sashes week ahead and, through tieup with merchants, tinted photos were available. On all highways into town directional arrows with title were conspicuously planted and red flares promoted from railroad were burned atop marquee.

Since one of Maurice Crew's ushers at the Strand in Waterloo, Ia., has organized a swing band, the theatreman put them to work on "Strike Up the Band." Bannering a truck, lads covered entire city and surrounding area playing hit tunes from the picture.

Folks in Whiting, Ind., were invited to pitch rings in front of the Capitol theatre as part of Bud Borns advance exploitation on "Lucky Cisco Kid." Display board above called attention to the stunt with guest tickets offered to "ringers." Theatre attendant was on hand to make awards.

Gaily colored directional arrows were used on all poles leading into Holyoke, Mass., as Milton Wainstein's advance for "Trail of the Lonesome Pine." Arrows carried title, theatre and playdates.

Special trailer was made up by Bill Burke for "Knute Rockne" at Schine's State, Fostoria, Ohio, which is reported to have created much comment. Theatreman used a Victor recording of Rock talking to his team, this from the old Universal picture "The Spirit of Notre Dame." Promoted footballs were sent to the coast for Pat O'Brien's autograph and later presented to the local high school teams. Stunt broker papers with stores and art.

Street bally for "Sailor's Lady" at the Victory Theatre, in Holyoke, Mass., as arranged by George Laby consisted of lad dressed in woman's attire parading downtown area with back banner. Copy read: "If you think I'm funny, wait until you see," etc., etc.

An identification contest was one of the features of the "Third Finger, Left Hand" campaign put over by Milton D. Lewis, Fischer, Danville, Ill. An usher, impersonating Myrna Loy's "missing husband," toured several department stores with a copy of the local newspaper under his arm. Customers recognizing him received guest tickets to the theatre.

FORTUNATE are we of the motion picture that in a day of world ordeals, deep national concerns and all humanity on trial with its woes of adjustment, we have as our function and share of service the happiest job on earth—the purveying of entertainment. ¶ Through the medium of make-believe that makes dreams come true, we open vistas of heart's desire attained, declaring for the screen's hour of grace a truce with fact in a shadowland where, for the while at least, a perplexed people may enjoy peace on earth and goodwill.

Taxes and More Taxes

ADMISSION TAX collections for 1940 will run well in excess of $40,000,000, more than double the $19,876,312 received in 1939.

The Internal Revenue Bureau indicates that Federal collections from this source were heading to new high levels, with November receipts hitting a new peak at $7,-124,225, nearly a half-million dollars above the $6,628,430 reported for October and a full $5,000,000 above the $2,117,644 of November a year ago.

During the first five months (July-November) of the new 20-cent tax exemption, collections jumped nearly $17,000,000 above a year ago, bringing the total for the first 11 months of 1940 to $36,829,342, compared with $17,900,777 for the corresponding period in 1939.

Special Assistant Attorney General Jesse Moss, chief of the New York division, announced, on Monday, that more than $2,-000,000 in past-due Federal admission taxes had been recovered by the U. S. Government in the past 18 months in the New York metropolitan area from theatres, night clubs and other amusement places.

The special Federal prosecutor indicated that theatres comprised the smallest portion of violators.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America has announced that it will launch a campaign to have the Federal revenue act amended in the next Congress for a lower tax on "student tickets." About 12,-000,000 young persons are reported eligible for such cut-rate admissions. Under the present law they pay the adult tax.

Omaha county officials have appealed to the Nebraska Supreme Court to reinstate their tax valuations on Ralph D. Goldberg's two downtown houses, the Town and the State, both in Omaha. Mr. Goldberg recently appealed to the district court, which reduced the assessment from $50,000 to $35,000 on the Town and from $85,000 to $50,500 on the State.

Elmer Barlow, Wisconsin tax commissioner, has taken under advisement a request of representatives of independent and circuit exhibitors, to permit deductions made from 1935 to 1939 for expenses involved in staging games in some 400 Wisconsin theatres and involving some $125,000. Exhibitors in arguing allowance of the claims maintain they were made in good faith when the games were legal and that the deductions claimed were incurred in an effort to "stimulate business."

A test suit asking that the Indiana state gross income tax division be required to reimburse more than 60 theatres for an alleged "double tax," has been filed by the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, in Indianapolis, on behalf of about a score of exhibitors and circuits. Counsel for the plaintiffs claim that on percentage pictures both the distributor and exhibitor are paying a gross tax on the same boxoffice admissions, contending that this is a double tax. Taxes involved are said to amount to more than $100,000.

Daniel Frohman Dies

DANIEL FROHMAN, 89, associated with the American theatre for over 70 years and with the motion picture for an important period in the early days, died Thursday morning in New York City.

In 1912, against the wishes of his brother Charles, also a stage producer, Mr. Frohman became associated with films, Famous players. He was principally charged with seeing that the company's slogan of "famous players in famous plays" was carried out. He helped to introduce many personalities, many practices.

Prestige was given to the opening of Sarah Bernhardt in the motion picture "Queen Elizabeth" at the Lyceum theatre in New York on July 12, 1912, by the announcement, "Daniel Frohman Presents." Shortly after that Mr. Frohman persuaded the stage actor James O'Neill to appear in one of Famous Players' first productions, "The Count of Monte Cristo," directed by Edwin S. Porter. Mr. Frohman also helped the early screen careers of John Barrymore, Mary Pickford and many others.

No Code Revisions

JOSEPH I. BREEN, Production Code Administrator in Hollywood, visiting New York, last week, attributed recent public criticisms of "relaxation of code enforcement" to the appearance in quick succession of several pictures containing "borderline" dialogue or dialogue suspectible of more than one interpretation.

The occurence of these pictures was purely coincidental and did not constitute a symptom of code enforcement relaxation, explained Mr. Breen. He added that no revision of the Production Code was contemplated or is needed, answering recent reports that more stringent enforcement was in prospct.

The total number of features and shorts approved by the Production Code Authority of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America showed a decline this year for the fourth successive year. For the first 11 months of each year in all cases the comparative figures are as follows:

	1940	1939	1938
Features approved.....	484	533	543
Shorts approved.....	651	669	761

Up to December 1st, 446 features were approved in the west coast and 38 in the east; 428 shorts were passed on the coast and 223 in the east.

A large number of reissues helped to swell the 1939 figures, it was said. Indications this week pointed to relatively high production activity which might bring up the 1940 figure somewhat during December.

"Local" News Camera

EXTENSION of the exhibition of local newsreels of pictures of neighborhood and other events in proximity, taken by neighborhood exhibitors to develop new box office interest, is expected from the development of what is described as the lightest 16mm. portable sound movie camera—weighing under eight pounds.

Dr. F. G. Back, scientist, formerly with Zeiss and Eclair, and who created the "stomach camera" for the medical profession, is the inventor. Associated with him is Hugh Elsasser, former director of local theatre newsreel development for DeVry.

Theatre owners use local reels either by filming a full length single reel subject, or by inserting clips in their regular newsreel. Local sports not covered by any of the five newsreels because of their lack of general interest are cited as being particularly suitable for local filming.

Camera Sales

MOTION picture cameras made last year had a total pre-sale value at the factory of $4,606,851, according to a report issued by William Lane Austin, director of the U. S. Census Bureau, in Washington. It presents a preliminary compilation of returns from the 1939 Census of Manufactures, the first in which a separate figure was obtained for motion picture cameras. Still cameras had a value of $12,739,411. Total value of still and motion picture cameras was $17,346,262, against $12,409,961 in 1937. Dealers' prices are higher.

Production of movie projectors increased in value from $7,154,825 in 1937 to $8,413,872 in 1939. The increase is accounted for largely by motion picture projectors of less than 34 mm. gauge, which numbered 134,515, valued at $6,302,734 last year, against 114,593, valued at $4,869,156 in 1937. Standard-gauge projectors declined from 4,093, valued at $1,995,208 in 1937 to 2,726 valued at $1,287,478 last year. Other projectors gained in value from $290,461 to $823,660, although the number produced declined from 104,065 to 36,780.

Personnel Problems

EXHIBITORS this week were given some opinions, official and otherwise, on personnel problems arising out of the replacement of employees called to U. S. military service. The Ohio Independent Theatre Owners Association, P. J. Wood, executive, in a statement sent out of headquarters at Columbus, warned:

"General opinion holds that management should clearly indicate to new employees engaged as replacements that their employment is temporary in character and subject to termination at any time. Such understanding should be put in writing and signed by the applicant at time of employment. Such employees, when hired to replace individuals called to service, are not subject to the re-employment provisions of the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940, if they themselves are subsequently called for military service.

Independents' Income

THE United States Census Bureau, in Washington, has made public preliminary figures on the distribution of motion pictures in 1939, in which it reports on the activities of independent local film exchanges, but information as to the operations of the major companies will not be forthcoming for a while.

The report showed a count of 214 independent exchanges which in 1939 did a business of $32,544,000, comparing with 165 exchanges reporting sales of $27,001,000 in 1935.

These establishments employed an average of 1,693 persons throughout 1939, against 946 persons in 1935, and had a total payroll of $4,107,000, against $1,691,000. Their total operating expenses in 1939, including payrolls, were placed at $6,925,000, or 21.3 per cent of sales.

Axis Pressure

WHETHER the Argentine censors have barred Charles Chaplain's United Artists release, "The Great Dictator," as reported in the New York press, the foreign sales division in the New York home office of the U.A. had not heard, on Thursday.

According to the New York Herald-Tribune from its Buenos Aires correspondent, Walter Kerr, a print of the film, newly arrived, was to have been shown on Tuesday in that city to the National Board of Censors. He also added that the clamor from pro-Nazi factors, against the picture, had increased, with the newspaper "El Pampero" asking the film's outright rejection.

U.A. said other films hostile to Nazi Germany had passed the Argentine censors, and hoped the film would only be molested in sections, if at all, meanwhile proceeding with plans for an opening next Thursday.

Photographs from the picture have been printed in the country's newspapers, a contrast, according to Mr. Kerr, to the treatment given Mr. Chaplin's picture by Brazil. In that country, no stills were allowed; nor the showing of the picture, publicly or privately.

Both countries have had considerable pressure from the Italian and German governments, and both have large minorities sympathetic to those governments.

Cuba Relents

THE Cuban government will not enforce the country's anti-block booking law for three more months, home offices of the American major film companies, in New York, were advised this wek. The effective date of the law was January 1st. The stay will give the companies and their affiliates in Cuba time to try to negotiate the bill's repeal; and it will enable many Cuban theatres to remain open, because their contracts with the distributors expire at the year's end.

Whether to accept spot bookings in the next three months, is the problem the film companies are now mulling. Acceptance of such bookings, they fear, may be interpreted as weakness.

Meanwhile, proposals for amendment or repeal of the measure are now under way. It is said one compromise proposal asks for selling of pictures by title and for six months in advance. Fulgencio Batista, president of Cuba, appointed a commission to study the question comprising the ministers of Commerce, Education, Government, and others.

Tribute to Normand

HOLLYWOOD paid tribute to Mabel Normand Friday when Republic Studios dedicated its new sound stage to the comedienne.

Invited to the ceremonies were stars and executives who worked with Miss Normand, among them Frank Capra, Ray Griffith, Eddie Cline, Lloyd Bacon, Tay Garnett, Mrs. Darryl Zanuck (Virginia Fox), Charlie Chaplin, Harry Langdon, Wallace McDonald, Slim Summerville, Vic Potel, Andy Clyde, Del Lord, Hank Mann, Chester and Heinie Conklin, Babe Hardy, Monte Banks, Chuck Reisner, Gloria Swanson, Roy Del Ruth, Wesley Ruggles, Carole Lombard, Sally Eilers, Louise Fazenda, Polly Moran, Frank Lloyd, Eddie Sutherland, Wallace Beery, Dorothy Reid, Dot Farley, Jack Mulhall, Monte Blue, Richard Wallace, Marion Nixon, Mae Busch, Vera Steadman, Edgar Kennedy and others.

U. S. Ultimatum

DECLARING that the Government cannot sit by and see ASCAP and the broadcasters engage in a private war at the expense of the public, using violations of the law as their weapons to fight fire with fire, the Department of Justice, in Washington, Thursday, disclosed that it intended to initiate proceedings against all parties in the radio-song royalty battle. Both sides were deadlocked this week as the January 1st contract expiration date approached and as the broadcasters prepared to ban all ASCAP music. Earlier developments are on page 23.

HIGHLIGHT of the 1940 MOTION PICTURE HERALD-FAME poll of exhibitors is without question its establishment of Gene Autry in fourth place on the roster of Money Making Stars. Not since the late Will Rogers topped the 1934 list at crest of a career distinguished by four consecutive placements among the leaders (ninth, second, first, second) has a cowboy star been balloted into this eminence by the showmen who vote from the record, let the heads fall where they may. Yet a bit of reflection reveals reasons in plenty why Autry should be the one to discover himself sharing with the revered Rogers a pinnacle of Fame attained to by no other son of the plains.

Autry's record in the poll through the years explains in part but not in full his 1940 rating. Entering pictures in 1936, he at once took third place behind the veterans, Buck Jones and George O'Brien, in that year's poll of Western Stars. He was voted into first position in 1937, 1938 and 1939, his plurality mounting each year, and of course he retains leadership in the Western Star division of the 1940 poll. A number of factors apart from consistency of performance and flow of product are to be taken into consideration, however, in analyzing this year's uprush to fourth place among the Top Ten.

Introduced to New Audience

A circumstance of significance with respect to spread of the Autry popularity was his appearance, on loan from Republic, opposite Jane Withers, Money-Making Star of 1937 and 1938, in "Shootin' High", a Twentieth Century-Fox feature. Exhibited in that company's circuit of theatres and sold to that company's accounts, theatres not in all cases serviced also by Republic, this film introduced him to many an audience which had never seen him. That these, seeing him, should have liked him and asked for more, was a consequence in consonance with the record of his progress from the filming of his first picture onward.

Another circumstance of importance, and one which showmen may not without exception relish but must credit with a part in expanding Autry's sphere of box office influence, was his Wrigley-sponsored radio program broadcast weekly on Sundays over a national network, an enterprise introducing his personality and talent to a sector of the population out of which come dollars for theatre tickets as well as nickels for gum.

It is to be noted, also, that no less than nine Autry pictures made the rounds during the year, a number of appearances approached by no other star listed among the Top Ten, and it is pertinent that Westerns, in common with other films of American setting and subject, prospered in favour during 1940 as producers and theatregoers turned from foreign scenes and stories in quest of entertainment untinctured by war or suggestion thereof.

This concentration upon depiction of the American scene is of pertinence to analysis of the 1940 poll in whole as well as in detail. Forced upon producers when the map of Europe began undergoing change at a rate threatening obsolescence in midproduction to films of foreign theme and setting, it turned out, surprising more than one of them, to be a policy welcomed with avidity by American theatregoers. Warmth of their response to pictures about America and Americans is reflected throughout the poll of exhibitors reporting it in terms of dollars and cents collected.

Rooney Again

Mickey Rooney, personifying the American youth for his generation and his elders, appears again in Number One position, having underscored his typification of Young America in and as "Young Tom Edison" while continuing his Andy Hardy characterization and adding "Babes in Arms," twice a Monthly Box Office Champion, to his repertoire for the year covered by the poll.

Striding side by side with Rooney in "Babes in Arms," in distribution during the full period of the poll, and in "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante," another Champion released in July, Judy Garland, personifying the American girl, rose from obscurity in the 1939 poll to tenth position among the Money-Making Stars of 1940. They are together again in "Strike Up the Band," but only a week of that picture's proceeds were collected within the period reported.

Spencer Tracy, up from third in 1939 to second place this year, and from fifth in 1938, drew the customers in numbers entitling him to this rank as the American hero of "Northwest Passage," as "Edison the Man" and as a pioneer in the oil country explored by "Boom Town."

Perennial Gable

Clark Gable, "iron man" of the exhibitor poll and only star listed in the Top Ten every year since its inception, is up from fourth place in 1939 to third position this year on the strength of his performance in "Gone With the Wind," as American as the Civil War and a Box Office Champion of December-through-April, and in "Boom Town." Holder of second position in 1937, 1936 and 1934, third in 1938, seventh in 1933 and eighth in 1932, first year of the poll, it is not to be argued, of course, that he'd not have won his 1940 position portraying Nazi pilots had he chosen to.

Tyrone Power, in fifth place this year, displayed his draw to advantage in "Brigham Young, Frontiersman," a saga of the development of America, released toward the end of the year represented by the poll, his portrayal of another American type in "Johnny Apollo," released earlier, perhaps contributing more ticket-sales to the records accounting for his rating among the leaders. He was in second place on the 1939 list, 10th in 1938.

James Cagney rose from ninth position on the 1939 list to sixth place in 1940, his popu-

On this and the opposite page is a complete compilation of the returns in the canvass to determine "The Biggest Money Making Stars of 1940." The ranking is based upon the number of points each player received, a mention for first place receiving ten points, down to one point for a tenth place ballot. The percentages are drawn from the total pointages.

While in total agreement, in the ratio indicated, on the ten leaders named above and on the 15 honor stars listed on the opposite page, exhibitors also named nearly two hundred other players, each reflecting the influences of personal preferences and varying sectional interest. These nominations fall into three natural groupings, classified by ratio of mentions.

MONEY MAKING WESTERNS

STABILITY in the standings of Money-Making Western Stars, segregated for convenience of reference in the listing on this page, is a characteristic of the poll and a tribute to the dependability of the series picture. Appearing with regularity, six to eight times a year, and adhering for the most part to portrayals and plots which have been okayed by their public, Western Stars risk no loss of following by reason of forgetfulness or disappointment. Thus, although all polled more votes, six of them hold this year the positions they occupied in the 1939 poll.

The Autry rating in the Top Ten is reflected in the Western Star list, which he tops of course, in the appearance, in ninth place on the list, of Smiley Burnette, screenmate of Autry and, by that circumstance, recipient of this rating by what might be termed write-in votes of exhibitors.

Bill Boyd, star of six Harry Sherman Hopalong Cassidy productions distributed by Paramount, appears again in runner-up position, to which rank he rose in 1937 from fourth in 1936.

Roy Rogers, star of eight Republic Westerns per year, is again third, a position won in 1939.

George O'Brien, seen in six RKO Radio pictures, retains fourth place. He was second in 1936, fifth in 1937 and fourth in 1938.

Charles Starrett, Columbia star, occupies again the position he rose to in 1939 from sixth in 1938 and eighth in 1937. The same studio's Bill Elliott, in tenth place, is a newcomer in the list.

Johnny Mack Brown, seen in seven Universal Westerns, enters the Money-Making Western Stars list for the first time, taking sixth place.

Tex Ritter, starred in eight Ed Finney productions for Monogram, retains the position taken in 1939 after ranking ninth in 1938, sixth in 1937.

Republic is represented a third time in the list by its Three Mesquiteers series of eight pictures, rated sixth last year, fifth in 1938 and eighth in 1937.

Buck Jones, John Wayne and Bob Baker eighth, ninth and tenth in last year's list, are replaced by Johnny Mack Brown, Smiley Burnette and Bill Elliott. Jones has not made any pictures for more than a year and most of Wayne's vehicles for Republic this year have been away from the western classification.

Champion Pictures Lift Star Ratings

larity mushroomed by his portrayal of the American doughboy in "The Fighting 69th," a Box Office Champion of January and February, plus his performance as the American adventurer in the banana republic that was the scene of "Torrid Zone," a June Champion.

Bing Crosby, back this year in the Money-Making Stars list where he ran fourth to Shirley Temple in 1937 and seventh to Will Rogers in 1934, was "in," as he'd say it, from the moment his "Road to Singapore" broke from the barrier in March, winning an April Box Office Championship, and "cinched" when "Rhythm on the River" came under the wire a winner five weeks before the books closed.

Wallace Beery's appearance among the Top Ten, his first since a recession in 1936 following four successive years among the leaders, is in line with the swing of interest to stories of America in the making. "Twenty Mule Team," released in May, combined history and adventure in the proportions the public was in the market for. "In Old Wyoming" had the Civil War and events which followed it as background, General Custer as a character in the story. The star, a favorite as comedian, villain, hero and character actor in turn and on demand during three decades on the screen, owes less than most to his material but throve on these assignments.

Bette Davis, making her debut among the Money-Making Stars in 1939, leads the feminine contingent in 1940, a man's year, by virtue of her performances in "The Old Maid," a Box Office Champion of October, 1939, and "All This and Heaven Too," a Champion of July and August, 1940, both pictures appearing also on the list of Annual Champions. ("The Letter" did not go into distribution in time for the poll.)

Save for variations in placement, the combined, independent and circuit lists differ as to personnel in only one instance. James Stewart, 11th in the combined list, ranks 9th in the independent list, which rates Miss Davis 13th. She is 9th in the combined list, 6th in the circuit poll. Facts of record in this connection are of interest both with respect to this case and variations like it.

Mr. Stewart, whose personality is of a type considered a natural for towns as well as cities, appeared during the year in pictures made and distributed by several companies, some owning circuits of theatres guaranteeing their films many playdates, some not, their combined outlets, nevertheless, approaching maximum. His "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," released in October and thus in distribution throughout the year reflected in the ballotting, had time to filter down through the levels of exhibition from the cities where circuits predominate to the towns where independents prevail. It was known, on the other hand, as a Frank Capra production to at least as many persons as considered it a Stewart vehicle.

Miss Davis, also regarded as a natural in city and town for reasons certified by two Academy Awards, had "The Old Maid" in distribution long enough to reach the hamlets, but her "All This and Heaven Too" was retained for roadshowing in key-cities.

BALABAN EXPLAINS PARAMOUNT'S SALES POSITION UNDER THE DECREE

Answering Northwest Allied's Objections, He Denies Plan to Sell Blocks Only in Order Would Be Violation

Paramount's intention of preventing any "buyers' field day" under the blocks-of-five consent decree selling provision will not bring the company into any violation of the decree, either "in letter or spirit," Barney Balaban, president, said this week in a letter to Fred H. Strom, executive secretary of Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest, explaining a story that the company planned to sell blocks of five in order and not provide a "buyers' field day" when the selling provisions of the decree become effective with the beginning of the 1941-42 season.

Mr. Strom had written to Mr. Balaban charging that offering blocks of five only after previous ones had been bought and booked "violated both the letter and the spirit of the consent decree which states that the sale or the offer for sale of one block of features shall not be conditioned upon the sale or offer for sale of another block."

No Definite Rule

Mr. Balaban said his original remarks (Motion Picture Herald November 23rd, page 23) should not be interpreted as announcing "any definite plan or formula or hard-and-fast rule for the distribution of Paramount product." But he continued, "However, assuming for the purpose of the discussion that Paramount had decided on a uniform plan or policy of putting into the market only one block of five pictures at a time and of refraining from offering any other block until the first block had been completely bought and booked by its customers, I cannot see how that would violate the consent decree in letter or in spirit. On the contrary it would seem to be the one sure, safe course to follow to avoid a violation of the decree or a claim of violation."

"If Paramount should offer a block of five pictures and no others at the time," Mr. Balaban said, "each exhibitor to whom it is offered is perfectly free to buy or not to buy, strictly upon his judgment as to its merit; and neither the distributor nor the exhibitor could under such circumstances bring any other picture or block of pictures into the equation. Under such a plan Paramount could not say to an exhibitor 'Here are several blocks of trade-shown pictures but you cannot have a block or more which you want, unless you take others that I am offering you.' On the other hand the exhibitor could not claim that that was the requirement that Paramount imposed, which would be contrary to the decree."

Two weeks ago Mr. Balaban commented on Mr. Strom's objections but the matter was fully explained in the letter dated December 23rd, last Monday. It was pointed out that Mr. Balaban's position had been misinterpreted by Northwest Allied.

In the beginning of the letter Mr. Balaban spoke about the decree in general terms saying, "We intend to try to make it work for the good of all and give it a fair trial and we hope that our customers will do likewise, regardless of what may have been their views and may now be their criticisms or fears."

Mr. Balaban said, "very frankly I do not know how pictures will be handled under the new system." But he pointed out, "product must not be dissipated or sacrificed either by distributor or exhibitor in any arbitrary way because if this happens everybody loses. With the huge loss of revenue from our foreign markets, it is of vital importance to every distributor to avoid and prevent dissipation of product in this country if the producer is to remain in business. The exhibitor, correspondingly, must protect himself against such waste, or he will suffer."

"This," Mr. Balaban added, "is precisely what I mean by saying that there would be no exhibitors' 'field day,' an observation in answer to the suggestion that some exhibitors had something of the kind in mind. There cannot be a 'field day' for either buyer or seller at the expense of the other.

Must Plan Distribution

It was emphasized by the Paramount president that some order must be kept in distribution."

"To take care of the needs of our customers and to supply the studio regularly with funds to enable it to function properly and produce entertainment of boxoffice quality, there must be an orderly method evolved for distributing pictures in the various territories according to the differing conditions which may obtain in different places. Considering the fact that second runs must follow first runs and subsequent runs follow earlier runs, it must be apparent that the sale and booking of pictures must be so arranged as to avoid confusion. That will be the task and problem of our distribution department to work out in the most satisfactory and equitable way for all concerned. To attempt to accumulate product for indiscriminate offering without recognizing the fact that some order is necessary would not simplify or aid in the solution."

Northwest To Seek Legislation

"Freezing" of the present system of selling films in Minnesota, before the consent decree selling provisions become effective—and a maintenance of the status quo in circuit operations of that state probably will be sought from the state legislature in January, by the Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest, according to the unit's executive secretary, Fred H. Strom, of Minneapolis.

Thus, the organization hopes to counter the "consent decree" arrived at in New York recently between the Government and five majors, to settle the anti-trust action there. The decree selling becomes operable September 1st, and the Minnesota organization hopes to have contravening legislation on the state's lawbooks by that time.

The state legislation will be sought in an "omnibus" bill, Mr. Strom explained, which will also provide for control and regulation of 16mm "free shows" by merchants in small communities.

Apropos of the latter, Mr. Strom remarked that the shows are usually put on in open lots or vacant stores "and under other conditions which are not only detrimental to the health and safety of the public, but unfair competition to the established motion picture houses as well."

Anent the desire of the unit to maintain a "status quo" in circuit operations, Mr. Strom asserted that Allied of the Northwest is "not, at this time, interested in introducing so-called divorcement legislation, providing we can obtain other concessions and relief from other trade practices which have proven disastrous to the independent exhibitor."

Meanwhile, results of a questionnaire issued to members indicate they desire a meeting for two days the week of January 5th, to discuss and analyze the decree, to determine the wisdom of state legislation for relief from the decree, aand for relief from competition of the 16mm "free shows."

MPTOA to Hollywood?

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America may hold its national convention in Hollywood, in the Spring, Edward L. Kuykendall, its president, said in New York last week. Its members are being polled on the project, now, he said. The first replies to the poll, which is by mail, are favorable, he added.

Legal opposition to the consent decree will not be essayed by the organization, Mr. Kuykendall said, adding all thoughts about such action had been officially dropped. This is because it has no legal standing to bring such action, he said. However, members may try, legally, to test the validity of the decree, Mr. Kuykendall declared.

The Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania at its last membership meeting resolved against a policy by the majors of increasing admission prices for certain features. The resolution added that established prices in an area should be continued until local economic conditions, in exhibitors' opinion, justified a permanent increase.

The organization's members believe attendance is adversely affected immediately before and after a picture is played at advanced prices.

The resolution remarked that "the exhibition business . . . by its very nature, must be conducted on some set policy."

The annual meeting and elections of the Allied of Eastern Pennsylvania will be held January 14th, in Philadelphia. It has been decided not to have a banquet or other festivities, because several of the national Allied leaders will not be able to appear.

Exhibitors of the Southeast, and other sections, are expected to attend a special meeting in Miami, next Tuesday, to discuss the effects of the consent decree upon their businesses. Mitchell Wolfson, of the Wometco circuit, issued the invitations. All exhibitors, everywhere, regardless of affiliation, were invited.

Northern and southern units of the Allied of New Jersey will convene January 21st at the Hotel Stacy-Trent, Trenton. The individual units will also meet, prior to the general meeting; the southern unit at the Hotel Broadwood, Philadelphia, on January 6th, and the northern unit at the New York headquarters, Hotel Lincoln, January 9th.

QUICK ARBITRATION IS POSSIBLE UNDER DECREE

Both Parties to Dispute May Waive Waiting Period, AAA Says; Screening Problem Seen

The American Arbitration Association, which is preparing a schedule of fees to arbitrators designed to reduce costs as much as possible, this week pointed out that although the rules of arbitration in the consent decree set waiting periods for various steps in the arbitration procedure both parties may agree to waive the delays and have a case settled within a few days.

Many cases handled by the Association are settled in considerably less than a week. It was reported that very often both sides want the dispute adjusted as quickly as possible. Certain moiton picture cases will also require a quick settlement, it was said.

New York Office Set

Lucius R. Eastman, chairman of the board of the AAA, announced Tuesday that the Tribunal for the New York arbitration district which includes part of New Jersey will be located at 1230 Sixth Avenue, in the U. S. Rubber Building, Rockefeller Center. This is the first site to be established for any of the 31 local boards to be set up throughout the country.

The headquarters of the AAA will also be moved to the same building, occupying the entire eighth floor and some additional space. Five hearing rooms will be available for motion picture and other cases. The AAA pointed out that the Rockefeller Center location will be more accessible to exhibitors and distributors than the present location on 40th Street. The increased use of arbitration by other industries was cited as another reason for more than doubling the size of the office. The AAA has been named arbitrator in many defense contracts.

Van Vechten Veeder, chairman of the arbitration appeal board, has taken an office in the Bar Association Building. The two other members of the appeal board have not been appointed yet by Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard who signed the consent decree on November 20th. Since the first appeal case will probably not be heard before March or April permanent headquarters for the board will not be selected for some time.

The AAA will move to the new headquarters about the middle of January. The association will celebrate its 15th birthday at about the same time. By February 1st the New York Tribunal and the 30 other local boards will be ready for action. It was reported that one request for arbitration has been received already.

J. Noble Braden, executive secretary of the AAA and head of the motion picture industry local Tribunals plans to complete field work in organizing boards by the early part of January. Those nominated for arbitrators and clerks in the various key cities are now being investigated. The official invitations to serve as arbitrators are being prepared. In the oath of office each arbitrator will be required to swear that he has no connection with the industry.

Screening Facilities Seen a Big Problem

The five theatre-owning distributors which signed the consent decree ending the Government's anti-trust suit against them have been surveying facilities in the various key cities to determine how compulsory advance trade shows will be handled on all pictures released after August 31, 1941, as required by the decree. It was reported that no company has any exchange screening rooms large enough to handle trade shows open to large groups of exhibitors in an exchange district.

The average exchange projection room only seats about 30 or 40 persons and that would not be large enough unless it is found in practice that few exhibitors attend trade shows. It was said that about 150 seats would probably be needed in most key cities for the screenings, with a much greater capacity required in the very large cities.

No General Plan

All the companies were reported to be "feeling their way carefully" and not making any definite arrangements on the matter of trade shows. No general plan has been formed. In some exchange cities a local theatre will probably be hired in the morning for trade shows, with each company taking a turn for showing its product. In other places a closed theatre may be hired on a cooperative basis by the five companies for trade shows. It was said there was little prospect that a special trade show theatre or projection room would be constructed anywhere on account of the cost and the fact that that provision of the decree, along with the block-of-five section, might not be in effect more than a couple of years.

Up to now few of the companies have found trade shows very successful, it was said. Costs are high and even when exhibitors were invited as guests of the company many did not come and some others sent friends. One home office executive remarked, "We never got exhibitors to trade shows when we wanted to pay their way." Under the consent decree exhibitors will have to pay their own expenses if they wish to attend trade shows.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at one time held trade shows mornings at the Astor theatre in New York. The policy however was discontinued. United Artists have also had trade shows on certain pictures this year.

The trade show arrangements may be different in each key city, with local conditions always the deciding factor. It was pointed out, however, that no matter what system is adopted there will be numerous difficulties because several of the companies will proably want the available screening place at the same time and at other periods no company will have one or more blocks of five ready at that territory for trade shows.

In Detroit the screen room of Max Blumenthal in the Film Exchange Building will be enlarged to whatever size necessary to accomodate exhibitors for trade shows in that area, it was reported. Of the consenting companies RKO, Warner Brothers and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have been using that room for their exchange screenings—in Detroit.

U. S. Severing More Field Trust Suits

Dismissal of the five major defendants who have entered with the Government into a consent decree in its New York anti-trust action, is expected shortly in more of the Government's "field suits" against these five companies.

Thus, in the Government's suit against the Crescent Amusement Company circuit, in Nashville, preparations were being made this week to elide the names of the five film companies from the defendants' list. These preparations were expected to be completed in January. In the Federal suit, in Buffalo, against the far-flung Schine chain, dismissal of the five "big" majors was expected to follow the Nashville action.

In the latter city, and possibly in Buffalo, the Government is expected to continue suit against the "little" majors, United Artists, Universal, and Columbia, in amended complaints. These companies are not parties to the decree.

Wendell Berge, last week, in Washington, was appointed acting Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Department of Justice criminal division. Mr. Berge was special assistant to United States Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, and took part in the Department's New York anti-trust action against the majors.

He succeeds John O. Rogge, resigned. Hugh B. Cox, formerly chief of the appellate division of the Department, succeeds Mr. Berge.

James Hayes, special assistant to the Attorney General, last week was transferred from the motion picture division of the department, to the food investigation, now active. Special Assistant U. S. Attorney General Stephen Doyle replaces him, and will be in charge of preparation of the Federal action against Universal, United Artists, and Columbia.

O'Loghlin Heads Canadian MPDA

Appointment of James P. O'Loghlin, general manager of 20th Century-Fox, Ltd., of Canada, to the presidency of the Motion Picture Distributors of Canada and the promotion of Col. John A. Cooper, former president, to the newly-created post of chairman of the board was seen in Canadian film circles this week, as an effort to distribute the administrative work of the organization, which has increased to a considerable degree.

Col. Cooper will continue in charge of the association's office in the Film Exchange building, Toronto. E. H. Wells remains as national secretary of the Canadian Film Boards of Trade, which are affiliated with the distributors' association.

Ontario Trains Operators

Premier Mitchell Hepburn is expected to proceed with a plan to train and license prospective projectionists under auspices of the Ontario Government, in spite of objections from operators' and other trades' unions. The proposed course would be for 12 months and would cost each student $100 apiece.

The course is to start shortly under direction of O. J. Silverthorne, chairman of the Ontario motion picture bureau and censor board.

Premier Hepburn has ignored protests that many projectionists are unemployed and that, due to the war, the course is untimely. He declared, in support of the measure, that the Government was responsible for licensing theatres and inspecting them for fire hazards. Also that, in view of the fact the greatest fire danger is in the projection booth, it followed that the Government, which licensed the projectionists, should pass upon their qualifications. The premier denied, also, that it would add to unemployment.

Students who pass the course will receive certificates of qualification.

Clearance Board Meets

The Ontario Provincial Clearance Board met on December 17th in Toronto, for the second time since its organization, issuing no statement other than to say that deliberations of the group were harmonious and that the next meeting would be January 7th.

The normal pre-Christmas hiatus in the film business in the maritime provinces has been further complicated by the prevalence of influenza and grippe, it became known this week. Theatre operation has been affected through illness of staff members.

RADIO-ASCAP FIGHT DEADLOCKED AT DEADLINE FOR MUSIC BAN ON AIR

Little Hope Seen for Agreement Before January 1st; Claim ASCAP Consent Decree Would Not Affect Radio Issue

At midweek, on Christmas, there was little hope, if any, for a solution to or settlement of the contractual and royalty-payment controversy out of which the large radio broadcasters' Broadcast Music, Inc. music catalogue is to supplant the catalogue of the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, at midnight, January 1st, the hour of expiration of the broadcasters' five-year license with ASCAP for the use of music of ASCAP members.

In Tacoma, Washington, Tuesday ASCAP was called "an illegal monopoly in restraint of trade" by a three-judge Federal statutory court which upheld the constitutionality of the State's anti-ASCAP law passed in 1937. In denying the society's request for an injunction to restrain enforcement of the law the court decided "ASCAP has acquired power to fix prices, and we think that is sufficient" to make it a restraint of trade. Previously ASCAP had won similar cases in several other States. It was reported that the whole question might be settled in February when the U. S. Supreme Court is expected to consider the Nebraska and Florida ASCAP laws.

As the day set for the radio ban of ASCAP music approached, both ASCAP and the radio interests, represented by BMI and the National Association of Broadcasters, continued their fight even more bitterly.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer music publishing group—Robbins-Music Corporation, Leo Feist, Inc. and Miller Music—renewed their ASCAP contracts for another ten years, thus ending the last "holdout" against the society. Principal deflections from ASCAP to BMI were the Marks catalogue and a part of the Southern catalogue. After delay and negotiation the motion picture music interests decided to stay with ASCAP. It was reported that the society would have been broken up if one or more of the large catalogues, controlled by film companies, were withdrawn.

WHN, Loew radio station in New York, also decided to renew its ASCAP license.

ASCAP, according to reports, was preparing this week a complaint against the networks which might be filed after the first of the year. A boycott of the society's music would be alleged. Other reports from Washington said that the Government might file an anti-trust suit against BMI and the networks.

No Action on Mediation

There still was no definite action on the offer, made last week, by the American Arbitration Association, to arbitrate. But both sides definitely did not close the door to arbitration.

Neville Miller, president of BMI and the NAB, said Tuesday, "It is hoped that sometime after the turn of the year when the situation returns to emotional normality, we can consider again some arrangement, equitable to all parties, for the use of music by ASCAP composers. For broadcasting wants to use ASCAP music and to pay for it when it is used. Broadcasting also wants to pay others for music when their music is used." Representatives of the broadcasters and ASCAP had one meeting recently but no progress towards a settlement was made, it was reported.

In Washington it was reported that, while negotiations for the settlement of the Government's six-year-old suit against ASCAP continued there was little possibility that a decree would be signed by January 1st. Also the broacasters asserted that any consent decree in the music case would not have any affect on the dispute with ASCAP over a new contract. It was said that officials of ASCAP had formed no unanimous agreement on the advisability of accepting a consent decree.

The Supreme Court of the United States ruled Monday that it had probable jurisdiction and agreed to review appeals involving the constitutionality of Florida's anti-ASCAP law. Both the society and the State of Florida had appealed the case.

Cases Heard in February

Two weeks ago the Supreme Court agreed to review a case involving Nebraska's legislation directed against ASCAP. It was reported that both cases will probably be heard in February. Herman Finkelstein of Schwartz & Frohlich, counsel for ASCAP, said that the cases may also decide the constitutionality of laws in other States restricting or restraining the operations of the society.

The Florida anti-ASCAP law was declared unconstitutional by a three-man Federal statutory court last Summer. The State apealed and ASCAP argued that the law was in conflict with the copyright provisions of the Constitution and deprived the society of its property without due process of law.

In a brief filed for the State of Florida by Attorney General George C. Gibbs, it was declared the fundamental issue at stake is the right of the state to prohibit, or reasonably regulate, monopolistic price fixing practices of combinations of owners of copyrighted music in connection with the licensing of their music for public performance for profit. The State contended that it had this right.

Music War Still On

On Thursday of last week Gene Buck, head of ASCAP; and Neville Miller, president of BMI and the NAB, issued statements saying that the war was still on. Mr. Buck announced that a consent decree would be a settlement under the litigation between ASCAP and the U. S. Government and not a settlement of the controversy between the radio broadcasting networks and the society.

On the same point Mr. Miller remarked, "even the signing of a consent decree would not automatically make ASCAP music available to the industry. Such availability would depend upon the acceptance by ASCAP of an honest and reasonable contract and this would, of course, be a matter requiring extensive and perhaps prolonged negotiations."

Edwin Claude Mills, chairman of the ASCAP administrative committee, announced the same day, "There can't be any settlement of the differences between ASCAP and the networks until the parties confer or negotiate." Since last March when the new ASCAP contract was proposed the broadcasters have not gotten in touch with the society, he added.

Mr. Buck pointed out that any consent decree proposals acceptable to the lawyers would have to be submitted to the ASCAP board before action could be taken.

ASCAP To "Police" Radio

Meanwhile ASCAP formed plans to "police" the air after January 1st to obtain material to prosecute any violations of the copyright law, making an initial appropriation of $100,000 for the purpose. The regular quarterly dividend of about $900,000 has been voted to members. No action was taken however on the usual Christmas bonus to employees. Recording machines will be placed in ASCAP's 31 local offices at a reported cost of over $50,000.

Broadcast Music, Inc. announced Monday that 610 out of the 750 commercial radio stations in this country had signed or agreed to sign with the radio music company on January 1st. Sidney M. Kaye, vice-president and general counsel for BMI, said that the 68 percent of American commercial stations signed represented 95 percent of the dollar volume of radio. He also pointed out that the networks control less than 20 percent of BMI.

Gene Buck, president of ASCAP, issued a statement that ASCAP, in keeping with its policy, would give a free license on and after January 1st for religious, educational and Government broadcasts. He said, "any religious, educational or federal entity, broadcasting non-sponsored, non-commercial programs over stations which have contributed the free use of their time for that purpose will, upon application to our society, receive an absolutely free license granting the use of all of the music of all of our members on such programs."

The National Association of Broadcasters opened an office in 30 Rockefeller Plaza. Neville Miller, head of the association, said that for the present he planned to spend most of his time in New York and not in Washington.

Irving Berlin and others continued the cam-

N. Y. TIMES DEFENDS ASCAP

"No neutral bystander will wish to see the defeat of ASCAP, which may have made a number of human errors, but which has struggled for many years to establish the principle that performing rights, over the air or otherwise, belong to the composer or his assignees and must be paid for," the New York Times said on Thursday of last week in an editorial entitled "ASCAP and the Networks."

The networks were urged to take action toward an agreement so that no important standard contemporary music will be kept off the air.

It was also pointed out that radio has cut the life of popular music and it was asserted that the future of American composers and the immediate future of their art depends considerably on the security furnished by ASCAP.

paign to arouse public protest so that a settlement might be reached before January 1st. It was reported that 3,000 persons have indorsed a petition to have the Federal Communications Commission intervene.

Use of Music Cut by NBC

Music was used in 53.7 per cent of the total number of program hours over the two National Broadcasting Company networks in 1940. The figure was 57.2 percent in 1939. In 1934 music was used 67.7 percent of the time. On the other hand dramatic shows have gradually increased, now amounting to 21 percent of the total program hours.

Total programs hours for 1940 will amount to about 19,580, which compares with 18,285 last year. Of the total, the Red network will have 8,548 hours, 44 percent sponsored and 56 sustaining, while the Blue will have 11,032 hours, 25.3 percent sponsored and 74.7 sustaining.

Besides music and drama, which occupy three-quarters of the available time, talks used 8.7 percent of the total hours; news, 8.9; sports, .8; comedy, 2.7; women's, 1.2; children's, 2.8; religion, .8. Commercial announcements, which occupy a large portion of network time, were not classified separately but were included among the general groupings.

Of the musical shows, 1,450 hours were sponsored and 8,943 sustaining Twenty-five hours were devoted to opera; 702, classical; 1,662; semi-classical; 3,548, light music, and 4,456 dance music.

Of the dramatic shows, 3,292 were sponsored and 836 sustaining. General drama took 3,330 hours; comedy drama, 674 and prose and poetry, 124.

Court Rules Publisher Must Renew Copyright

The publisher and not the composer must renew the copyright when the composer or lyricist is employed by the publisher, according to a decision made by Federal Judge Grover Moscowitz in the U. S. District Court for the Southern District of New York in a case between Shapiro, Bernstein, publishers, and Alfred Bryan and Fred Fischer. The suit involved the renewal of the copyright on "Come, Josephine, in My Flying Machine".

All copyrights renewed since 1937, the first year the original 28 years term of the copyright act of 1909 had expired, may be affected by the decision it was said. The case will probably be appealed to the U. S. Supreme Court, it was reported.

The composers held they were not employees but the court, accepting the point of Leo J. Rosett of House, Grossman, Vorhaus and Hemley, counsel for the publishers, ruled that since the men accepted regular pay, worked exclusively for the publishers and on account of some other provisions in the contract they could be classed as employees.

Circuits See Aid to Theatres

Executives of theatre circuits in Chicago expressed this week the opinion that the controversy between the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and Broadcast Music, Inc. might result in an increase in business in motion picture theatres.

Radio shows now on the air which have as their principal attraction a "name" band playing popular music, will naturally be handicapped if they can play only BMI music, according to the theatre executives.

Therefore it was reasoned that the radio audience, which may be denied the opportunity of hearing the current song hits, will seek a source where they will be able to hear the popular songs.

With motion picture theatres advertising the fact that the customers will be able to hear the latest song hits at their houses, a substantial increase in business could be expected, it was said.

As the first step to develop the importance of music in theatres in anticipation of a ban of ASCAP music from the radio networks after January 1st community singing was revived at the Oriental and State-Lake theatres in Chicago on Friday of last week. The Oriental is operated by Jones, Linick & Schaeffer and the State-Lake is a Balaban and Katz house. Theatre orchestras and organs provided the accompaniment. It was reported that the community singing may lead to an increase in the sales of popular music.

Oriental theatre representatives have been conferring with a number of music publisher's representatives in an effort to provide a singer who will lead the audience in the community singing.

Under the proposed arrangement the music publishers will jointly pay the salary of the singer or singers. In addition to this arrangement, it is also expected that a display of the latest songs, both sheet music and records, will be installed in the lobby, to give the customers a chance to purchase the songs they heard in the auditorium.

Radio and Films In Charity Unit

The United Charities Committee consisting of representatives of the film and radio industries, has been formed in Hollywood to co-ordinate activities in the philanthropic field. Harry M. Witt, president of the Southern California Broadcasters' Association, adopting a suggestion made by Samuel Goldwyn, chairman of the permanent charity committee, agreed to appoint a radio charity committee to work in conjunction with the film unit.

Among the speakers at a luncheon in Hollywood, last Wednesday, December 18th, to formulate plans for the group were: Harry M. Warner, Walter Wanger, Harry Brand, Don Gilman, NBC; Donald Thornburgh, CBS; Harrison Holloway, National Association of Broadcasters; Kenneth Thomson, S.A.G.; I. B. There must be a leak, someplace, among Uncle Sam's custodians of gold. RKO added that Miss Francis recommends the gold dust treatment only for dark-haired women. Mostly women who can afford gold dust.

A refund of 35 cents was made on his 33-cent ticket. However, Motz wanted to see the picture rather than make the two cents profit, and approaching a patrolman with whom he was acquainted, convinced him that he was not a bomber, and together they obtained another seat for Motz.

Many theatre press agents and theatre managers lose fistfuls of hair trying to think up gags for free space to put across on naive newspaper editors. But when a ready-made, unsolicited piece of theatrical manna drops unexpectedly in the lap, as one did for R. E. Russell, in New Haven, the other afternoon—well, there IS a Santa Claus.

Mr. Russell, of Loew's Poli, in New Haven, and Nat Rubin, his press agent, pasted the town with word that their current attraction was the Marx Brothers' comedy, "Go West". On the second day of the run, they started to receive compliments from patrons and friends on the humor of the Marxian stunt on the city's central streets—where a young army of authentic looking Marxes rode about in old jalopies which broke down at the most congested intersections, much to the consternation of the police. But why, Russell was asked repeatedly, didn't he have signs on the cars announcing the Marx showing at Loew's?

It was all Greek to Russell—he hadn't arranged for any such publicity—until the Marxians rode up to his theatre door, paid their admissions and proceeded to the front lobby, where they went through all kinds of typically crazy Marx Brothers shenanigans.

Russell sought an explanation. There was none, just yet. His press agent rushed for news photographers and reporters, got them and got columns and columns of local and wire-service news pictures and stories. When the story broke in print, Russell learned that the Marxians were a bunch of undergraduates from nearby Yale, bent on a bit of burlesque just for the fun of it. Among them were such young notables as William Jackson, son of the Attorney General of the United States, and stars of football, heads of Phi Beta Kappa, Yale polo players, hockey giants and a large assortment of other Yalemen.

Cold weather, rain and fog were minor discomforts.

Before Shuttee cashed in his return ticket, he drove 22 miles over mountain roads through a downpour in an ancient truck, fixed two flat tires, walked four miles in the rain and made an emergency trip to Broken Bow, Oklahoma, to buy long underwear and a slicker. Coming home, the car in which he was riding was rammed from behind by a reckless driver and Shuttee had to repair the damage in a dense fog.

STUDIOS ACQUIRE 33 PROPERTIES FOR PRODUCTION THIS SEASON

Frank Lloyd Purchases Two for Universal; Kaufman and Hart Sell Second Broadway Stage Play to Warner Brothers

Hollywood producers acquired film rights during November to thirty-three more properties. Of these, 20 were original stories, eight were books and five were stage plays.

Highlight of the month's purchases was the acquisition of "George Washington Slept Here," second Kaufman-Hart current Broadway stage production to be sold to Warners in the past six months. The first of their plays to be sold to the company, "The Man Who Came to Dinner," will go before the cameras early this spring with Messrs. Kaufman and Hart in producing capacities for Warners. The company acquired the screen rights to "George Washington Slept Here" after out-bidding Paramount and Columbia with $85,000.

Also in November, Frank Lloyd, under the terms of his three-picture contract as producer-director for Universal, bought the film rights to "I, James Lewis" a novel by Gilbert Gabriel. The story, acquired from Paramount and on which Mr. Lloyd worked while with that company, deals with the voyage of the "Tonquin," which John Jacob Astor sent around Cape Horn in 1810 to trade for furs in the Canadian Northwest. A new title will be sought for the picture.

"The Lady from Cheyenne" was the second acquisition by Mr. Lloyd. This is an original story by Johnathan Finn and Theresa Oakes concerning women suffrage in Wyoming. Loretta Young is to star in this.

MGM Buys Stage Play

Following the trend toward bringing former Broadway musicals to the screen, MGM has acquired the screen rights to "Lady Be Good" the Broadway musical stage production of some few years ago. The play featured George Gershwin's music and starred Adele and Fred Astaire. The studio plans a lavish production schedule for the picture with a prominent cast. Among those selected are Eleanor Powell, Tony Martin and Ann Sothern. The picture will be produced by Arthur Freed and directed by Busby Berkeley, director of "Babes in Arms" and "Strike Up the Band."

Story purchases with all available credits, for the month of November, follow:

AMERICAN EMPIRE, an original story by J. Robert Bren and Gladys Atwater acquired by Harry Sherman for production at Paramount.

BLONDE BLITZKRIEG, an original story by Billy Wilder and Thomas Monroe concerning a college professor who falls in love with a burlesque queen. The story has been acquired by Samuel Goldwyn as a possible vehicle for Gary Cooper.

BROADWAY, LTD., an original story by Rian James and Robert Presnell acquired by Hal Roach. Victor McLaglen will star in the role of a locomotive engineer.

DEVIL AND DANIEL WEBSTER, THE, a Saturday Evening Post serial and novel by Vincent Benet purchased by William Dieterle for production at RKO.

ACTUAL RELEASE DATES PEGGED ON 46% OF 500 FEATURES PROMISED

160 Released to December 31st, 70 Other Dates Set for New Year; Sales Managers See No Shortage under Decree

With all of the cautiousness with which all three branches of production, distribution and exhibition approached filming, selling and buying commitments for 1940-41 bulk programs, the industry reaches the end of the first third of the season with release dates actually pegged for 46 per cent of the total pictures promised.

That the earlier cautious atmosphere had no basis in fact as an influence on a normal product supply is now attested by the 160 features, representing 32 per cent, which will have been delivered to exhibitor customers by December 31, Tuesday, and by an additional 70 release dates set beyond that date, adding another 14 per cent, of the total 500 features promised for 1940-41 by the ten large distributors.

Economic problems arising from World War II, the uncertainties due to the prolonged negotiations out of which came the consent decree, the potential effects of that decree on the industry and the comparatively new, and growing policy of prolonging exhibitions of "top" pictures, at advanced admissions, and other factors caused much speculation over a normal product supply. War or no war, consent decree or no decree, Hollywood product promised for this season, at least, is flowing from the cinematic faucets without any interferences.

Prepared for Changeover

The sales executives of the motion picture companies have assured exhibitors that there is no danger of a product shortage in any of the exchange districts either during or after the five film companies who have signed the decree put their new sales policies into effect beginning next season.

By delivering the minimum of the 1940-41 product sold on this season's contracts and by clearing their production schedules earlier than usual this Spring the five companies can have from ten to fifteen completed film each when the blocks-of-five selling system becomes effective.

For the current season Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sold a minimum of 44 pictures; Paramount, 44; Twentieth Century-Fox, 48; Warners, 48, and RKO, 39. All five studios are geared to make from fifty to sixty pictures a season. The difference therefore, between the minimum deliveries and the maximum that can be produced will supply each of the five companies with two to six completed pictures by September 1, 1941, when the new selling policy goes into effect. As usual each of the studios will have an additional four to ten pictures completed and awaiting delivery at the season's start, thus giving each company at least one, or more than likely two, groups-of-five to sell to exhibitors next season.

So far this season the ten major producing companies have released to date some 160 pictures of the promised 500 to 508 feature pictures for 1940-41. This figure in comparison to the 151 pictures released during the same 1938-39 peacetime period, and compared to the 162 features released during the comparable wartime 1939-40 season reveals no slackening of film productive pace on the part of the producers.

Prominent this year are the high-budgeted pictures that have been released and prereleased to receive the full benefits of the Christmas-New Year holiday season. Heretofore distributors decided against sending out big films during the holidays for fear they would suffer at the box office deserted by a public engaged in Christmas shopping and spending.

Chief among the current product released for the holiday season are Alexander Korda's "Thief of Bagdad," which opened at the Radio City Music Hall in New York on December 4th, in advance of its national release date set for Christmas Day; MGM's "Flight Command," starring Robert Taylor, Walter Pidgeon and Ruth Hussey, to be released nationally January 3rd, after playing pre-release engagements in key spots.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has also announced that "Philadelphia Story" will be pre-released to seven engagements throughout the county.

Other pictures that are playing or will shortly open for the holiday festivities are Columbia's "This Thing Called Love," with Rosalind Russell and Melvyn Douglas; the latest Marx Brothers comedy, "Go West"; and Paramount's new Jack Benny production with Fred Allen in a co-starring role, "Love Thy Neighbor," national released December 27th, and which had its world premiere at the New York Paramount on Tuesday, December 17. Cecil B. DeMille's latest lavish production "North West Mounted Police" has been playing pre-release engagements in key cities and was nationally released December 27th. RKO has two pictures, both high-budgeted productions, for the holiday season. "No, No Nanette," with Anna Neagle and Richard Carlson in the starring role, and "Kitty Foyle" with Ginger Rogers and Dennis Morgan. "Chad Hanna," a circus story which ran in serial form in the Saturday Evening Post under the title of "Red Wheels Rolling," will be released by Twentieth Century-Fox at the same time.

MPTOA Calls For Conciliation

Regional exhibitor units on Tuesday were advised to mediate local disputes before they needed arbitration, and to provide machinery for conciliation. The advice came from Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and was contained in an organization bulletin.

Mr. Kuykendall once more attacked the decree; and in, urging conciliation, urged it also as an avoidance of arbitration, which, as he sees it under the decree, is to be administered not by exhibitors, but "entirely by the American Arbitration Association."

Mr. Kukendall called "nonsense" talk of exhibitor cooperation for the decree and intent to "give it a fair trial." He noted that "new methods and restrictions on selling are to be undertaken entirely by distributors" and that nowhere in the decree is exhibitor participation in the decree's administration asked. The omission by the decree of provisions for conciliation before arbitration was a grave mistake according to the MPTOA president.

Exhibitors, Mr. Kukendall cautioned, must realize that further protests against the decree are useless, because it will not be modified by court or other action, without being tried first.

Sees Benefit in Music War

The fight between the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers was adverted to, briefly, in the bulletin, which pointed out that one result beneficial to the film industry might be the obtainance by producers of performing rights to music; an obtainance which might eliminate the music seat tax which theatres now pay to ASCAP.

With state legislatures scheduled to receive a flood of new restrictive measures against the film industry, theatre men should watch their legislatures carefully, making defenses sure and united, Mr. Kukendall warned.

Anent Federal taxes on admissions, the MPTOA bulletin disclosed the organization would try to secure amendment of the Federal revenue act, lowering the tax on student tickets. This would affect an estimated 12,000,000 payers, it is thought. They now pay the adult tax.

Law Quits Federal Post; Becomes PCCITO Counsel

The Pacific Coast Independent Theatre Owners group has retained, as counsel, Albert J. Law, who is scheduled to resign as special assistant United States Attorney General in the Los Angeles area, on January 1st.

Mr. Law's resignation, and entry into private practice, mark the end of 11 years in the Federal post, during which, with Harold J. Collins, who occupied a similar position, he had charge of the investigations which resulted in the filing of contempt charges in the Fox West Coast consent decree case.

On Tuesday, Mr. Law said that the PCCITO had not formulated any program yet, on the consent decree in the Government's New York anti-trust action, or on other matters.

Agnes Ayres, of Silent Films, Dies

Agnes Ayres, one of the most glamourous film stars of the silent era, who appeared opposite Rudolph Valentino in "The Sheik", his most famous role, died in Hollywood on Wednesday, December 25th, after an illness of several weeks. She was 42 years old.

Development of talking pictures marked her decline in motion pictures. In attempting a comeback, recently, she said: "It cost me a half million dollars to learn the value of a nickel, but I wouldn't trade the experience for all that money back again." After a layoff of many years, Miss Ayres had a small part in 1937, playing opposite Gary Cooper and George Raft in "Souls at Sea". Ten years previously, she retired a wealthy woman, but in the 1929 stock market crash she lost all her earnings.

Miss Ayres tried the talkies and failed, then attempted to obtain stage experience by joining a stock company. Then she took a show on the road on one-night stands, later returning to Hollywood to enter the real estate business.

Speaking bitterly, in September, 1934, after having failed to persuade producers to give her a part, she said: "When they'll take an untrained peasant girl, spend $2,000,000 on her, and won't dream of signing some one who once had a name and public, you can't help but ask: Why?"

Among the pictures in which she appeared were: "Forbidden Fruit", "The Ten Commandments", "The Son of the Sheik", "The Lady of Victory", "The Donovan Affair", "Broken Hearted", "Bye, Bye, Buddy", "Tomorrow's Love", "The Story Without a Name", "Worldly Goods", and "The Awful Truth".

A daughter, Maria, 15 years old, survives. She lives with her father, S. Manuel Reachi, Mexico City film producer, whose marriage to the actress ended in divorce in 1927.

The initial production will be the "Cavalcade of Faith", which is now available for release and has been produced in four languages — Spanish, Polish, Italian and English. "The subject has to do with the evolution of Christianity dating from the Third Century and follows on through the succeeding ages to the present," it was said.

The personnel of Jeffrey Pictures includes Mr. Jeffrey, as president and general manager; Robert E. McIntyre, vice president and sales manager; Allyn Butterfield, vice president and production manager; M. E. Jeffrey, treasurer, and Lee Kugel, advertising and publicity director.

Denies Expansion Plans

O.H.Briggs Named President of PRC

Directors of the Producers Releasing Corporation, meeting in New York on Monday elected O. Henry Briggs, recently resigned president of Pathe Laboratories to the presidency of the company.

Mr. Briggs' designation follows a refinancing program for PRC. Details were not forthcoming, although it was reported that sufficient capital had been obtained to complete 21 pictures yet to be made on the company's schedule of 38 features. The company's present producing roster including Sigmund Neufeld, Jed Buell, Ted Richman and E. B. Derr are expected to be augmented with additional producing units.

Franchise holders and stockholders of the company who attended the board meeting included: Harry Asher, Boston; Lee Goldberg, Cleveland; Louis Ruttstein, Los Angeles; George Gill, Washington; Bert Kulick, New York and Jack Adams, Denver.

Mr. Briggs has had wide technical and sales promotion experience in the industry, having received his training with the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Company following his graduation from college. He had been in charge of the department merchandising Duco, the then new automobile finish when du Pont completed its $4,000,000 motion picture film plant at Parlin, N. J.

The du Pont company, in 1924, incorporated its film business as a subsidiary company, with Pathe Freres of Paris and Pathe Exchange, Inc., of New York, as partners. Mr. Briggs became sales manager of the newly-formed company. In July, 1936, he was named president of the Pathe Film Corp. and has served with the Pathe organization ever since.

Harry Rathner, former president of PRC resigned several weeks ago. His future plans have not been announced.

Hudson's Bay

(20th Century-Fox)

Historical Melodrama

Paul Muni's return to the screen after an absence of many months is, by all the standards showmen adhere to, news for marquee and billboard. To it showmen may add that his casting in this story of the beginnings of the Hudson's Bay company is a departure from precedent for the star, the part calling for fisticuffs and brawling as well as dialogue in dialect and a measure of chicanery blended into the heroics.

The period is the seventeenth century, the story, by Lamar Trotti, opening with "Pierre Esprit Radisson," played by Muni, and his fellow-trapper, "Gooseberry," petitioning the British Governor in Albany for funds to fit out an expedition into the Hudson Bay country. Thrown into prison, they meet an exiled British nobleman, aid him in escaping and enlist his support. The three return with 300,000 pelts, which are seized by the French Governor of Quebec, who imprisons them again, but they escape, recover some of the pelts and take them to England. Here they obtain unofficial backing for another expedition to the Bay country, to which they again travel, returning ultimately with 400,000 pelts but without one of their members, a friend of the King, who has been executed, after giving brandy to the Indians, to prevent an Indian war. The King imprisons them and orders their execution, but they are freed when "Radisson" reveals that he has instructed his Indian friends to trade only with the French if he does not return.

Kenneth Macgowan produced the picture and Irving Pichel directed. The Muni performance is made the keystone of interest throughout, Laird Cregar's role giving him position of next prominence. Gene Tierney and John Sutton carry the romantic interest.

This Thing Called Love

(Columbia)

"Marital Highjinks"

Described in Columbia literature as "a miracle of marital highjinks", this comedy of frustration sustains the company's reputation for expertness in the field of entertainment pioneered with its "It Happened One Night" and cultivated at intervals down to and including "He Stayed for Breakfast". Presenting Melvin Douglas, of the last-named picture, and Rosalind Russell, of "Hired Wife," "The Women" and other light-comedies, as newlyweds restrained first by plan and later by circumstance from consummating their marriage, the picture was acclaimed and applauded to the echo by an adult Hollywood preview audience.

The story opens with the girl in the case, statistician for an insurance company, explaining to a board of directors that there would be fewer divorces if people who marry postponed consummation for a period of three months pending adjustment of personalities. She tells her fiance of five days' acquaintance, arriving from South America intent upon marrying at once, of her plan and her decision to try it out in their case. He remonstrates, but his lawyer advises him to proceed with the marriage, arguing that he can overcome his bride's stipulation by exercise of charm, magnetism and suggestion, once they are wed.

On the night of their marriage the bridegroom employs all the wiles at his command to effectuate his lawyer's advice but is unsuccessful. Other couples and families enter the story, the problems interlocking with those of the newlyweds in a fashion to prolong the frustration despite the groom's persistent efforts to end it, circumstances finally persuading the bride to abandon her stipulation. Her attempt to convey her change of mind to her husband by exercise of wiles paralleling those he tried on their first night fails through no unwillingness on his part but because he has acquired a poison-oak infection in company with another woman under circumstances he cannot explain to his wife. He flees her blandishments in confusion and stays away until cured, returns to find another man in his bedroom and pajamas, declines to listen to an explanation and goes away to sell his business. Friends prevent this by having him charged with insanity and abducted in a strait-jacket. His wife, unknowing, starts for Reno. Both return to their home, disconsolate, and discover each other, whereupon the picture closes with him joining her in her boudoir, their minds and hearts attuned.

Production by William Perlberg and direction by Alexander Hall are of a quality to have commanded praise both in terms of applause and audible comment by the preview audience. George Seaton, Ken Englund and P. J. Wolfson collaborated on the screen play, based on a play by Edwin Burke, the script abounding in situations and dialogue of the sort playgoers used to describe as "smart," "sophisticated" or "risque," according to their viewpoints.

Dwelling throughout on the delay in consummation of the marriage of the principals, and deriving its humor and business therefrom, the production makes its appeal to the mature.

Flight from Destiny

(Warner Brothers)

Study in Psychology

Warners "Flight From Destiny" is the story of a college philosopher who finding out that he has only six months to live, decides to do one last benefit for humanity by murdering a woman hated by all who know her and who is attempting to wreck the life of a young painter. Moving slowly the story takes the professor through his decision which he arrives at with all the aplomb of a classroom discussion, his ferreting out the background of his victim to make sure that no one will miss her, his confession of guilt when his young friend is accused of the crime and his payment on the electric chair for the murder. The tale ends with his realization that his theory of committing murder for social justice is false. Most of the film however deals with the professor's mental justification for the murder, his belief that he is "immortal" because he does not fear death, and his desire to judge whether a fellow human being should live.

Thomas Mitchell as the professor gives an impressive performance, and adds another excellent characterization to the long list of his performances, Geraldine Fitzgerald as the young wife of his friend, played by Jeffrey Lynn,

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS OF PRODUCT

James Stephenson, Mona Maris, Jonathan Hale, David Bruce, Thurston Hall, Willie Best and Libby Taylor head the supporting cast.

Barry Trivers in adapting the story by Anthony Berkeley performed a screenplay achievement marked by smoothness.

Although the picture has not been released generally, Warners, because of the work of director Vincent Sherman, has given him a new contract and more important assignments. Edmund Grainger was the associate producer.

Warners expects much from the picture, having booked it into the Four Star Theatre, Los Angeles, Christmas Day and into Radio City Music Hall in mid-January.

Its theme and subject matter make it adult fare.

No, No, Nanette

(RKO Radio)

Extra-Marital Comedy

Herein is presented the Broadway musical comedy stage success of fifteen years ago, this time starring Anna Neagle in the title role. The cinematic version of the stage production has lost some of its lustre and hilarity in its transposition to the screen but, neverthless, remains chucklesome throughout.

Producer-director Herbert Wilcox, who has guided Miss Neagle in her motion picture career dating back to "Nell Gwynn" down through a couple of "Queen Victoria's," and her last American made film "Irene" also adapted from a Broadway musical comedy, in this endeavor has utilized shrewdly his shownmanship experience. Marquee names that will attract the attention of the audience, including Richard Carlson, Victor Mature, Roland Young, Helen Broderick and Zazu Pitts, do much to abet the picture.

The dance sequences executed by Miss Neagle and chorines photographed in montage, plus the music of Vincent Youmans—"Tea for Two" and "I Want to be Happy," both hit tunes of the 1925 era and familiar to all audiences of this day—and the portraits of Miss Neagle originally painted by McClelland Barcley, are highlights.

A dual theme of romance and the attempted rescue of a happiness-spreading uncle from the clutches of a trio of mercenary women by his niece, involving the niece in a double romance, have been worked into the picture. Complications and more complications ensue for all concerned including the uncle's wife, the two suitors, the three golddiggers and the maid, but the various troubles are ironed out by the ingenious niece.

Miss Pitts reverts temporarily from her accustomed role of the slow-witted and hand-fluttering maiden to that of the dry-humored, sarcastic housemaid, a move that lends additional comedy to the picture. Ken Englund wrote the screen play from the musical comedy by Frank Mandel, Otto Harbach, Vincent Youmans and Emil Nyitray. The lyrics for the three songs of the picture, "Tea for Two," "I Want to be Happy" and the title number, "No, No, Nanette," were written by Irving Caesar and Otto Harbach.

Michael Shayne, Private Detective

(20th Century-Fox)

Introducing Another Screen Sleuth

The latest addition to the cinematic clique of oriental and occidental screen sleuths is introduced in this mirth and melodrama mystery. He is a glib and nimble Celtic played by Lloyd Nolan. Subsequent visits of this detective personality should be an entertaining experience if Mr. Nolan's introductory remarks are any guarantee. Marjorie Weaver supplies the girl angle, what little there is to it, competently and prettily. Donald MacBride, as an exasperated and frustrated civic police chief, contributes considerably to the humorous motif of the production. Importantly concerned either as suspects or assistants in the search of the murderer are Elizabeth Patterson, Walter Abel, Joan Valerie, and Douglas Dumbrille. Under the executive producership of Sol M. Wurtzel, Eugene Forde gave the gag-seasoned script of Stanley Rauh and Manning O'Connor a steady pace.

The plot is more notable for comedy than bafflement, for the sole murderer in the scenario is easy to detect, even if his motives are reported a bit cloudily. As a private detective, "Shayne" is engaged to chaperon a spoiled daughter of a racing commissioner and with such an assignment, he becomes involved in track matters, doped horses, gambling joints and the task of clearing his name of a murder charge.

Seen at an afternoon performance at the Palace Theatre in New York, where the picture, sharing billing with "South of Suez," seemed to have an entertainment effect, at least along comedy lines, upon the audience.—JOSEPH F. COUGHLIN.

Her First Romance

(Monogram)

Cinderella, with Music

Monogram's "Her First Romance" is a story of adolescent love treated in a Cinderella manner, modernized and furbished with music. It presents Edith Fellows, now grown into young womanhood, in her first "grownup" role, and also as a singer. It marks also the film debut of Wilbur Evans, concert baritone.

Told with feeling, the picture, taken from Gene Stratton Porter's "Her Father's Daughter," has charm, freshness and poignancy, Adele Comandini having written an entirely new story for the characters.

Supporting Miss Fellows and Evans are Jacqueline Wells, as her conceited, selfish sister; Alan Ladd, Judith Linden, Roger Daniel, Marion Kerby, Marlo Dwyer, Ottila Nesmith, Ray Hirsch, Alexandria Moreland, Julie Sheldon and John Adamson.

Edward Dmytryk directed, spacing music, pathos and comedy with effectiveness. I. E. Chadwick produced, with Herman Wohl as his associate.

"Linda," jibed at as the college "frump," is invited to a campus prom by a fraternity brother, as an initiation prank. Informed of the joke "Linda" is broken hearted, but a visiting singer, "Philip," considered the "catch" of the season, takes her. Then follows a succession of incidents in which her conceited sister attempts to win the singer, a shattered romance is patched up, and the singer extricates himself from an embarrassing position.

$1,259,798 Loss For Walt Disney

Walt Disney's enterprises lost $1,259,798 during the year past, stockholders were informed on Monday, from Hollywood, in Walt Disney Productions' first annual report to the public. Stock in the company was first offered the public in April.

The loss is attributed both to the company's inability thus far to realize production costs on its feature, "Pinocchio" and to the war situations abroad.

The total production cost on that film was $2,595,379, Mr. Disney told stockholders, in a letter complementing the report. Up to September 28th, the film had grossed $1,673,956, of which the company's share was $976,211. It will probably gross $619,-167 more for the company, Mr. Disney anticipates.

Deficit Charged

In the report, he explained, "A charge of $1,000,000 has been made to provide for the excess of cost of this picture, over the estimated total revenues."

The company believes it has adjusted its operations, so that it is independent of foreign markets, Mr. Disney adds, noting that production has increased 100 per cent and production costs have declined since the opening in the Spring, of the new studio.

The company delivered one feature and ten short subjects to RKO during the year, according to the report. It may deliver two features and 20 short subjects to RKO during the year ending next September 28th. The two features, adds the report, are "The Reluctant Dragon" and "Bambi".

One other feature is in work, "Dumbo, the Flying Elephant", release of which has not been established; and two features scheduled for 1942 release are "Peter Pan" and "Wind in the Willows", the report said.

The policy of two or more features per year in addition to short subjects will be followed hereafter by the company, it adds, noting also that at present 28 short subjects are in work.

The current production inventory totals $3,650,256. This is the highest in the company's history. The 149 stories the company owns, have a value of $367,275.

The total income for the year was $2,525,723. Of this, $1,954,335 was Disney Productions' share, from film rentals, and from the licensing of Disney characters and from music royalties.

Selling, administrative, and general expenses were put at $649,354. The amortization of picture costs amounted to $1,719,140.

Total assets of the company are $8,562,137. Of this, current and working assets total $5,058,966. Cash on hand, included in this latter sum, amounts to $116,218.

Current liabilities are $2,606,315. This includes $1,932,992 in five per cent demand bank notes, which are secured by negatives.

Show Smuggled Film

The Bryant Theatre, New York City, this week began showing Gabriel Pascal's film, "The Living Dead," banned by the Nazis, smuggled from Germany, and in receipt of endorsement by the Joint Boycott Council and Non-Secretarian Anti-Nazi League. It was made in 1932.

Stories

Hollywood, this week, bought eight story properties, more than during any one week within recent memory.

Twentieth Century-Fox accounted for half the total, with three of its four acquisitions earmarked for associate producer Lou Ostrow. The three are "I Won't Dance," an original by Harry Sauber, dealing with a film star who wants to do dramatic roles instead of dancing; "We Go Fast," Douglas Welch Saturday Evening Post story of motorcycle officers, and "Green Entry," novel by S. Ruth Howard, which has a horse show background. The fourth is "Miami," Stephen Powys story which will become a musical.

Columbia purchased three stories: "Heaven Can Wait," stage play by Harry Segal, bought from Jed Harris; "Trinidad," Cy Bartlett original set for development by producer Sam Bischoff, and "Obituary," a contemporary newspaper story by Jerry Sackheim, which has been assigned to producer Jack Fier.

As a vehicle for Stirling Hayden and Virginia Dale, Paramount bought "The Baby Had a Hard Day," Liberty magazine story, written by Anne Wormser. F. Hugh Herbert and Hans Kraly will write the screen play for producer Sol Siegel. The story is a comedy arising from the marriage of a West Point cadet and a nurse.

After what was described as "an amicable disagreement" over matters budgetary, the Howard Hughes production of "The Outlaw" is again in production, with Mr. Hughes directing, having taken over the assignment from Howard Hawks, who agreed to step out. "The Outlaw" deals with Billy the Kid.

Howard (Hughes) believed in giving the film a large budget; Howard (Hawks) held out for making an economical celluloid preentation. Their publicized split succeeded in conveying the message that "The Outlaw" was to be an "all-out" picture so far as expense was concerned. Another change saw Gregg Toland take over the photographic post, Mr. Toland last year having been winner of the Academy Award in his field for work on "Wuthering Heights."

The picture is the first of two Hughes productions set for Twentieth Century-Fox release. Also being made at the moment is a Metro-Goldwyn-Meyer version of the story, title simply "Billy the Kid," and starring Robert Taylor.

After 11 years, writer Earl Baldwin has asked for and obtained release from his Warner Brothers contract, and is currently at Columbia, working on "He's My Uncle," conscription story. From the Gower Street plant Mr. Baldwin reports to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for assignment on a musical.

JAMES HILTON will do the screen play of "Water Gypsies," A. P. Herbert story, for RKO.

BUSBY BERKELEY has been given a new directorial contract by MGM.

ALEXANDER HALL is to direct "Bedtime Story" for Columbia.

KETTI FRINGS, author of "Hold Back the Dawn," which Paramount is filming, is doing the screen play of "Manon Lescaut" for Alexander Korda.

JAMES WHALE will direct Columbia's "They Dare Not Love."

GEORGE BECK has been signed to develop the original story of "Paramount Parade," Paramount musical.

NORTON PARKER is writing the screen adaptation of "Horseback Hurricane" for RKO.

FRED NIBLO, JR., is to develop the screen play of Warners' "Strange Alibi."

JOAN DAVIS has had her Twentieth-Fox contract renewed.

SUSAN HAYWARD received an extended Paramount contract.

JOAN PERRY has been given a Warner term contract.

MILTON BERLE received a Twentieth-Fox contract.

AGNES CHRISTINE JOHNSON will work on the script of the next "Henry Aldrich" picture for Paramount.

WALLY KLEIN and AENEAS MACKENZIE are developing the screen play of Warners' "They Died with Their Boots On."

MARY MCCARTHY and BETTY REINHARDT are working on the story of a new "Maisie" film for MGM.

VILLAINS REFORM

Reversal of the trend which for many years had heroes and villains of screen sagas alike typed permanently to the role in which they were most familiar to the public has been noticeable of late, with special emphasis by Paramount on the transformation process.

For example, Albert Dekker, the brutal mutineer in "Beau Geste," and again the villainous "Dr. Cyclops," now appears as a comic cutup in "You're the One." Then, too, Brian Donlevy, easy victor of the "most hated man" title in "Jesse James" and "In Old Chicago," was made a sympathetic character in "The Great McGinty," and appears as another in the forthcoming "I Wanted Wings."

Basil Rathbone and Akim Tamiroff are another pair of screen huskies who have recently turned to the sweet and light in their characterizations.

And just to confuse the issue, becloud the trend, comes reversal of the above process, with the usually sympathetic and heroic Herbert Marshall appearing as the villain of the piece in "Foreign Correspondent."

Testimonials for Roy and Gilliam

Every branch of the industry in the Albany district was represented at the luncheon to Andrew Roy Wednesday, December 18th, in Jack's Restaurant, that city. The occasion was his transference from managership of the Strand, Albany, to the Stanley, Utica. Tribute was paid to Mr. Roy's showmanship. The Stanley, it was noted, is one of the biggest Warner houses in the territory.

Principal speakers were M. A. Silver, Warner circuit zone manager; Lou Golding, Fabian circuit district manager; Charles Smakwitz, Warner circuit district manager; Jules Curley, Mr. Roy's successor at the Strand; and Max Friedman, zone booker.

The banquet Friday night, December 20th in Chicago, to Tom Gilliam, of Warner Brothers, marked his transference from managership of the Chicago exchange, to the same post in Atlanta. Jack Osserman, RKO branch manager, acted as toastmaster, also praising Mr. Gilliam in a speech. Other speakers were John Balaban, Claude Eckhardt, Twentieth Century Fox branch manager; J. E. Flynn, MGM district manager; Jack Kirsch, president of Illinois Allied; James Donahue, Paramount branch manager; and Charles Ryan, Warner Circuit district manager.

Mr. Gilliam was presented with a combination radio-phonograph-recording machine.

Bishop Dinner Scheduled

Scheduled for January 6th in the Urban Room at the Hotel William Penn, Pittsburgh, is a testimonial dinner for Burtus Bishop, Jr., MGM branch manager there, who has been promoted to a district managership for that company in Kansas City. Also to be honored at the dinner is Byron Stoner, Cleveland exchange salesman for MGM, who will succeed Mr. Bishop in Pittsburgh.

General chairman of the dinner committee is M. N. Shapiro; toastmaster will be C. J. Latta, retiring chief barker of the local Variety Club.

Mr. Bishop was recently elected first assistant chief barker for the club; but his promotion makes the appointment of a substitute necessary, at the next Variety Club board meeting.

Virtually the entire local film industry is expected at the dinner, and it is hoped several home office officials will attend.

In Philadelphia, a testimonial dinner is aborning for Mike Lessy, independent exhibitor, who has signalled his intention to retire, after 35 years of business.

More "Bargain" Matinees

John Danz has reestablished the "bargain matinee" policy in his first-run Palomar Theatre, Seattle, and at the Roosevelt.

Douglas Yates Promoted

Douglas Yates, film editor at Republic, was appointed assistant to Albert J. Cohen, Republic producer, on Monday.

Junior Quiz Shorts

Columbia has just completed plans for production of "Junior Quiz Parade," a series of short subjects featuring juvenile experts.

CANADIAN IMPORT BAN EXPLAINED

To The Editor of The Herald:

I have just received a copy of the Motion Picture Herald dated December 7, 1940, Vol. 141, No. 10.

On page 33 of this particular issue of the magazine, you have a article with a headline reading as follows:

"Canada Bans Reproducer Imports, Cameras, Premiums for Duration."

In this article you have stated that the Government has stopped imports of nearly a thousand items, among them sound reproducers for theatres.

I am writing you in connection with this article as I am very much afraid that it is liable to be misinterpreted by the theatre exhibitors and other readers to mean 35 mm sound reproducing equipment. The ban actually covers phonograph turntables, and non-synchronous reproducer sets used in theatres will come under this ban. Actually, as far as the theatre supply business is concerned in Canada, the ban only covers turntables and metal booth furniture. This equipment, is, of course, manufactured in Canada and is, therefore, still available to Canadian theatres.

In the interest of accuracy, I think it might be advisable for you to correct the impression given by the article in question. L. C. Pearson, General Sales Manager, Dominion Sound Equipments, Ltd., Montreal, Quebec.

CORRECTS "MISTAKE" ON CUBAN BILL

To The Editor of The Herald:

I just read in the November 23rd issue of the Motion Picture Herald (I have been a subscriber to it since I entered in the motion picture business) that the Cuban Government's ban on block booking and blind selling favored by independent distributors as well as by this Exhibitor's Association, was all a mistake orignated on the assumption that the Neely Bill was in force in the United States.

I beg to call your attention to the fact that there was no such mistake on our part. We knew all the time that the Neely Bill was pending at the Chamber of Representatives of the United States; and through the pages of the Motion Picture Herald we were timely informed of the consent decree negotiations and its final signature by Judge Goddard on the 20th of November last.

The Cuban Government's Decree No. 1396, dated May 27th last is based on the assumption that block booking and blind selling practices are "contrary to the good faith and to the normal and honest development of trade." The "Big 8" made strong protests against this Cuban measure. In fact, they have declared a kind of "lock-out": they are servicing all contracts, but refuse to license even old pictures on additional or new contracts.

And we Cuban exhibitors ask why those companies that in the democratic United States agreed before Judge Goddard to eliminate blind selling and to restrict drastically block booking, limiting it to five pictures in a single group, why—we shall repeat—are they so strongly opposed to measures of such an evident honesty.

Or is it that we need an Assistant Attorney-General Arnold to convince them? We hope we got him in Dr. Oñate, Minister of Commerce.—Orlando López—Hidalgo, President, Asociatión de Empresarios de la República de Cuba, Havana, Cuba.

P. S. Decree No. 1396 is still in force. Maybe it is amended to allow for blocks of ten pictures.

Bette Davis, 1939 winner will present the award on behalf of Douglas Churchill, who will be host to the press and leaders of the industry, at a cocktail party, following the broadcast, at Ciro's.

The New York Film Critics were to meet, on Friday, at the New York Times to vote on their annual awards for the best film, best acting and directing and others. Winners are to be announced next Monday, December 30.

COMMERCIAL 'FM' STARTS; FCC ESTIMATES AUDIENCE AT 38,000,000

Stations Under Construction and Applied For to Reach Market in 18 Key Cities; 48 Licenses Pending Before FCC

FM (frequency modulation) broadcasting will have its official birthday on January 1st, next Wednesday, when it reaches full commercial standing as a result of the order of the Federal Communications Commission. But few of the 25 companies in 13 states which have receive dconstruction permits will be ready to accept sponsored programs at that date, for many stations are still in the blue-print stage.

The potential FM radio audience, according to the FCC, will number 38,316,051, over one quarter of the population of the country. The large possible FM audience is grouped around 18 key cities. When the 48 applications pending before the FCC are acted upon FM radio will become available to a number of other key cities and another ten or 20 million people.

Few Receivers Sold

At the present time the competition from FM radio is quite slight for relatively few receivers have been sold. But the number of stations under construction and applied for and the size of the potential audience gives an indication of its possible future effects. Over a dozen manufacturing companies are making FM radio rereceivers and several of the large firms are building FM transmitters. FM is said to provide "staticless reception" and give radio service to regions where at present it is unsatisfactory.

One of the reasons why only a few stations are ready for the official birthday of FM is that the FCC delayed so long in acting on the applications, it was said. However the Commission has given permission to the present FM experimental stations to continue in operation after January 1st until their commercial applications are acted upon. FM commercialization was approved October 31st.

So far the official FM call letters have not been announced but the FCC has explained the system which will be used. The United States has been assigned the use of three initial call letters, N, K and W. "N" is restricted to the Navy and Coast Guard. For FM stations West of the Mississippi the initial call letter K will be assigned and W to those East of that river. The second letter for a FM station will be in alphabetical order with E reserved for educational stations. Between the two letters will be two numbers indicating the frequency on which the station operates.

Sponsor for W2XOR

Eugene S. Thomas, sales manager for WOR, has announced that the first commercial order for FM was received by W2XOR, affiliate FM station, from the Longine-Wittenauer Company for sponsorship of night time signals for one year beginning January 1st when FM commercials are permitted. The FM station will continue to operate from 9 AM to midnight, according to J. R. Poppele, chief engineer for WOR and W2XOR.

After conferring with representatives of FM Broadcasters, Inc., and other interested groups the FCC revised the FM application form to simplify the procedure. This action would result in more applications being filed, it was reported.

General Electric's FM station in Schenectady, W2XOY, is rebroadcasting the programs of the Metropolitan Opera in New York each Saturday afternoon.

Carl J. Meyers, chief engineer for WGN in Chicago, announced immediately after the FM permit was published that the company would begin work on the transmitter and antenna at once. The WGN FM stations will bring programs to listeners within about 70 miles of the transmitter or over 10,000 square miles.

WGN has appropriated $85,000 for preliminary work on the new station. The transmitter will be housed in the 29th floor of the Tribune Tower and the antenna will run up a special flag pole atop the Tower. The FM station probably will not begin commercial operation until April, it was said.

Television and FM work will be carried on together by Metropolitan Television, Inc., a subsidiary of Bloomingdale Bros. and Abraham and Straus department stores. I. A. Hirschmann, a vice-president of Bloomingdale Bros., said "our plan is to synchronize the activities of our FM and television stations, both of which will transmit programs from the roof of the Hotel Pierre. Department stores seem the logical source for further expansion of broadcasting."

The following is a list of FM stations which will have construction permits or whose application is still pending before the FCC. The list, arranged by States, gives the frequency, the area to be covered by the stations and the potential audience. FILM ADS ON TRUCK BRING COURT ACTION

A driver of a truck in Milwaukee, James Koutroules, received a suspended sentence by Judge Harvey L. Neelen of the district court, for displaying two signs advertising a film on the side of his vehicle. The judge suggested that anyone contemplating this form of advertising must first get an opinion from the city attorney's office.

Meanwhile, in Pittsburgh legislation will be introduced into the City Council to eliminate posters and billboards along the city's boulevards.

Radio News Service Centralized in Canada

Gladstone Murray, general manager of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, has announced that the CBC Board of Governors has approved a contract with the Canadian Press whereby effective January 1st, the news gathering organization turns over its entire news service to the CBC free of charge. A similar agreement has been arrived at between the Corporation and British United Press.

The CBC is setting up a radio news compilation staff with Dan MacArthur of Toronto as chief editor. The staff will prepare news bulletins at Vancouver, Winnipeg, Toronto, Montreal and Halifax for use without advertising sponsorship over CBC stations and such other stations as request them.

The provision of its news service without charge is a continuation of the public service adopted by the Canadian Press toward radio in 1933. Until 1939 the CP prepared a bulletin service at its own expense. From July 1, 1939, until the present, the CBC has paid the cost of compilation of news bulletins by Canadian Press staff men.

This new radio set-up will mark the disappearance from the air of "The Canadian Press News" which has been carried in four 15-minute bulletins daily over the CBC network.

The FCC has approved the sale of WMCA, operated by the Knickerbocker Broadcasting Company, to Edward J. Noble for $850,000. Mr. Noble was formerly U. S. under-secretary of Commerce and is head of Lifesavers, Inc., candy company. The station was sold by Donald Flamm.

The following new stations have been approved by the FCC: Albert Joseph Meyer, Powell, Wyo.; C. T. Sherer Company, Inc., Worcester, Mass.; R. G. Le Tourneau, Toccoa, Ga.; Oscar G. Hirsch, Cairo, Ill.; Willard Carver & Byrne Ross, Lawton, Okla.; Blanfox Radio Company, Harlan, Ky.

Variety Clubs Install New Officers

Highlight of this week's Variety club activities was the bowling tournament held in Kansas City under the joint sponsorship of the local Variety club and the Kansas City Star in which 4,000 to 5,000 persons participated. The funds from this annual tournament went to the Junior Red Cross for purchasing milk the year-round for under-nourished children in Greater Kansas City. The affair was held in a dozen different bowling alleys throughout the city.

The Pittsburgh Variety Club held two Christmas parties. The first was held for the membership only on December 23rd, with retiring president C. J. Latta honored. On December 24th, with the Ladies Theatrical club in charge, Tent No. 1 staged its annual party with its newest guest Joe E. Brown, Jr., attending. Incoming officers of the club were installed December 14th.

In Indianapolis, Kenneth Collins, manager of the Indiana theatre, was installed as chief barker of Tent No. 10 to succeed Marc Wolf. The local barkers held a dinner at the Claypool Hotel with Johnny Harris of Pittsburgh, national chief barker, and Bob O'Donnell of Dallas, Texas, national assistant chief barker of the Variety Clubs of America, as guests of honor at the affair.

The Reel Fellows Club has been organized by salesmen of the various Chicago film exchanges with W. E. Weinshenker of the Universal exchange elected president of the group. Other officers elected were: Lou Goldberg of Paramount, vice-president in charge of public relations; A. M. Van Dyke of Fox, secretary and Robert Funk of Universal, treasurer. Perry Barr of the National Screen Service is sergeant-at-arms.

Schenck Charity Lunch

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, will give a luncheon next Friday, January 3rd, at the Hotel Biltmore, Los Angeles, in connection with the 1941 "Fight Infantile Paralysis" campaign. Keith Morgan, national chairman of the Committee for the Celebration of the President's Birthday, will attend the luncheon. Mr. Schenck is vice-chairman of the campaign and state chairman for California.

CBS Network To Embrace All of Latin America

The Columbia Broadcasting System, the first major American radio network to follow through on a plan long bruited and now especially significant—the extension of present American long-wave networks to the Central and South American countries—this week announced, through its president, William S. Paley, that by September 1st next it would have, in addition to its national network in the United States, 39 stations in 18 of the 20 Latin-American republics.

Those 39 are long-wave stations. In addition, the company will have as affiliates 25 short-wave stations.

Film Good-Will Planned

The move is important to the motion picture business, in view of plans now being formulated by the majors, to build good-will for Hollywood by short-wave programs, by transcriptions made in Hollywood and broadcast from this country or on Latin-American stations, and by transcriptions made in those countries and broadcast there.

The move is dictated by the belief of Mr. Paley, who returned to New York this week from a seven-week tour of the countries below the Rio Grande, that "short-waving" North American programs to Latin-America is not enough, since most persons in those countries listen to their local long-wave broadcasts just as they do in the United States.

Except for one Argentine station, the agreements by the CBS with its new affiliates will be for five years, and embody the same terms as agreements by the networks with its U. S. affiliates. At the beginning of operations, the Latin-American stations are expected to carry about 20 hours of CBS commercial, and one hour of its sustaining programs per week. Propaganda will be avoided; the object is a cultural exchange, and the presentation of news in the objective, North-American fashion.

The network is spending $400,000 on equipment necessary for the project. It will erect two new 50,000 watt stations on Long Island: WCBX and WCRC.

The countries in which CBS will have its affiliates are Argentina, Peru, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Brazil, Uruguay, Bolivia, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Venezuela.

Because of the current U. S. Administration's efforts to "reach", culturally, the Latin-American peoples, the CBS project is said to have official enthusiasm. Don Francisco, former head of Lord and Thomas, large advertising agency, who resigned recently to head the radio division of the communications section of the United States Committee to Coordinate Commercial and Cultural Relations between the American Republics, is now visiting the Latin-American countries; his itinerary is said to be the same as that of Mr. Paley; and it is expected that upon his return he and Mr. Paley will discuss fully the CBS project.

Pratchett to Home Office

Arthur Pratchett, general manager in Central America for Paramount is scheduled to arrive in New York next week for home office conferences, and to leave shortly with John Hicks, Jr., the company's foreign sales manager, for Ancon, Panama, where a Central American sales convention will be held February 6th. En route, the pair will visit Mexican representatives and exchanges.

Army Will Use Films in Every Camp and Post

Recreation plans of the War Department for the trainees now being inducted into service call for motion picture shows at every camp and post, to provide which the Army Motion Picture Service, out of its own funds, is financing the installation of temporary equipment at points where theatres have not yet been constructed and equipped out of funds appropriated by Congress, it was disclosed this week.

Long held an important factor in the maintenance of morale, the service now is looking ahead to meeting the needs of the rapidly expanding Army, it was said at the department.

20th Anniversary

"The service will observe without ceremony its 20th year of continuous operation on January 2, 1941," it was officially announced. "It has established over this period of years a position as an exhibitor which has enabled it to rent pictures on favorable terms from the commercial film distributors, and the benefit of these terms has been shown in the low admission fee.

"Operating on what might be called a 'neighborhood theatre' basis, the service has avoided direct competition with commercial civilian theatres in adjoining communities. Like any neighborhood theatre, the service shows pictures which already have run at metropolitan first-run houses. New men entering the Army quite likely will find that the shows being exhibited by the camp theatre are those they already have seen, but this will prove only a temporary inconvenience."

Only the most desirable pictures are shown, and programs are changed four times weekly, the department said. The admission fee is set at a point that will pay minimum operating costs and provide a small margin of safety to guard against any emergency financial difficulties.

Complaint on Clearance

Already two army generals have complained about clearance for army theatres. It was reported that the War Department would take no action in the matter, not interfering with the usual practice of the distributors in treating army theatres like any other house. But it was pointed out in New York that the policy of the majors was subject to any suggestion from the Government.

So far there has been some exhibitor protests against competition from army post theatres but no general reaction. With defense preparations the first order of business for the country, it was said that the major motion picture companies would furnish army camps films on any terms authorized by the Government. If the War Department decides that army theatres should be first runs, they would get pictures before anyone else, it was reported. But the official viewpoint now is that after the men are in camp for a month or so all pictures shown, even on a last run basis, will be new. So at present there is no great problem but if difficulties arise the attitude of the Government will be the deciding factor, it was said.

Joseph Bernhard, chairman of the theatres committee in the industry's defense organization, presided at a committee meeting last week at which it was suggested that all exhibitors cooperate with the Government by playing all pictures made in connection with the defense program. Those at the meeting included Harry Brandt, Leonard Goldenson, Charles C. Moskowitz, Ed Kuykendall, E. V. Richards, Nate Yamins, Robert Wilby.

Young on Defense Work

Indications that Nelson A. Rockefeller, Coordinator of Commercial and Cultural Relations Between the American Republics, is preparing to launch definite programs were seen in Washington this week in the announcement by Secretary of Commerce Jesse H. Jones that he has granted an indefinite leave of absence to James W. Young, director of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce.

Mr. Young for the past ten weeks has been dividing his attention between the bureau and the coordinator's office, where he is director of the division of communications. Granted leave of absence from the Commerce Department, he is expected to devote his full time to his duties of supervision of the motion picture, radio and press programs.

RCA Expands Plant

The RCA Manufacturing Company is expanding plant facilities at Camden, N. J., and Indianapolis under provisions of a $2,370,034 contract from the Navy Department. Additional land must be acquired under the contract for construction of additional factory space. Additional equipment will also be installed in both plants.

Marines Get Sound

Altec will install and service new sound equipment in the U. S. Marine barracks at Parris Island, S. C. Altec will also service the Lyceum Theatre, in the same locality, the company has announced.

RESHUFFLING OF SALES IS EXTENDED TO U.A.

New Districts Set Up in Eastern, Western Territories; Sales Meetings Scheduled

The movement to realign distribution sales forces, partly because of company requirements and partly to prepare for the new selling order under the consent decree, this week spread to United Artists, from where Arthur W. Kelly distribution vice president for the U. S., announced a recasting of executive and field personnel.

Territories Split Up

United Artists will maintain the present division of territory—an eastern and a western division. Harry L. Gold, vice-president, who is the head of the eastern division, will split his territory into four districts instead of three, with four district sales managers, as follows:

Eastern Division: District No. 1, Charles Stern, New York, New Haven and Boston; District No. 2, Arthur Silverstone, Philadelphia, Washington; District No. 3, Bert Stearn, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Buffalo; District No. 4, Hugh Owen, Charlotte, Atlanta, New Orleans, Dallas.

Western Division: Haskell M. Masters, formerly managing director of United Artists Corporation, Ltd., Canada, is the newly-appointed Western Division Manager. He will have four districts under his control as follows: District No. 1, Irving Schlank, Chicago, Milwauke, Minneapolis; District No. 2, J. S. Abrose, Omaha, Kansas City, St. Louis; District No. 3, Ben Fish, Denver, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle; District No. 4, S. Glazer, Canada.

Mr. Masters has appointed Jack Goldhar, formerly district manager for Chicago, Detroit, St. Louis, etc., as his special field representative.

Mr. Kelly also announced that United Artists will augment its Play-Date Department with additional personnel. In addition, Jack Schlaifer, formerly Western Division manager, becomes a special representative.

It was further announced that appointments will be made in the field, promoting salesmen to posts as branch managers. These appointments will be made by the respective divisional sales managers. No outside sales manpower is to come into United Artists. The majority of its selling personnel has been with the corporation between 10 and 20 years.

Fox Meeting January 15th

A meeting of top film executives will be held at the studio in Hollywood starting, January 15th, with revision in personnel setups and production plans necessitated by the consent decree heading the agenda of business which will be discussed at Twentieth Century-Fox. Herman Wobber, sales chief, and S. R. Kent, president of the company, are said to have advised the studio that the sales forces will have to be augmented.

Further meetings will also be called by Mr. Wobber with the sales forces in the field to discuss the consent decree and its relation and effect on business.

J. Cheever Cowdin, Universal board chairman, who arrived in Hollywood last week, is expected to remain another two or three weeks in studio conferences.

Mr. Cowdin will discuss the 1940-41 product lineup with Nate Blumberg, president of the company, William A. Scully, sales manager, Cliff Work, Matthew Fox and Joseph Seidelman. The product for the current season is expected to be virtually completed by the time Mr. Cowdin returns to New York.

The annual Kent Sales Drive conducted by Twentieth Century-Fox field staffs ended last week with the honors going to the Western division headed by William J. Kupper. The branch honors were won by the Washington and Salt Lake City exchanges in the national and international groups, respectively. District honors were won by the Atlantic division.

Warner Managers Meet

M. A. Silver, zone manager of Warner Brothers Theatres, held a pre-holiday meeting of ten Eastern New York managers in Albany on December 18th.

In attendance besides the district manager Charles A. Smakwitz, Western New York district manager Ralph A. Crabill, zone booker Max Friedman and zone short subject booker Joseph Weinstein were the following managers:

Jules Curley, Strand, Mel Conheim, Ritz, Al LaFlamme, Madison and Eddie Selette, Albany, Albany; Jack Swartout, American, Leo Rosen, Troy and Sid Sommer, Lincoln, Troy; Andrew M. Roy, Stanley, Arnold Stoltz, Avon and Jack Breslin, Utica, Utica.

New Haven Managers Meet

Joseph Bernhard, Warner general manager, attended a special managers' meeting in New Haven, Conn., which was followed by the I. J. Hoffman, zone manager, annual Christmas party. Managers of the 47 operating theatres in the New Haven zone, members of the theatre and exchange staffs, and several outside guests attended the dinner-dance.

The Metro Pep Club in New Haven also met for a Christmas dinner-party held in Wallingford, Conn., and presented Thomas Donaldson, manager of the exchange for the past three years, and recently promoted to Boston, with a sterling cigarette case. Maurice N. Wolfe, Boston district manager, and Morey Goldstein, new New Haven branch manager, were also present.

Paramount also held a Christmas party in the New Haven territory as did members of Columbia Pictures.

Film Alliance Adds Exchanges

These new franchise holders have been added to the line-up of exchanges it has been announced by Film Alliance of the United States. Atlantic Pictures will handle Film Alliance product in the New Orleans territory. Jack Adams of the Adams' Film Exchange in Dallas, Oklahoma and Arkansas has been awarded the franchises for those territories. Marcel Mekelburg of Northeastern Film Co., will release the company's product in the Boston territory.

Norman Elson, sales manager for the company, has announced that deals have been closed with the Tri-States Circuit of Iowa and Nebraska for the company's entire 1940-41 product as well as numerous small deals in the Kansas City territory. The Esquire theatre in Toledo, Ohio, has also contracted to show Film Alliance product first run.

Head Office Moved

The Herbert Rosener Company, West Coast distributor of foreign films, and operator of the Clay and Larkin theatres, San Francisco, has moved to the Larkin Theatre. The office was formerly down town.

Launch Texas Drive-In Theatre Circuit

W. G. Underwood and C. C. Ezell, Republic distributors in Dallas have announced plans for two drive-in theatres in that city, at a cost of about $100,000. Their building program includes drive-ins for Austin, Waco and Fort Worth. They are now operating similar theatres in Houston and San Antonio.

Their total investment is estimated at half a million dollars. Construction on the drive-ins in Dallas started this week.

Houser with Fleischer

Mervin Houser is to handle production publicity on the forthcoming feature which the Mex Fleischer Florida studio is preparing to produce for Paramount release in 1941-42 season. Mr. Houser is stationed in Miami. He is formerly of the Paramount Hollywood publicity staff.

Operators' Unions Elect Officers for New Year

Heading labor news this week are elections of officers by "unions in the field," the projectionists' unions in the nation's key film centers. While many of them have elected officers in the past several months, the bulk of such elections comes usually at this period, a week to two before the first of the new year.

O'Connell in New Haven

Reelected officers of the New Haven projectionists' local 74 are John S. O'Connell, president; Charles McBridge, vice-president; Robert C. Watson, recording secretary; Daniel Cummings, business agent; Edward O'Connell, business agent for Derby.

On the executive board are all the officers, and William O'Connell and Harry Feldman.

There will be a celebration in May to note the union's 40th anniversary, it was announced.

Vincent McKelvey has been named head of the Hazleton projectionists' Local 152. Other officers are John Gallagher, vice-president; William Boyle, business agent; Anthony De Cosmo, secretary-treasurer; Henry Krissinger, recording secretary; and Alex Sumtzger, sergeant-at-arms. The installation will be January 5th.

New president of the Kansas City projectionists' Local 170 is David McKinstry. Other officers are: R. H. Matheny, vice-president; Frank Dowd, secretary; Walter Croft, business agent; F. H. Burkert, treasurer; C. M. Edmonds, reading clerk; and William McKinstry, sergeant-at-arms. Only reelection was that of Mr. Burkert. He has been treasurer for 20 years.

Local 343, Omaha projectionists' unit, will elect officers January 7th. Present president is R. L. MacIntyre; present business agent, Howard Jackson.

In New York, Jacob Rosenberg, present incumbent in the city's musicians' Local 802, was reelected president last week over Albert Pearl. Richard McCann was reelected vice-president. Other officers reelected were William Feinberg, secretary; Harry Suber, treasurer. Max Arons and Mr. Suber were named delegates to the American Federation of Musicians convention.

Elected to the executive board were Emil Baltzer, William Laendner, John Long, John Manuti, Maurice Purgalin, Aldo Ricci, Robert Sterne, Samuel Suber, and S. C. Thompson; to the trial board, Mr. Arons, Sherman Brande, Frank Garisto, Eddie Horn, Richard Landon, C. G. McGibney, William Powers, George Schechter, and Gino Tirelli.

Messrs. Baltzer and McCann were named delegates to the State Federation of Labor; Feinberg, McCann, and Rosenberg to the Central Labor and Trades Council; and Louis Grupp to the United Hebrew Trades.

Screen Readers Elect

Elected president of the Screen Readers Guild is William Koenig, of the RKO reading department. New secretary of the organization is Lillian Berquist, also of the same company.

The guild last week filed a petition with the National Labor Relations Board, asking for a formal hearing with attorneys of MGM, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox, and Universal. The guild seeks the right to represent outside readers. Informal conferences have already been held. It is said the companies maintain the outside readers are private contractors; and, hence, cannot be regarded as employes.

For the 12th year, Robert Piatt, Jr., has been reelected recording secretary of the Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, projectionists' Local 325. Raymond Conrad was reelected president. Other new officers are William Kennedy, vice-president William Piatt, business agent; Joseph Malloy, secretary-treasurer; William Grimes, sergeant-at-arms; Kenneth Thomas, Kenneth Barber, and Wilbert Fletcher, trustees; Kane Jacobs, Ted Hayden, and Mark Thomas, on the executive board; Edwards Parsons, Cummie Piatt, Joseph Moser, John Kenworthy, and Lewis Hemmer, on the examining board; and George Tate, delegate to the Central Labor Union.

Other Elections Held

Reelected president of the Scranton projectionists' Local 120 is Medea Cetta. Other officers are William Cox, vice-president; William J. Emmel, treasurer; Henry Mehl, secretary; William Eiden, sergeant-at-arms; Herbert Sealy, business agent.

In Washington, the Musicians' Local 161 reelected Albert Hayden for his 34th presidential term. Other officers are Edward S. McGrath, vice-president; Charles Brinton, secretary; and Harry C. Manwell, treasurer.

Last week, in Portland, Oregon, Basil Gray, of the Seattle Theatrical Federation, announced that the projectionistss' Local 154 and the Seattle Theatre Managers' Association had agreed on new wage scales for 1941. An increase of 12½ per cent is granted some operators.

In Albany, New York, this week, after the State Federation of Labor's Executive Council had met last week, it was reported that unit will again support legislation making stockholders liable for employes' wages. A measure to accomplish this has twice, in previous legislatures, passed one house.

It is too early to decide whether the new policy of Sunday shows in New York City, and the increase in performers' minimum wages to $50 per week have had any effect upon employment, Paul Dulzell, executive secretary of the Actors Equity, told a quarterly membership meeting of the organization Friday, December 20th, at New York's Astor.

CBS Sells 1,000 Shares

Disposition of 1,000 of Columbia Broadcasting System Class A common stock in October has been reported for Paul W. Kesten, New York, by the Securities and Exchange Commission in its semi-monthly summary of the transactions of corporation officers and directors in the securities of their companies. At the close of the month Mr. Kesten held 1,501 shares of Class A and 800 shares of Class B stock.

The Texas commission will reduce the film to 16 mm. for schools, libraries, and the like.

The film is in color, and runs 55 minutes.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

HOWARDS OF VIRGINIA: Cary Grant, Martha Scott, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Richard Carlson—Excellent picture but failed to draw and played to the low of the year.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

First National

ALWAYS A BRIDE: Rosemary Lane, George Reeves—Good program picture. "C" picture. Featured players not so well known—George Reeves unknown, poor. Played one day, Saturday. Running time, 58 minutes.—A. E. Miller, Rivoli Theatre, Lincolnton, N. C. General patronage.

EAST OF THE RIVER: John Garfield, Brenda Marshall—A mistake to use the Italian dialect or brogue. This hurt the picture. Did fair business under circumstances. Picture as a whole okay. Running time, 72 minutes. Played November 22-23.—A. E. Miller, Rivoli Theatre, Lincolnton, N. C. Textile, rural and small town patronage.

NO TIME FOR COMEDY: Rosalind Russell, James Stewart, Charlie Ruggles, Genevieve Tobin, Louise Beavers—Held up good the first half but sagged badly last half. Business off last two days of engagement. —E. H. Malone, Alma Theatre, Alma, Wis. General patronage.

THEY DRIVE BY NIGHT: Ann Sheridan, George Raft, Ida Lupino, Humphrey Bogart, Gale Page—Another pistol from Warner Bros. (my idea of the "friendly company"). They really come through with what my customers pay to see. This picture is full of gags, comebacks and all around good entertainment. More, please. Played October 19-20.—I. Gates, Isis Theatre, Waterville, Kansas. Small town and rural patronage.

TUGBOAT ANNIE SAILS AGAIN: Marjorie Rambeau, Alan Hale—Excellent, almost a great picture. Boy, she does a swell job. Alan Hale good. It sure ought to click for everybody. Played week-end.—A. E. Miller, Rivoli Theatre, Lincolnton, N. C. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANDY HARDY MEETS DEBUTANTE: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—These are the best pictures that Metro turns out and even they leave much to be desired in the opinion of my patrons. Running time, 89 minutes. Played November 2-3.—I. Gates, Isis Theatre, Waterville, Kansas. Small town and rural patronage.

DR. KILDARE GOES HOME: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Laraine Day—I run out of gas at 3 A. M. to come home and run this the same day. Two nightmares at once. Box office poison definitely. If MGM discontinues this series, no one will be hurt. Positively no entertainment value. Played December 13-14.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

ESCAPE: Norma Shearer, Robert Taylor, Conrad Veidt, Nazimova, Felix Bressart, Albert Basserman, Philip Dorn, Bonita Granville—A strange tale of Hitler and Hitlerism, of great danger of having too much knowledge and great fear when expressing even almost hidden thoughts to others. A great mother love of a son for his mother, trials and tribulations almost beyond compare, but the conclusion happy one and Shearer surpasses her great triumph in "The Women." Taylor eclipsing his dramatic portrayal in "Waterloo Bridge," Nazimova surpassing in great actress ability all of her previous screen offerings and the remaining characters surpassing all of their previous appearances, including Felix Bressart, Albert Bassermann, Philip Dorn, Bonita Granville, et al. All patriotic citizens loving this free America will appreciate the more the fact that they are living in a land devoted to Democracy and civilization, where people can worship God according to the dictates of their hearts and consciences. Running time, 104 minutes. Played December 11-17.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

GOLD RUSH MAISIE: Ann Sothern, Virgnia Weidler, Lee Bowman—A lot of good laughs in this one and that is the sort of thing my people want to see. Bad weather kept the gross down but that doesn't mean that "Maisie" didn't do her part. Running time, 82 minutes. Played October 15-16.—I. Gates, Isis Theatre, Waterville, Kansas. Small town and rural patronage.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

HULLABALLOO: Frank Morgan, Virginia Grey, Billie Burke—Very good entertainment that pleased everyone. Good for any day of the week. Running time, 77 minutes. Played December 12-13.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Indiana. Small town patronage.

NEW MOON: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Mary Boland—This was a class A flop from every standpoint. Nelson sings pretty fair but looks like a dying calf in a hail storm; Jeanette is easy on the eyes if only she would keep her mouth shut. And there you are. No business! Running time, 104 minutes. Played October 5-6.—I. Gates, Isis Theatre, Waterville, Kansas. Small town and rural patronage.

PYGMALION: Leslie Howard, Wendy Hiller—Opened to good business on Foto Nite, but they didn't go for it the second night.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER, THE: James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan—This wasn't entertaining; it wasn't well done and wasn't even sensible. Who in the world ever thought of making such a picture? "Vas you dere, Metro?" A disgrace to these good stars. Foreign locales are out, 'way out. Lay off, producers. Running time, 101 minutes.—I. Gates, Isis Theatre, Waterville, Kansas. Small town and rural patronage.

SUSAN AND GOD: Fredric March, Joan Crawford, Rita Quigley, Bruce Cabot, Ruth Hussey, Rita Hayworth, John Carroll, Rose Hobart—Terrible is the word for "Susan!" After a thorough disinfecting the theatre still smells. The theatre cat yowled, ran out and hasn't been seen around town since. The people were smart enough to not even venture in in the first place. Running time, 117 minutes. Played October 12-13.—I. Gates, Isis Theatre, Waterville, Kansas. Small town and rural patronage.

THESE GLAMOUR GIRLS: Lew Ayres, Lana Turner, Tom Brown, Richard Carlson—A little old for us. Business only normal. No sell-out.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Monogram

BOYS OF THE CITY: Bobby Jordon, Leo Gorcey—Played this Friday the 13th to outstanding business. Every kid in town was here. It's all been done many times before but the kids liked to be scared. Running time, 63 minutes. Played December 13.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Indiana. Small town patronage.

Paramount

THE GREAT VICTOR HERBERT: Allan Jones, Mary Martin—An excellent picture for real music lovers, otherwise no good. To my opinion too much music and singing. Running time, 90 minutes. Played December 5-7.—D. S. Caporal, Mayflower Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. Neighborhood and general patronage.

MOON OVER BURMA: Dorothy Lamour, Robert Preston, Preston Foster—Excellent picture. Business fair.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

REMEMBER THE NIGHT: Fred MacMurray, Barbara Stanwyck—A picture which drags out too much. Good acting but weak plot. Played on fair days. Running time, 94 minutes. Played November 28-30.—D. S. Caporal, Mayflower Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. Neighborhood and general patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RIVER: Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Basil Rathbone, Oscar Levant—An excellent picture and liked by all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

THEY KNEW WHAT THEY WANTED: Carole Lombard, Charles Laughton—This picture is definitely not a small town picture. It didn't draw and very few liked it that came in. Our customers do not appreciate Laughton although he is grand in this picture. Running time, 96 minutes. Played December 11-12.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Indiana. Small town patronage.

Republic

COVERED TRAILER, THE: James, Lucile and Russell Gleason, Mary Beth Hughes—These series are quite popular. Nice family picture. Business O. K. Played on double bill.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

GAUCHO SERENADE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—Picture is tripe to me but just what the audience wants, so everybody satisfied. Running time, 65 minutes. Played November 15-16.—E. H. Malone, Alma Theatre, Alma, Wis. General patronage.

MELODY AND MOONLIGHT: Johnny Downs, Vera Vague, Mary Lee, Jerry Colona, Jane Frazee—A very good program picture. Plenty of music, comedy, dancing and everything. Hats off to Republic. Running time, 72 minutes. Played December 13.—Harry Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

ONE MAN'S LAW: Don "Red" Barry, Janet Waldo —Did nice week end business with this on double bill. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

RIDE, TENDERFOOT, RIDE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Didn't do the business expected. Big war drive on. Good picture.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

RIDE, TENDERFOOT, RIDE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Story—One of the best Autry pictures so far. Pleased everyone. Smiley Burnette contributes a swell bit of comedy. Running time, 65 minutes. Played November 7-9.—W. J. Werner and Son, Le Sueur Theatre, Le Sueur, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

YOUNG BILL HICKOK: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes—Fair picture; fair business. Running time, 60 minutes. Played December 10.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ABE LINCOLN IN ILLINOIS: Raymond Massey, Gene Lockhart—Another loss from RKO. Played December 2-3.—A. E. Miller, Grand Theatre, Lincolnton, N. C. General, textile and small town patronage.

CROSS COUNTRY ROMANCE: Gene Raymond, Wendy Barrie—A nice little picture that pleased.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DANCE, GIRL, DANCE: Maureen O'Hara, Louis Hayward, Lucille Ball, Ralph Bellamy—A few dollars more and RKO could have had a good picture in this. It's a little short of something. I would say the directing. The trailer will sell the picture and your cash customers will tell you they should liked to have seen more dancing by Lucille Ball. Running time, 89 minutes. Played November 23-24.—I. Gates, Isis Theatre, Waterville, Kansas. Small town and rural patronage.

DREAMING OUT LOUD: Lum and Abner, Frances Langford—Even though we played this after every other house in this part of the state, and just a week before Christmas, we are proud to report this the biggest grossing picture of the past three years. As a picture, it's not much except Lum and Abner, but it will bring out those that have never been to a movie before. Running time, 81 minutes. Played December 14-16.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Indiana. Small town patronage.

HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME, THE: Charles Laughton, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Thomas Mitchell, Maureen O'Hara—This picture was thoroughly enjoyed by our audience and, as one might expect, there was considerable debate between the oldsters as to whether the acting of Quasimodo Laughton topped that of the late Quasimodo Chaney. Apparently they could come to no agreement regarding the acting of the "horror men," but all seemed to agree with the statement that while Lon Chaney's make-up was repulsive, Charles Laughton's was super-repulsive. Another point upon which all agreed is that Maureen O'Hara is indeed a really beautiful girl and that she made a very pretty Esmeralda. A loud burst of applause greeted her rescue from the hangman's scaffold by the imbecilic hunchback. There is no solt-pedaling of the horror scenes (there are plenty in this picture) by producer Berman, so if your patrons have strong stomachs and steady nerves they will be able to withstand observing many of the so-called "simple pleasures of the fifteenth century." However, if your patrons are not strong and steady, it will be well for them to skip this one. Running time, 114 minutes. Played December 7.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

LADDIE: Tim Holt, Virginia Gilmore—Played on Bank Night to exceptionally good business. It seemed that everyone wanted to see the picture, too. Some of the men thought it a little tame. Running time, 69 minutes. Played December 10.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Indiana. Small town patronage.

LUCKY PARTNERS: Ginger Rogers, Ronald Colman—Picture very weak. Don't think it satisfied anyone in the audience. Miss Rogers is no actress, just a dancer. Played December 4-5.—E. H. Malone, Alma Theatre, Alma, Wis. General patronage.

LUCKY PARTNERS: Gingers Rogers, Ronald Colman—Good picture, good crowd, considering weather, seven inches of snow, and zero. The last 20 minutes of this sure exercises the cheek bones. Somehow RKO's pictures always lack seasoning or something. They nearly click but just don't quite jell. Played December 14-15.—I. Gates, Isis Theatre, Waterville, Kansas. Small town and rural patronage.

MEN AGAINST THE SKY: Richard Dix, Wendy Barrie, Edmund Lowe—Someone woke Richard Dix up. Go back to bed, Dix; this is a false alarm. Just program fare. Played December 11.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BRIGHAM YOUNG, FRONTIERSMAN: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Dean Jagger—Good picture will not ring the bell in every spot. Come up with small loss on this one. Theme will not be popular in every town. Running time, 112 minutes.—A. E. Miller, Rivoli Theatre, Lincolton, N. C. General patronage.

CHARTER PILOT: Lloyd Nolan, Lynn Bari—Fair picture and fair business. Has lots of comedy. Pleased on Friday-Saturday. Running time, 65 minutes. Played December 13-14.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DOWN ARGENTINE WAY: Don Ameche, Betty Grable—Technicolor hit. Boys, rush right down, date it. Step on it—Call the fire department. Carmen Miranda and those two dancers are swell and the coin will jingle in the box office. Looking forward to return engagement. Will hold up plenty good. Running time, 88 minutes.—A. E. Miller, Rivoli Theatre, Lincolton, N. C. General patronage.

DOWN ARGENTINE WAY: Don Ameche, Betty Grable, Carmen Miranda, Charlotte Greenwood—Something has struck us lately. We are doing excellent business in a bad season. This film certainly drew them in and the slinky dancer, Carmen Miranda, did her share of the drawing. One look at the trailer would do that. The picture is a peppy musical comedy and they have been scarce lately. There is a good horse race to liven matters up a bit and the color is absolutely tops in beauty. We had a nice early date on this one; the audience enjoyed it thoroughly and everyone, including myself, is very happy about it. But, be careful of those hot dances featured in this one. Running time, 88 minutes. Played December 12.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

ELSA MAXWELL'S HOTEL FOR WOMEN: Ann Sothern, Linda Darnell—A picture all would like to see. A comedy drama of a small town girl in a big town doing big. Good acting and dialogue. Running time, 83 minutes. Played December 1-4.—D. S. Caporal, Mayflower Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. Neighborhood and general patronage.

GREAT PROFILE, THE: John Barrymore, Mary Beth Hughes—Cancel it. I didn't feel sorry for Barrymore, if Fox did.—A. E. Miller, Rivoli Theatre, Lincolton, N. C. General patronage.

STREET OF MEMORIES: Lynne Roberts, Guy Kibbee—Cancel it. Poor.—A. E. Miller, Rivoli Theatre, Lincolton, N. C. General patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—This colorful story written in the melodies of Stephen C. Foster pleased our audience 100 per cent, much to the amazement of many who feared that it would be too slow. Many were glad to see Al Jolson once again and to hear him render "Oh, Susanna" and other Foster numbers. Andea Leeds' characterization of Mrs. Foster is without question the best bit of acting in the picture. Besides being beautiful in color, as well as tuneful, the picture reaches out and tugs at the heart string, the first occasion being the spontaneous production of the composition, "Old Black Joe," at the deathbed of the faithful colored servant, Old Joe, for whom Foster had promised to write a song, and the second when Jolson announces to an audience of hooting Yankees that the composer will be unable to witness the premiere of his new song, "Swanee River," because he has just died. Running time, 84 minutes. Played November 30.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

TIN PAN ALLEY: Alice Faye, Betty Grable, Jack Oakie, John Payne—Very good picture but rainy weather and coming of Christmas cut down the attendance. This production is another "Alexander's Ragtime Band." Running time, 94 minutes. Played December 11-12.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

United Artists

CAPTAIN CAUTION: Louise Platt, Victor Mature—Disappointed, children afraid, too brutal—too much copying of others like "Sea Hawk." Marks another loss from United Artists. A waste of time. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 28-29.—A. E. Miller, Rivoli Theatre, Lincolton, N. C. General patronage.

CAPTAIN CAUTION: Victor Mature, Louise Platt, Leo Carrillo—Edward Small states in an ad. that the public wants sword play. My customers stayed home from this picture at a dime admission. It wasn't worth short subject price in my theatre. Someone should tell Mr. Small what the public really wants. In my opinion, he never did know. Running time, 86 minutes. Played December 10-11.—I. Gates, Isis Theatre, Waterville, Kansas. Small town and rural patronage.

CAPTION CAUTION: Victor Mature, Louise Platt, Leo Carrillo—Another picture from this company on which we lost money. Plenty of action in this one but no one seemed to care much about it. Running time, 85 minutes. Played December 14-16.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Indiana. Small town patronage.

FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT: Joel McCrea, Herbert Marshall—Business fair, lacked smoothness in production. Not a top picture but cost top prices. Airplane crash could have been more spectacular. Running time, 123 minutes.—A. E. Miller, Rivoli Theatre, Lincolton, N. C. General patronage.

FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT: Joel McCrea, Laraine Day, Herbert Marshall, George Sanders, Robert Benchley—One of the best pictures we have ever played in this theatre. Will please most everyone. Business only fair due to weather, and Christmas. Played December 8-10.—E. H. Malone, Alma Theatre, Alma, Wis. General patronage.

KIT CARSON: Jon Hall, Lynn Bari—Very fine production with business very satisfactory. Play it.—E. H. Malone, Alma Theatre, Almo, Wis. General patronage.

KIT CARSON: Jon Hall, Lynn Bari—A well made picture that holds interest throughout. Jon Hall's acting is excellent. Running time, 97 minutes. Played November 19-21.—W. J. Werner and Son, Le Sueur Theatre, Le Sueur, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

SCARFACE (RE-ISSUE): Paul Muni, Ann Dvorak, Karen Morley—Did only average business on this reissue.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SKY DEVILS (RE-ISSUE): Spencer Tracy—Played this again for third time in Wallaceburg. Business poor.—Harland Rankin, Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SOUTH OF PAGO PAGO: Jon Hall, Frances Farmer, Victor McLaglen, Olympe Bradna—Good business but rather poor picture. Many said that the trailer gave them the impression that they were going to see something a little different from the ordinary and they didn't. Business good though, so who cared, as it played on a bargain night. Running time, 97 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

TOPPER TAKES A TRIP: Constance Bennett, Roland Young—Excellent picture, excellent acting. Played on cool days. For real laughs and entertainment don't miss this one. Running time, 80 minutes. Played December 8-11.—D. S. Caporal, Mayflower Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. Neighborhood and general patronage.

TURNABOUT: Adolphe Menjou, Mary Astor, Carole Landis, John Hubbard—My audience went for this. A little screwy but nevertheless it will give them the old spirit to be gay again. Now this, Mr. Small, is a sample of what my public calls entertainment. Catch?—I. Gates, Isis Theatre, Waterville, Kansas. Small town and rural patronage.

WESTERNER, THE: Gary Cooper, Walter Brennan, Fred Stone, Doris Davenport—Excellent acting, fine direction, beautiful black and white photography, romance, suspense, comedy, interesting story and a dandy crowd made me glad I played this one. The audience praised it highly. The plot moved rather slowly at times but the brilliant dialogue made up for that. This should more than please both Western fans and non-Western fans. Running time, 99 minutes. Played December 13-14.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Universal

DEVIL'S PIPELINE: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine—One of the best pictures played this year. Lots of comedy in this one. Running time, 65 minutes. Played December 10.—Harry Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

HIRED WIFE: Rosalind Russell, Brian Aherne, Virginia Bruce, Robert Benchley—Fine picture. Russell's best to date. Many good comments. Played November 10-12.—E. H. Malone, Alma Theatre, Alma, Wis. General patronage.

SANDY GETS HER MAN: Baby Sandy, Stuart Erwin, Una Merkel, Edgar Kennedy—Good show for this occasion. Played November 20-21.—F. H. Malone, Alma Theatre, Alma, Wis. General patronage.

SEVEN SINNERS: Marlene Dietrich, John Wayne, Broderick Crawford, Mischa Auer, Oscar Homolka, Albert Dekker, Anna Lee—Miss Dietrich is poison at the box office. Nevertheless, it is a good show but not for Sunday. Played November 24-26.—E. H. Malone, Alma Theatre, Alma, Wis. General patronage.

SEVEN SINNERS: Marlene Dietrich, Broderick Crawford, John Wayne, Mischa Auer, Albert Dekker, Oscar Homolka, Anna Lee—Topping feature, the most stupendous cafe fight in existence. "Bijou," alias Miss Dietrich, was exceptionally good in the extremely difficult part she had to play, and John Wayne's navy exploitation, always victorious in courage and hitting power displayed, was the man of the hour when most needed. It is a fair melodrama and on the past time side. Should please most grownups and some of the younger ones. Running time, 86 minutes. Played December 12-18.—William Noble, Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

SPRING PARADE: Deanna Durbin, Robert Cummings, Mischa Auer, Butch and Buddy—Lots of favorable comments on this picture. However, it did not draw as expected. Robert Cummings, Butch and Buddy and the rest of the supporting cast is excellent. Running time, 89 minutes. Played December 8-10.—W. J. Werner and Son, Le Sueur Theatre, Le Sueur, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

WHEN THE DALTONS RODE: Randolph Scott, Kay Francis, Brian Donlevy—A great picture. Drew very well. I believe it was as good in acting as "Jesse James." Running time, 81 minutes. Played December 11-12.—Harry Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

WITNESS VANISHES, THE: Edmund Lowe, Wendy Barrie—Real good mystery picture. Played with Gene Autry on dual bill.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

KNUTE ROCKNE—ALL AMERICAN: Pat O'Brien, Gale Page, Ronald Reagan, Donald Crisp—Very good to the male trade. Some fine remarks. Played December 8-9.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

FLOWING GOLD: John Garfield, Pat O'Brien, Frances Farmer—This one was plenty good; and my patrons were glad to stop on the way out and tell me so. We like Garfield around here. He isn't handsome but he certainly commands your respect. Biz satisfactory. Played December 3-4.—I. Gates, Isis Theatre, Waterville, Kansas. Small town and rural patronage.

FLOWING GOLD: Pat O'Brien, John Garfield, Frances Farmer—Just ordinary. Don't let anybody tell you it's another "Boom Town."—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

THE LETTER: Bette Davis, Herbert Marshall—A standard—producers should study pictures like this one. Entertainment plus. It may not be such a big money maker, but, boy! More pictures like this would certainly make show business hum. Excellent, enjoyed by all. Bette Davis is as good as dear old Jeanne Eagles; remember her when! Another star in Warners' crown. Running time, 97 minutes. Played November 25-26.—A. E. Miller, Rivoli Theatre, Lincolnton, N. C. Small town and general patronage.

RKO Radio

BAR BUCCAROOS: Ray Whitley Comedies—If your customers like westerns, here is one in abbreviated form. Running time, 16 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Indiana. Small town patronage.

FIRE CHIEF, THE: Walt Disney Cartoons—A good cartoon with plenty of fast action and laughs in typical Disney and Donald Duck style. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 2: Britain's R.A.F.—Timely presentation of England's R.A.F. and their problem. All right.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

GRUNTERS AND GROANERS: Lew Lehr Dribble Puss Parade—Here is a hilarious series of clips concerned mostly with professional wrestling. The students laugh at these a great deal; but some people take them seriously and can't look at them. Most of my bunch put a reel like this in the same category as a Stooge comedy. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

LAND OF FLOWERS: Magic Carpet Series; VACATION TIME: Ed Thorgersen (Sports)—I ran these two shorts together because they seemed to be made for each other. The first one features beautiful scenes all over Florida in outstanding color; the second features the action and sports in Florida, and is also in color. Many comments after the shows made me glad I played them as I did. It certainly presents a beautiful, yet fast-paced panorama of a fascinating place. Running time, 19 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

LANDING OF THE PILGRIMS: Terry-Toons—This is especially appropriate for Thanksgiving dates but will be good any time. A very good surprise lifts this color cartoon far above others in the same series. It will get a very good laugh when it ends; and a few along the way. Running time, seven minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

PLANE GOOFY: Terry-Toons—Very good cartoon in color. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TEMPERAMENTAL LION: Terry-Toons—Good cartoon in color. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Universal

HAWAIIAN RHYTHM: Harry Owens and His Royal Hawaiians—Hawaiian rhythms by Harry Owens and his Royal Hawaiians, songs by some of the boys in the band, ballroom dancing by Don and Sally Jennings, eccentric comedy dances by Sterns and Dean, Rita Rio's renditions of a few songs, and grass skirts, combine to make this an entertaining variety short. Running time, 17 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Ternton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SPRINGTIME SERENADE: Color Cartune Classics (re-issue)—A very good cartoon with plenty of good, rich color. Running time, seven minutes.—Harry Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: No. 83—These reels are good fillers. Nothing exceptional but always pleases.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: No. 84—Something we can all use. A very interesting series, these Fictions. Running time, nine minutes.—Harry Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

TORRID TEMPOS: Two-Reel Musicals—A very fine musical. Running time, 19 minutes.—Harry Shaw, Dillard Theatre, Wardell, Mo. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

FLAG OF HUMANITY: Technicolor Patriotic—Another two reel color featurette from Vitaphone, this shows the development of the Red Cross as Clara Barton started it in America. It is very well done and deserves some advertising. However, as it is quite serious, play it with a light feature. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MECHANIX ILLUSTRATED, NO. 4: Color Parade—These shorts always prove interesting to our audience and this one was no exception. The first item depicted concerns airports with particular emphasis upon LaGuardia Field. Following are some "squints" of modern streamline designing that includes everything from trains to refrigerators; the inspection of the various devices that are used to test manufacturers' products for the protection of the customer; and last a demonstration of the latest method of fighting fire with frozen air.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

OZZIE NELSON AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Real good. Lots of fine comments.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

PUBLIC JITTERBUG NO. 1: Hal LeRoy, Betty Hutton, O. K.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SERVICE WITH THE COLORS: Technicolor Patriotic—A colored two reel that every theatre should play. They liked it and applauded it.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

STAGEFRIGHT: Merrie Melodies—A satisfactory picture and stage fright was a fright and a very good color picture for a seven minute run. Running time, seven minutes.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

WACKY WILDLIFE: Merrie Melodies—Darn it! I should have played this two days. The students talked it up and it would have drawn business the second day. It is the best cartoon we have played in at least a year, and we use two or three each week. It is made up of those very short surprises that Schlesinger is becoming so proficient at. The inference in the coyote sequence nearly brought the house down, and the flag on the duck was a close second. Run it if you never run another short. If you haven't decided whether it was good or not, I'll tell you. Yes, it was excellent!!! Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

No Shortage of French Films, Reports Lopert

Operators of foreign film houses in the U. S., accustomed to using French films, need not worry for another three years, according to the optimistic report of I. E. Lopert, foreign film distributor and operator of a foreign language "dubbing" service in New York. Mr. Lopert whose foreign film distributing companies are Pax Films and Juno Films, this week said that, from discussions with various French producers, many of whom are now in this country or coming, and with other foreign film distributors based in New York—there is at least a three year's supply of French films available or in the making.

The estimate is also based on reports of production, and upon the known fact that French films always played theatres in this country a year to three after being made; often playing in South America and Canada before here. Thus, he explained, it should take up to three years for America's "art" houses to put on their screens French films produced last year.

There is one drawback, Mr. Lopert qualified. While the operators of "art" theatres need not close their gates, they must resign themselves to films of poorer photographic quality; they must hope that the great French acting names, and the noted French producers, as well as the typical "real" French stories which attract "art" patrons will overcome the photographic deterioration. This deterioration will be from the copying of prints of French films located in Canada, South America and overseas.

Readily admitting that, beyond a few French negatives in the U. S. Customs House, now being claimed, and possibly some actual negatives in Canada, none may be expected henceforth from France, because the Germans hold Paris, processing center, Mr. Lopert explained that French films to be shown here in the next three years must, in the main, be copies of negatives in turn made from prints located in countries other than the U. S., France and Germany.

Such negatives are not, of course, equal in quality to originals, though great care is being used, Mr. Lopert asserted.

Films which may be produced and exported by the Vichy regime, Mr. Lopert holds no hope for. They will be regarded with the suspicion with which German films are regarded, he said.

Following is a list of some French films now, and to be, available to the "art" houses operator according to Mr. Lopert:

"Le Roi", with Victor Francen, Raimu, and Gaby Morlay—Burstyn, Goldberg, and Lopert, distributor; "Hotel Du Nord", with Arabella, Louis Jouvet, and Arletty—Juno Films, Inc., distributor; "Pepe Le Moko", distributor of which is Mayer-Burstyn; "Circumstances Attenuantes", with Michael Simon, and Arletty—Gottesman, distributor; "Nine Bachelors", with Sacha Guitry—Gottesman, distributor; "Pieges", with Maurice Chevalier—Minnitsky, distributor; "Remorques", with Jean Gabin—Luca, distributor; "L'Enfer des Anges"—Rabinovitch, distributor; "Ye Schpountz", with Fernandel—Heymann, distributor.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

EIGHT YEARS

In 1933, an idea was born.

Nothing unusual. Nothing spectacular.

Only, that men doing a better job should so be recognized before all eyes of the industry.

The idea became the Quigley Awards. And the Awards became the measure of theatre showmanship.

What did it?

A deep, abiding faith in the power of showmanship; the eagerness of the man in the field to keep that faith.

Tomorrow, is 1941. Tomorrow, eight years of Quigley Awards will come into being. Years of nourishment by its well-wishers have made of the fledgling idea a tower of boxoffice strength.

More so than ever, is that strength called for, now, to be lavished for the glory of the industry that gave it life.

The Quigley Awards cannot fail.

As concerns policy and procedure, the 1941 Competitions will continue as is. According to the boys who have the final say of it, the "single idea" slant has earned unanimous approval. There is no reason to change. The "meat" of the campaign still takes the headlines. To repeat, that "meat" may be most anything in the way of exploitation, advertising or publicity—window, lobby, newspaper tiein, street stunt, or what-have-you.

The "Fortnights" again will be regulation, with entries received in each two-week preliminary period judged for the Fortnight Awards, with the same Fortnighters in turn considered for the "Quarter-Masters".

That's about all there is to it, and with which the "regulars" are quite familiar. From time to time, the rules and regulations will be published for the information of newcomers. In the meantime, they are invited to query us on any point that needs clarification.

Before kissing 1940 a fond farewell, it may be added that the year's final Quarter-Master voting holds forth shortly, to be followed in due course by the year's windup—the Grand Awards Judging and the Big Trip to Hollywood for the winners.

So listen for the starting gun, folks, and get agoin'. And if the Quigley Awards helps you to get a little nearer to where you are headed, why that's just perfect for us.

Further good news for the New Year directly has to do with Round Tablers Harvey Cocks and Wally Caldwell, currently reporting changes which they make with every good wish from the membership.

After two successful years with the Schine Brothers, Cocks returns to his former post as general manager of the Quimby Theatres, in Fort Wayne, Indiana. Caldwell, veteran Loewman, pulls up reluctant roots to become the operator of the new Esquire, in Toledo, his old stamping-grounds.

Both theatremen have long been heard in these pages. They will continue to be heard from in their new situations.

THIS, TOO, IS GOODWILL

By the time this issue arrives at Warners' Frolic, in Chicago, the staff should have an inkling of what Manager Ben Cohn is springing for their entertainment at the theatre after the New Year's Eve show. It's a turkey dinner with all the fixin's, prepared by the mother of one of the ushers.

The information is set down here to indicate the goodwill between manager and personnel, an accomplishment, incidentally, that usually marks the record of your more successful theatreman.

Loud crashings to be heard early in January should not cause alarum, readers are informed. The excitement, if any, will come about through the enthusiastic breaking of New Year resolutions, made in more optimistic moments.

1941 Quigley Awards Inaugurated As Eighth Year of Competitions Receives All-Industry Welcome

January First Marks Opening of Initial Fortnight Period; Quarter Winners Again To Be Voted Quarter-Master Prizes

by A-MIKE-VOGEL

Wednesday is not only the beginning of the New Year.

The day becomes more important to theatremen in that it also signalizes the starting gun for 1941's Quigley Awards.

That's news, folks—news for every showman who hones to show his stuff alongside of the next one.

Seven was the lucky number for the 1940 Awards. That was the year when every Awards record was busted wide open.

The eighth year promises to do even better by the Project itself and for the fortunes of those hot-shot Round Tablers hitting every curve on high in those free-for-all Exploitation Sweepstakes.

1941 definitely is the Big Year. It's a new showbusiness with Showmanship at the wheel. Both Judge and Theatreman say so.

* *

On this page is to be noted the first listing of the 1941 Judges. Names, as always, comprise representative heads in distribution, advertising, exhibition.

Their acceptances and Awards endorsements set down on following pages will be followed in the next issues with more of the same. Plus what the man in the field thinks about the Competitions.

So, boys and girls, it starts on the stroke of Wednesday, January 1st. As usual, no fancy campaigns are required—or requested. Only the evidence tells the tale.

Just do it, prove it, mail it.

Let's go, then. From scratch, everybody.

S. CHARLES EINFELD

Director of Advertising and Publicity
Warner Bros. Pictures

I am very pleased at the privilege of joining the judging committee for the Quigley Awards for 1941.

Many thanks are due to the MOTION PICTURE HERALD for its continuing to foster a spirit of competition among theatre men. The importance of showmanship in this industry cannot be too highly touted and those theatre men whose performances stand out above the others deserve all the recognition accorded them.

I think the MOTION PICTURE HERALD through the Managers Round Table is doing an excellent job in this respect.

OSCAR A. DOOB

Director of Advertising and Publicity
Loew's, Inc.

Of course, I'll be happy to serve on your 1941 judging committee. I wish there were more I could do to help along this very worthy effort to stimulate showmanship.

Your Quigley Awards, in my opinion, provide a colorful incentive in a business that needs such a shot-in-the-arm. I believe that your efforts go a long way toward keeping alive the constant enthusiasm required for successful theatre selling; you also do a lot to encourage the younger fellows who are breaking into the business.

JULES J. RUBENS

Vice-President
Publix Great States Theatres

I will be very happy to accept the appointment on the 1941 Judging Committee, and at this time want to reiterate —as I have told you many times before—I consider the Quigley Awards a very fine inspirational plan to create the competitive spirit among our managers that does so much to help our box office grosses.

MONROE GREENTHAL

Director of Advertising and Publicity
United Artists Corp.

I will be very happy to serve for the eighth successive year on your Quigley Awards Committee.

This Exploitation Department of yours and its aggregation of outstanding managers, is like a snowball that has been traveling downhill for eight years—it is getting larger and larger until, at the present time, the biggest thing in show business for a motion picture manager is to be a Quigley Award Winner.

This fierce competition is good for all companies and for all pictures.

Long may it continue to spotlight showmanship.

A. C. HAYMAN

Exhibitor
New Lafayette Theatre
Buffalo, N. Y.

It was certainly interesting to know that the 1940 Quigley Awards proved to be the most successful and I, too, am looking forward to the outcome of 1941.

I shall be very happy to accept appointment in the 1941 Judging Committee.

Extra Awards

We are pleased to receive your letter of December 10th advising of the splendid success and progress made in the Quigley Awards.

You can be assured that the executives and managers of Famous Players Canadian Corporation Limited appreciate the opportunity to participate in these Competitions.

As a matter of fact, through the coming year, each Famous Players Canadian Corporation Manager who wins an Award will be given a suitable award by our circuit. This will be our contribution towards encouraging our managers to take advantage of the opportunity given them through the Quigley Awards.

—J. J. FITZGIBBONS, VICE-PRESIDENT, FAMOUS PLAYERS CANADIAN CORPORATION, TORONTO, CANADA.

J. R. VOGEL

General Theatres Executive
Loew Theatres

The Managers' Round Table, under your able direction, has done much to make our men in the field publicity conscious. I shall be happy to again be placed on your Judging Committee.

J. J. O'CONNOR

I have your letter of December 10th, and will be very happy to serve on the 1941 Judging Committee of The Quigley Awards.

HARRY L. GOLD

Vice-President

LEONARD H. GOLDENSON

Paramount Theatres Service Corp.
New York

I have your letter of December 12th with respect to your invitation to serve on the Judging Committee of the Quigley Awards for the year 1941.

It is a genuine pleasure to serve in that capacity, especially in view of the fine stimulating work you are doing for the industry generally and for theatre showmen particularly. You are accomplishing something which I feel is important, namely, national recognition for small and large town theatre managers who have little or no opportunity otherwise to gain such recognition.

CALL COMPETITIONS INSPIRATIONAL

Grosses Aided

As in previous years, it is a real pleasure for me to be one of the board of judges for the Quigley Awards of 1941. I have said before, but it is worthy of repetition, that I know of no project in our business that has done more to keep real showmanship alive than the competition between the members of the Managers' Round Table. It is always stimulating to read the reports of their activities in the Motion Picture Herald, but it is little short of amazing to look over the blue ribbon campaigns once a year and see the tremendous scope of their splendid business-building exploitation. As a distributor, I know our grosses are aided immeasurably by the work these men do. If I were seeking a theatre manager, I would certainly want a Quigley Award winner.—NED E. DEPINET, VICE-PRESIDENT, RKO RADIO PICTURES.

E. C. GRAINGER

President
Shea Theatre Corp.

I received your letter about the Quigley Awards for 1941—and as an Operator of approximately fifty theatres, I think you might be interested in knowing the great interest that is displayed by the Managers on our Circuit, in the Quigley Awards.

The Managers all take great pride in seeing their work recognized and commented on, and they all take great interest in other Manager's work and I am sure that each and every theatre Manager, as well as General Manager gets a lot of good out of the Quigley Awards and the Manager's Round Table, sponsored by the Motion Picture Herald. Thank you for asking me to cooperate with the Quigley Awards by accepting an appointment on the Judging Committee. I accept your invitation and will be glad to serve.

G. RALPH BRANTON

General Manager
Tri-States Theatre Corp.
Des Moines, Iowa

I have your letter of December 9th notifying me that I have again been selected as a Judge for the selection of the 1941 Awards. With kindest personal regards, and thanking you immensely for selecting me to act on this Committee, I am,

J. J. UNGER

Eastern and Canadian Division Sales Manager
Paramount Pictures, Inc.

I was very pleased to receive your letter of December 11, in which you advise that Quigley Awards for 1940 have proven to be the most successful yet, and I wish for you and your publication even greater success in 1941.

I shall deem it a privilege to accept the appointment on the 1941 Judging Committee, and I want to express again at this time the very firm belief that these awards serve a worthy purpose in stimulating better grosses, and in bringing recognition to the men on the firing lines.

W. F. RODGERS

General Sales Manager
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures

Thank you for your letter of December 11th, inviting me to serve on your committee, and this, of course, I will be glad to do.

Without my telling you, you know full well how much I value this stimulating method of recognizing outstanding showmen, and it is a genuine pleasure to learn that you are again offering these awards that the theatre managers throughout the country may be in active competition with each other for this method of recognition for unusual efforts.

ARTHUR W. KELLY

Vice-President in Charge of Domestic Distribution
United Artists Corp.

This is to acknowledge your letter of December 12th and to tell you I will be happy to accept your invitation to be one of the judges on the Committee for 1941.

I am, of course, honored to be asked to continue to serve on the 1941 judging committee of the Quigley Awards. There is nothing that I can add to what I have frequently written to you relative to the merits of this competition. It is "tops" in its field.

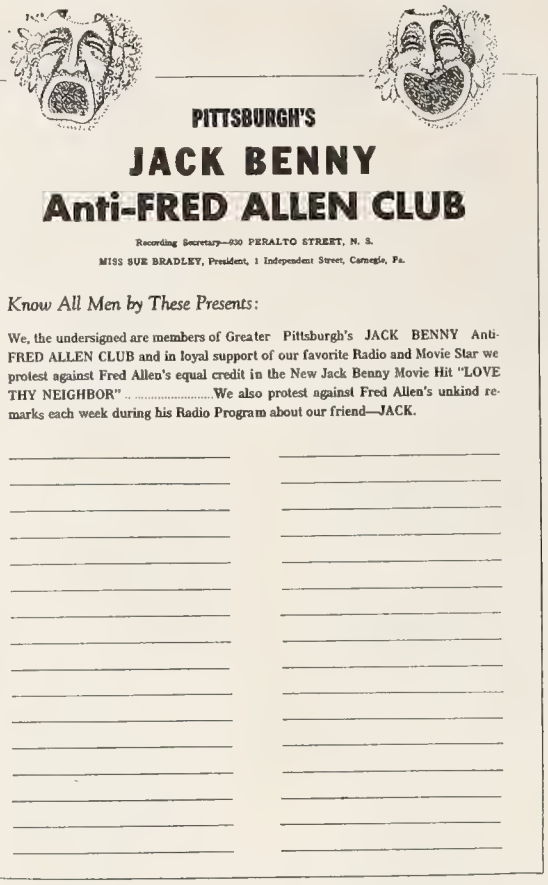
Replying to your letter of the 10th, I shall be very happy to again serve on the Judging Committee of the Quigley Awards, this time for 1941.

Schools Tied to 'Land of Liberty'

The unusual honor of holding a world premiere was turned into a civic event at Williamsport, Pa., on the booking of "Land of Liberty" at the Rialto, campaign executed by Manager William P. Wilson. Emphasizing the importance of the school tieins, Wilson arranged with the superintendent of schools to call a meeting of all principals and urge them to support the picture in school assemblies, classrooms and on bulletin boards. During the three-day run of the film, each day was set aside for a different section of the school body.



Proclamation was issued by Mayor L. C. Williamson, designating "Land of Liberty" days during the run. In addition his honor wrote a letter of thanks to the manager which was used for newspaper publicity. For the premiere itself, a parade to the theatre was staged featuring the local Junior American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps. The band gave a short concert in front of the theatre. Inside, a girls' color guard on the stage preceded the filming of the picture, while the lobby was dressed in red, white and blue motif.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Fraser's "Boom Town" Ads

Since the advertising department of his local paper had little time to spend outside of their regular routine, George S. Fraser's suggestion for a double truck on "Boom Town" at the Columbia, Portsmouth, Ohio was turned down. However, undaunted, the theatreman went out and sold the ads himself, and injected a contest angle for passes. Each merchants' ad carried a small part of a scene still, complete picture of which was featured at top of page. Prizes went to those fitting the pieces together correctly.

BURNETT FEATURES FEUD FOR "LOVE THY NEIGHBOR"

PITTSBURGH'S

JACK BENNY

Anti-FRED ALLEN CLUB

Recording Secretary—930 PERALTO STREET, N. S.

MISS SUE BRADLEY, President, 1 Independent Street, Carnegie, Pa.

Know All Men by These Presents:

We, the undersigned are members of Greater Pittsburgh's JACK BENNY Anti-FRED ALLEN CLUB and in loyal support of our favorite Radio and Movie Star we protest against Fred Allen's equal credit in the New Jack Benny Movie Hit "LOVE THY NEIGHBOR" .....We also protest against Fred Allen's unkind remarks each week during his Radio Program about our friend—JACK.

As an angle for the date on "Love Thy Neighbor" at Loew's Penn, Pittsburgh, Manager Martin C. Burnett drew up a petition as reproduced above to capitalize upon the publicity feud between Jack Benny and Fred Allen. Petitions were circulated around town under the supposed auspices of an outside organization, with care taken not to tip the idea by elimination of theatre credits in the copy.

"I'm Still Alive" Says Safety Card

Hooked to a traffic drive, the date on "I'm Still Alive" at the Strand, Alliance, Ohio, was tied in by Milt Korach, publicity head, with a series of "safety first" cards which did a good job for the picture as well. Headed "Read This and Live," the copy went on to say:

"I'm Still Alive, Because:

I don't crash red lights when driving. . . .

I don't drive a car when intoxicated. . . .

I don't try to be a road hog. . . . I don't speed endangering my own life and others. . . . I don't carelessly pull around ahead of another car. . . . I obey all traffic laws, city, county and state. . . . I enjoy living, my automobile is part of my happiness and I don't treat it as a death trap."

The reasons were listed in a column and before each "I," the "because" was repeated in capitals. Theatre copy following included a one-column ad cut where the title was repeated to tie in with the "safety."

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Rosenthal Builds Campaign Around Gloria Jean Personal

Booked in for opening day of "A Little Bit of Heaven" at the Majestic, in Bridgeport, Morris Rosenthal centered his campaign around the personal appearance of Gloria Jean. Starting with one column art and stories week ahead, publicity was built up to full page of co-op ads, color art and stories in all papers.

Concentrating on the kids, Rosie distributed heralds to schools advertising after school parties and announcing that autographed photos of the star would be given by Miss Jean after the 5:00 o'clock show. In addition, cards were placed on all bulletin boards and announcements made over high school p.a. systems calling attention to the star's "personal."

Opening day news photographers were on hand to greet the star at the station. Boys with welcome banners paraded ahead of car which drove Gloria Jean to local community chest luncheon, which was also good for art and stories.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Theatre and Oil Company Celebrate Anniversary

A timely and successful co-op tie-up consumated in St. Louis was that aranged for "Boom Town" by J. E. Harris, Loew's publicity man. With local oil company celebrating its 20th anniversary and the Loew house its 16th, Harris arranged for the distribution of 150,000 four-page circulars through the dealer stations and on street cars and busses. The circulars carried copy on both the oil concern and the theatre on the front page and featured a large "Boom Town" ad spread over the inside pages. In addition, all of the oil company's trucks were appropriately bannered and all stations displayed one-sheet cards.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS

As a teaser stunt on "You'll Find Out," Cliff Boyd at the Paramount, in Brattleboro, Vt., distributed visiting cards with message printed in Norwegian at the top. Center of card read: If you can't read this, telephone 484, "You'll Find out." Message in Norwegian when translated said: "It's a merry, mad musical mystery you won't want to miss." Similar ad was run in local daily.

PENNY SERENADE (Col.)

Marriage Drama

Produced and directed by George Stevens. Story by Martha Cheavens appeared in serial form in McCall's Magazine. Screen play by Morrie Ryskind.

SYNOPSIS

The trials and tribulations of marriage in which one of the principals is a newspaperman are depicted here. The story opens on a sad note. The couple's six-year-old daughter has died. Roger Adams (Cary Grant), the newspaperman, drowns his sorrow in drink, while his wife Julie (Irene Dunne), now that the child is gone, determines to divorce him.

As she leaves, she notices the record, "Penny Serenade," the tune that had started their romance. She pauses to play it and the story cuts back to the day Roger first came into the music store where Julie and her roommate, Maizie (Ann Doran), worked. In love at first sight, Roger keeps Julie playing records long after the store closes.

Their romance grows and the months roll by. At Julie's New Year Eve party, Roger is late. Trying to console her, Applejack (Edgar Buchanan), a woman-hating lintoype operator, advises Julie that Roger isn't the marrying kind. But Roger arrives and forthwith takes Julie to a Justice of the Peace for he has been transferred to the Tokyo bureau. Julie learns she must wait three months before she can join him in Tokyo.

They are reunited in Tokyo where Roger is heavily in debt. Julie pays the bills with her travelers' checks. Later, when they are having their first quarrel, an earthquake occurs. She loses the baby.

In California sometime later and after many disappointments, happiness reigns once again for the Adamses. Roger, with the help of Applejack, is running a country newspaper and Roger and Julie have adopted a girl. This state lasts for five years when a fatal illness takes the girl from them and Roger starts his drinking.

Julie is standing beside the phonograph playing "Penny Serenade' when Roger enters tired and with a hangover. They begin talking and soon are planning for the future, together.

Directed by Ray Enright. Suggested by a story by Francis Wallace. Screen play by Fred Niblo, Jr., and Barry Trivers.

SYNOPSIS

Owner of a cheap carnival company, the cynical Nick Coster (Humphrey Bogart) has four soft spots in an otherwise hard personality. They are his carnival, the fortune teller, Flo (Sylvia Sidney); his lions and his young sister Mary (Joan Leslie).

At one of the towns the carnival visits, Hentyville, one of the lions escapes. He heads for Matt Varney's (Eddie Albert) general store, where on his arrival the lone customer faints. The simple-minded Matt picks up a pitchfork and holds the lion at bay until help arrives. Nick offers Matt a job with the carnival. He replaces Hoffman the Great (Sig Rumann), fired for drunkeness.

Some weeks later Hoffman, drunk and raging, appears at the carnival and in a fight with Matt falls into the lion cage and is severely clawed. Nick, believing that Hoffman is dying, rushes Flo and Matt into an auto and drives to his farm, where Matt falls in love with Mary. Nick objects and takes Matt back to the show. Later Matt returns to the farm which infuriates Nick. The carnival owner plans to get rid of Matt entirely.

Nick forces Matt to work Caesar, the mad lion, but Matt conquers the beast after a terrific struggle. In the dressing room later Hoffman is threatening Matt with a gun when Nick enters and shoots Hoffman, killing him. But Nick receives a fatal wound. NICE GIRL (Universal)

Comedy, Music

Produced by Joe Pasternak. Directed by William Seiter. Adapted from the play by Phyllis Duganne. Screen play by Richard Connell and Gladys Lehman.

SYNOPSIS

Localed in Stillwater, Conn., in the present, the story opens with Professor Oliver Dana (Robert Benchley), principal of the high school, finishing a treatise on diet. Cora Foster (Helen Broderick), a spinster, is Dana's housekeeper and helps him, a widower, care for his three daughters. Cora has a suitor, Hector Titus (Walter Brennan), town postman.

Sylvia (Anne Gwynne), the oldest daughter, considers herself a great actress. Nancy (Ann Gillis), the youngest, is the village vampire at 12.

Jane (Deanna Durbin), the second daughter, considered a typical "nice girl" has tired of the role. Her boy friend is Don Webb (Robert Stack), who is mechanically inclined and more interested, on the surface at least, in automobiles than in Jane.

So it is that when Richard Calvert (Franchot Tone), a young scientist, comes to Stillwater to talk to Oliver, Jane decides to make a play for Richard. She drives him to his apartment in New York. The family is out and Richard has the butler serve sandwiches and champagne, meanwhile changing to something "comfortable." Jane, in his absence, dons a pair of his sister's red pajamas.

When Richard fails to react to Jane's attentions she leaves the apartment, telling Richard that she is going to stay at the Y. W. C. A. around the corner but drives to Stillwater instead. She is delayed by rains and does not arrive at Stillwater until early morning. Her entry into her house at that early hour and in lurid pajamas is noticed by the neighborhood.

That night at a charity bazaar, Jane is a sensation. In the excitement she tells Don that she has become engaged to Richard. When Richard returns to Stillwater to visit Oliver Jane gets him to pretend that they are engaged. A fake elopement is arranged and as Jane had hoped Don, awaking at last, strenuously protests. Jane agrees to marry Don, just as news arrives that he has been conscripted.

In Edmond, Okla., Fred Groff, a present-day Luther Burbank, demonstrates his new vegetable and flower creations; a new technical achievement, rubber hydrochloride, is shown; the Chemical Engineering Division of the Department of Agriculture solves the mysteries of industrial dust explosions, and contact lenses prove a new factor in facial makeup. As usual, the Wily Wizard of Waukesha is on hand with another cockeyed invention.
